Poetry.

Summer Holiday Thoughts.

I wish I were a flower to sway
In some sweet field, where a stream was flowing;
To have no lesson at all to say,
But to watch how the white clouds floated away,
And sweetened the sweet winds blowing.

I'd like to sail with the breeze, and blow
Through the wide blue skies, where the clouds run races;
To strew the orchards with summer snow,
And murmur a lullaby, soft and low
In the quiet and shady places.

I think that flowers can see—don't you?
And the soft white clouds, I am sure, are playing;
The wind can talk to the grasses, too,
For I've listened and watched, and I'm sure they do;
I almost can tell what they are saying.

And when I sit in the fields, and see
The long grass when the breezes blow it,
I'm just as glad as a girl can be;
And the daisies are glad, too, it seems to me,
And nod their heads to show it.

Miscellany.

ALL A MISTAKE.

"I dare say, all my relatives will think it very silly of me," said Miss Maroon. "But I really think I am quite old and experienced enough to manage these affairs for myself. And I've heard of a great many happy marriages that have been arranged just in this way. To be sure, it is running a risk; but, after all, life is a lottery, and one has to take things as they come, in this world."

Miss Malvina Maroon (generally known as "Mally" by her friends and acquaintances) was sitting in a very stiff backed chair, in the best room of the little country tavern at Infield-on-the-Hudson. The stage had been in for an hour at least, and Miss Maroon was tired of waiting. She had chirped to the thrush in his cage, counted all the little red balls on the Jerusalem cherry tree in the window, and looked at the picture of the "Signing of the Declaration of Independence" until she knew every wig and buckled shoe by heart, and still nobody had come to meet her. She was beginning to feel a little uneasy at this unexpected delay. The landlord had peeped at her, under pretence of coming to fill up the big stone pitcher with fresh cabbage roses; the landlady had courtesied at the door, and asked her if she should cook a little piece of steak or a dish of brook trout for her dinner.

"I don't expect to be here to dinner," said Miss Maroon, with dignity.

"Oh!" said the landlady,

"My friends will doubtless be here to meet me in a very few minutes," explained Miss Maroon, glancing at the clock.

"Ah!" said the landlady.

But this was where Miss Maroon had intrenched somewhat on the strict truth. She had no friends at Infield-on-the-Hudson. She had come there—under our breath be it spoken—with the desperate resolve to answer a matrimonial advertisement. She had seen it in the paper. She had read it twice over and rather liked the way in which it was worded. She had asked herself, "Why not?" and echo has returned no unfavorable response. And she had, so to speak, taken her fate into her own hands and come boldly to Infield-on-the-Hudson.

But now, as the moments sped by, she was beginning to wax secretly uneasy. Suppose there should be any mistake? Suppose the advertiser should be "suited" already? Suppose any number of awkward circumstances to have interposed themselves in the way of her welfare? But just as she was beginning to make herself thoroughly uncomfortable, there came a tap, tap at the door, and in walked a stout, short man with a red necktie and a countenance to match!

"Lady from New York?" said this personage, without the least embarrassment.

Miss Maroon rose with dignity. "Yes, sir," said she.

He was not exactly aristocratic looking. There was no mistake about that. He wore no gloves, and his hands were stumpy and freckled—his hair stuck up like the bristles of the fretful porcupine, and his face, although good natured, bore in it no trace of ancient blood or lofty lineage! But Miss Maroon bethought herself of the old proverb about the deceitfulness of appearances, and plucked up spirit.

"You saw the advertisement, I suppose?" said the stout man.

"I did, sir," said Miss Maroon.

"Think you'll suit?" questioned the stout man.

"Sir?" said Miss Maroon.

"Because he's a little peculiar," explained the man; "and it ain't everybody meets his views', you see!"

"Oh!" said Miss Maroon, a light breaking in upon her darkness, "then you are not the party himself?"

"Oh, no," said the stout man. "No; I'm the business man! I settle everything for him."

"I should prefer negotiating with principals," said Miss Maroon, drawing herself up.

"It's the usual way we does it," remarked her interlocutor, picking a broom splint from the floor, and beginning to chew it.

"The usual way?" repeated Miss Maroon, more puzzled than ever. "May I ask how often the—the gentleman has been married before?"

"Never been married in his life," said the stout man. "Circumstances was against it, you see."

"Oh!" said Miss Maroon.

"He ain't hard to manage," said the stout man. "Them as he takes a fancy to can do most anything with him."

Miss Maroon cast down her eyes and simpered at this.

"Did you bring any references?" said the stout man, abruptly.

"References!" echoed Miss Maroon.

"Ever had any experience?" he went on.

"Sir!" said Miss Maroon. "I really don't quite understand"—

"Your age seems quite suitable," said the man. "I calculate you're about 40, ain't you? We couldn't give you many holidays, nor Sundays out, but for a good, reg'lar, steady place"—

"Stop," cried Miss Maroon, "do stop! I don't at all know what you're talking about. Holidays—Sundays out! I'd have you to know that I am no housemaid looking for a place. And as for being 40 years old, my appearance must be very deceptive if you take me for anywhere near that age. I am only six-and-thirty."

"Three or four years one way or the other don't make much difference," remarked the stout man with the bristly hair. "Our last was 60, and she had a pretty tidy notion of her business, too, only,"—

Miss Maroon looked surprised.

"I thought I understood you to say that the gentleman had never been married," said she.

"No more he has," said the man. "I ain't talking about wives. I'm talking about nurses."

"What!" cried Miss Maroon.

The stout man looked hard at her for a minute or two; then he plunged his hand deep down into his coat pocket and extracted thence a slip cut from a newspaper.

"It's all writ down here in black and white, plain enough," said he:

"Wanted, an experienced and trustworthy attendant for a gentleman of infirm mind. To the right person a liberal remuneration will be offered. Apply on Wednesday next between the hours of 10 and 1 at the Wedgewood house, Infield-on-the-Hudson.

"You see," he added, as he refolded the paper and returned it to his pocket, "we didn't exactly like to put it down in the paper as he was a crazy man."

"But that isn't the advertisement I saw at all," said Miss Maroon, growing alternately pale and red in her consternation.

"It was in The Daily Visitor," said the stout man, "as we put our notice."

"And it was The Morning Patriot that I saw," cried Miss Maroon. "A Mr. Delano St. John, of St. Johnsgrove, Infield-on-the-Hudson, who wanted"—

"A wife," said the stout man, with twinkling eyes. "I thought so! I seen his carriage go by half an hour ago, with a pretty little black eyed woman, in cherry colored ribbons and"——

"And Rob Roy plaid polonaise?" almost screamed Miss Maroon. "And a black parasol lined with scarlet?"

"Some sort of a rig of that description," said the stout man.

"The bold, pert, unfeminine thing!" said Miss Maroon, vehemently fanning herself. "I've seen her, this long time, walking up and down the piazza! She's the very one that came down in the stage with me! And here she has whisked off with the advertising man, and left me all alone and deserted!"

"She's got the clear start of you, it seems," said the stout man, as he rose up and looked around for his hat. "Well, if you don't like the idea of my situation"——

"I decline it most certainly," said Miss Maroon, precipitately. "Landlady!"

"It would not be such a bad idea," coaxed the stout man, "if"——

"Landlady!" repeated Miss Maroon, more energetically than ever. And the stout man went out, thrusting his hands into his pockets as he did so. The landlady bustled in.

"A carriage, please, to the railway depot," said Miss Maroon.

"Won't you wait for the stage, ma'am?" said the landlady. "It'll be along in half an hour."

"I wouldn't stay here another five minutes for all the gold of Golconda," said Miss Maroon.

So the rickety one horse chaise of the establishment was geared up, and Miss Maroon, shedding secret tears of vexation and disappointment behind her veil, went back. And when her nephews and nieces asked about her sudden journey to Infield-on-the-Hudson, she told them that she had been to look for summer board.

"And weren't you suited, auntie, dear?" said the youngest and prettiest of nieces, who had seen The Morning Patriot, with the printed slip missing from the list of advertisements, and could put two and two together as well as any one.

And Miss Maroon answered, sharply, that she was not suited at all.

Saved by His Wife's Ready Wit.

The Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke, the popular Episcopal clergyman of Chicago made a bad break the other day, but was helped out by the quick wit of his wife.

On the day in question he saw a lady about to call whom he was anxious not to meet. So he said to his wife: "Now I'm off, my dear. I'll run upstairs and escape till she goes away."

After about an hour he quietly tiptoed to the stair landing and listened. All was quiet below. Reassured, he began to descend, and while doing so, he thoughtlessly but emphatically called out over the baluster:

"Well, my dear, has that old bore gone at last?"

The next instant a voice from below caused the perspiration to bedew his ministerial brow and rooted him to the spot. Then came a response which sounded inexpressibly sweet to him just then. It was the voice of his wife, who, with true womanly tact, replied:

"Yes, darling; she went away over an hour ago, but here is our dear good friend, Mrs. Blank, whom I am sure you want very much to meet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Freight Train Blockaded.

That was a singular cause for delay that blocked a freight train on the great Pennsylvania railroad a few days since. The train was under headway, and moving at usual speed through the outskirts of a town, when a cloud of bees appeared in its neighborhood, and soon began to settle upon the cab of the locomotive. The pertinacity and determination of the little creatures, as well as their savageness when opposed while swarming, are well known to most people; and this swarm found no exception; but, having chosen that particular place for their operations, they would not be said nay. Speedily the engineer found it necessary to stop his train right there; and himself and fireman took to their heels and ran away from the train, leaving the bees conquerors. Their owner appeared upon the scene and captured the swarm, which contained upwards of a bushel of the insects.

Chinese workmen who labor at the looms making matting consider themselves lucky if they earn five cents a day by hard work.

How to Kill Your Town.

Buy of pedlers as often and as much as possible.

Denounce your merchants because they make a profit on their goods.

Glory in the downfall of a man who has done much to build up the town.

Make your town out a very bad place and stab it every chance you get.

Refuse to unite in any scheme for the betterment of the material interests of the people.

Don't join the Commercial Club because it is making every honorable effort to build up every interest of the city.

Tell your merchants that you can buy goods a good deal cheaper in some other town and charge them with extortion.

If a stranger comes to your town tell him everything is overdone and predict a general crash in the town in the near future.

Keep up divided public sentiment on the best method of increasing business.

When you have anything to say of your town say it in such a way that it will leave the impression that you have no faith in it.

Patronize outside newspapers to the exclusion of your own, and then denounce yours for not being as large and cheap as the big city papers.

If you are a merchant don't advertise in the home paper, but buy a rubber stamp and use it. It may save you a few dimes and make your letter heads and wrapping paper look like as though you were doing business in a one-horse town.

If you are a farmer, curse the place where you trade as the meanest on earth. Talk this to your neighbors and tell them the business men are robbers and thieves. It will make your property much less valuable but then you don't care.

For a Girl's Summer Trunk.

If you wear a fluffy bang, you want your alcohol lamp.

If you wear laced shoes, you want a dozen pairs of shoe-strings.

If you varnish or polish your shoes, you want a new bottle of blacking.

If you are inclined to sunburn, you want a pot of strawberry cream or some cold cream.

If you are fond of reading, you want your favorite books.

If you ever use pins, you want a block of black ones and a paper of white ones.

If you are a good girl and mend your clothes, you want some spools of thread, your needles, your thimble and some buttons.

If you make yourself sweet with infant-powder and a puff, you want a sealed package of powder.

If you use bonnet pins to fasten on your hat, you want a dozen of them.

If you are inclined to be ill-tempered and petulant, you want unlimited patience.

If you are inclined to be careless and inconsiderate, you want a very large package of energy and friendliness.

And if you are lacking in politeness, then you want to remember that surely she who claims to be a Christian, must, before everything else, be gentle in her manners.—From the Ladies' Home Journal.

The Old General's Tale.

There is an old general in this town, says a Washington correspondent of a contemporary, married to a young and handsome wife, who delights in entertaining an after-dinner company with stories of his prowess, sagacity and foresight during the war whenever the opportunity presents itself. To listen to him, one would imagine that the ultimate success of the union arms was all due to him, and that the share Grant, or Sherman, or Sheridan had in the matter was a comparatively small one. One of his stories always begins:

"When I was down in the wilderness with Grant in '64"—

That's usually the signal for half the company to leave the room, but it doesn't interrupt the old general in the least. He would go on talking and finishing his story were no one present and only the four walls there to listen to his wonderful tale.

"Mamma," said the little seven-year-old daughter of the general the other day having listened on the stairs to the old story which her father had just concluded in the dining-room to a company of guests, "Mamma, wasn't there anybody to help papa put down the rebellion? There must have been some awfully mean men in those days."

Marriage Made Easy.

A number of ladies and gentlemen were assembled at dinner to celebrate a friend's wedding. After the banquet, a young barrister got up to propose a matrimonial scheme, which was at once adopted. A president was elected who was pledged to eternal secrecy by a solemn oath. All unmarried persons of either sex wrote each on a piece of paper his own name and that of the person whom he desired to marry. The papers were handed to the president, a man of mature age, married and grave as became his office. It was his duty to acquaint the two parties who had mutually selected each other. Result: Eleven couples thus had the opportunity of confessing their feelings to one another for the first time, and a month later eight weddings came off. The others followed in a short time. Eccentric, but the end justifies the means.—Le Monde Pittoresque.

Postponing the Battle.

A bright suburban youngster in kilts, who for some time has been promised his first trousers, came across a setting hen at his home the other day. The aroused chicken made for the boy, pecked his legs, flapped him generally, but not without frequent courageous stands and returns from the boy. Once he screamed. Then he cried and kicked, then he ran again with the chicken tugging at his kilts. And so the battle went on until the urchin was driven indoors. But no sooner had he reached a place of safety than he turned on his feathered pursurer with tears in his eyes and passion in his voice, and shaking his fist threateningly he cried:

"You just wait till I wear pants; I'll kill you."—Kansas City Times.

It is said that the Pennsylvania railroad has concluded, after a thorough trial of the different ways of advertising, that nothing pays so large returns as straight newspaper announcements and the policy of that great corporation in advertising matters, in the future, will be governed by what has been learned through careful investigation. The circular can never take the personal interest in advertisers that is taken by the newspaper, or receive the friendship of readers that the newspaper enjoys.

A Pickle that was not Eaten.

"My most embarrassing experience," repeated the young lady thoughtfully. "Well, as nearly as I can remember, it was connected with a pickle. I was guest at a dinner in Washington. It was not a very formal affair—merely formal enough for the gentlemen present to wear evening dress. There was a dish of dainty pickles near me, and I took one—a baby cucumber. It was about big enough for two bites, and I tried to cut it with my fork, when suddenly it launched itself like a skyrocket across the table and struck the immaculate shirt bosom of a very particular swell opposite, fairly in the middle.

"I don't quite know how it could have happened so fortunately, but conversation had been going on so briskly that no one save the man who had taken me in to dinner saw who was the author of the accident. I never blush, a fact, I trust, not to be set down seriously to my discredit, and I managed to so skilfully dissemble otherwise that nobody, with the exception I have mentioned, suspected me at all.

"None of the other guests were so ill-bred as to take visible notice of the occurrence, and the talk went on almost uninterrupted, while my victim administered surreptitious wipes to his manly chest in a hopeless attempt to remove the stains of pickle. To this day I am unsuspected as the author of the mischief."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Grant's China.

When General U. S. Grant was plain Mr. Grant and lived in Galena, Ill., the ladies of that place gave a series of tea parties. The Grants were comparatively new people there and were invited to all of them. Soon the invited guests returned the compliment to their entertainers. Mr. Grant noticed that his wife was much distressed about something at that time, and finally she told her husband that she was worried because she could not give a tea party as her neighbors had done.

"But why not, my dear?" asked her husband, who, manlike, never thought of household details.

"I have no china tea set," answered Mrs. Grant, "and could never think of giving a tea party without nice china."

A few days after the conversation Mr. Grant told his wife that she would soon be able to give her tea party.

"I dreamed last night," he said with his usual grim humor, "that we were surrounded with the most beautiful china dishes; they covered the whole landscape as far as I could see, and you stood in their midst admiring them."

The very next day Grant's order to report at headquarters was received, and Mrs. Grant's fondness for fine china soon had a chance to be gratified. She has possibly forgotten the circumstances, but the neighbor to whom she related the incident has a lively remembrance of it. And, strangely enough, dreaming of china is said to betoken a sudden rise in life and extreme good fortune.—Detroit Free Press.

Rose Jars.

Measure out four quarts of fragrant rose leaves. Pack them in an earthen dish in layers with salt, using a small handful of fine salt to three of rose leaves; keep them five days, turning them twice daily. Add to this mixture an ounce of powdered allspice and two ounces of powdered cinnamon. Let this mixture stand one week longer, turning it daily. Now put the preparation into the permanent jar, mixing with it one ounce of allspice, half a pound of dried lavendar flowers, an ounce of bruised cloves, one ounce of stick cinnamon, one nutmeg coarsely grated, half a cup of ginger root thinly sliced and two ounces of orris root. Stir all the ingredients thoroughly together and put them in a jar of suitable size. Occasionally add a few drops of attar of rose, or any essential oil or extract of flowers. Every morning, after airing and brushing out the living room and dusting it, open the rose jar for half an hour, and a delightful odor will be diffused through the room. A portion of this potpourri mixture may be dried and used with hair to fill a summer slumber roll for the back of a chair.

A Handsome Window.

Almy, Bigelow & Washburn of Salem display in their huge show window a perfectly-proportioned and fully-rigged ship, resting upon a sea of lace. The ship is rigged brig-fashion, is about ten feet long, and is constructed wholly and entirely of the finest and costliest laces taken from their stock. It is named the "Water Witch" and hails from "Salem." The hull is covered with point gauze lace, with decks and houses of the same, mainsail, and top-sail of oriental flouncings, staysails and jibs of Chantilly, ropes, shrouds, stays and spars of German Valenciennes. The sea is of white cotton maline over blue cambric, sky of Platt Valenciennes, with a background of Irish point draperies. The ship rises and falls with the heavy swells, and a revolving light in the lighthouse off the starboard bow flashes out its red signal at 10-second intervals.—Beverly Citizen.

The Art of Resting.

In addition to the good night's sleep, it is a good plan to take a short nap in the middle of the day. It divides the working time, gives the nervous system a fresh hold on life, and enables one to more than make up for the time so occupied. It is well to guard against too long a sleep at such a time, since such is apt to produce disagreeable relaxation. There has been much discussion regarding the after-dinner nap. Many believe it to be injurious; but it is, nevertheless, natural and wholesome. Much can be accomplished in the way of resting, short of sleep. It is very important to economize the opportunities for rest during working hours in the day. The great principle which underlies daily rest is relieving of one portion of the organization from duty while the others are at work. This can be done to a great extent.

Our Daily Life.

It is the daily life that tests us—the manner of men we are. It is not our prayers, it is not our profession, but it is the tone of daily intercourse and conduct that decides how we stand. The homely graces; the cheerful, every day amemities; the Christ spirit uttering itself not so much in conscious act as in unconscious influence; not so much in deeds as in that subtle aroma which, without name, exudes from the saintly soul to equals and inferiors, to agreeable and disagreeable, to rich, poor, ignorant; to young, to old; bearing burdens, accepting crosses, seeking no great thing to do, content to put self by, and be a servant of the lowest—these are the fruits of only one root—fruits that none may counterfeit.—Ware.

A Handsome Fountain.

Workmen commenced on Thursday morning to excavate for the foundation to the large and handsome fountain which is to be erected at the junction of Hancock and Washington streets. It is to be set close to the grass plat, near where the two hydrants have stood, and will partly, if not entirely, destroy the pretty little green plat, which has attracted so much attention the past two or three years.

The fountain is of Quincy granite, very large and handsome, and has been manufactured by McKenzie & Paterson, of this city, in a manner very creditable to the firm.

The plumbing, to ensure care and convenience in regard to the water, should be of the best. There is a desire expressed by some, that it should be so arranged that cold drinking water could be had during the summer months. But as no money has been raised to meet the extra expense it will cost, there is a doubt as to what will be decided upon; unless some public citizens send in contributions already promised. But we hope considering so much money has been expended on this fountain, to make it beautiful as well as useful, that this last necessity will not be neglected.

A Coaching Party.

The Young Ladies' Whist Club organized last fall with the intention of passing the winter in a social way, meeting every other Friday night for a game of scientific whist. At the first meeting one of those "horrid boys" had the audacity to call on the hostess while the club was in session, but he was immediately dismissed. Since then the boys have kept away and contented themselves with writing poetry dedicated to the club, presenting a whist calendar, etc.

At the final meeting of the club it was decided that the rules could be set aside for once and the young men thought of. Accordingly, a coaching party was decided upon and the young men invited. Mr. Crane's handsome drag and six spirited horses from Milton, conveyed the lively party to Downers Wednesday evening.

The party consisted of Miss Newcomb, Miss McPhail, Miss Bown, Miss Litchfield, Miss Campbell, Miss Badger, Miss Nellie Nightingale, Mies Tillie Nightingale, Miss Kittredge, Miss Prescott, Miss Souther, Miss Mary Souther; Mr. Kincaide, Mr. Adams, Mr. Page, Mr. Badger, Mr. Miller, Mr. Moon, Mr. Drake, Mr. Brown, Mr. Prescott, Mr. French, Mr. Crane and Mr. Holden.

Convention.

The seventh annual convention of the National Editorial Association will be held at St. Paul, Minn., commencing on Tuesday, July 14, and continuing to the 18th. Delegates from the various press associations in Massachusetts have been elected, and will leave Boston in a special drawing room car, on Friday, next. Among the delgates is George W. Prescott of this city, who will be accompanied by his daughter, Miss Annie L. Prescott.

The delegates and ladies expect to arrive in Chicago on Sunday morning, where they will rest until the next morning, when they leave for St. Paul. On their way to that city they will stop at Madison, Wis., where a reception will be tendered the party by the Governor and city officials.

At the close of the convention at St. Paul a grand excursion has been arranged to take as many of the delegates and ladies as desire to the Yellowstone Park. This excursion will occupy about ten days and will give the party a fine opportunity to see the wonderful hot springs within the limits of the National Park, which have not their equal in grandeur in the world.

More Trains.

It was pretty well noised about through the medium of the DAILY LEDGER that Quincy would have additional trains Wednesday and considerable many availed themselves of them, more than one would have thought for the first day. It only showed they were actually needed.

The PATRIOT man was at the Quincy station Wednesday and talked with passengers and train men. A young lady who is employed in Boston said the 7.58 inward just suited her; it was even better than the old schedule, as she did not have to leave home so early. If the 7.31 train should stop it would accommodate her brother better. Others were greatly pleased with the train, and as it makes the run in fourteen minutes, and is due in Boston at 8.12, it will prove a popular train. Not so to the train men, however, for quick time is required. The PATRIOT man told a brakeman that people were pleased to see him, but was answered bluntly that he was not pleased to see them. By actual count 47 passengers took the train at Quincy, while 7 got off.

And there were enough left for the 8.13 train too, and Wollaston patrons, who have complained because they were unable to procure seats, were probably accommodated. It took over one hundred from Quincy.

Next came the 9.15 outward, which is due here at 9.29 and runs to Nantasket, Cohasset, Whitman, Plymouth and all way stations. The PATRIOT man was surprised to see 16 get off and 5 board the train. A passenger who had taken the wrong train at Boston, was able to return to the city by the next extra inward which came along at 9.31, which dropped 6 passengers and took 17 to Boston. Superintendent Allen of the Old Colony came and went on these trains, and saw that they were patronized.

The popular 12 M. outward was among the restored, and it brought out from 30 to 40, and took up 4. The new 12.15 left 13 more.

The 12.31 P. M. inward is, perhaps, less desired than any of the others, and would be appreciated better if fifteen minutes later, or at 1.40. It, however, took five passengers and left eight, and will do even better when well known.

The 3.15 and 4.48 outward and the 3.31 inward will doubtless take and leave passengers.

Rocket an Easy Winner.

H. M. Faxon's Rocket continues to be "cock of the walk," this is among the small craft, adding another first prize of $10 in the Massachusetts regatta off the Harrison Square club house on Tuesday. The summary.

Name and Owner.	Length. ft. in.	Actual time. h. m. s.	Corr'd time. h. m. s.
Rocket, H. M. Faxon	18 05½	1 49 50	1 43 41
Psyche, Frank Gray	19 00	1 53 35	1 48 35
Scamp, C. H. Nute	..	1 53 12	. . . .
Paradox, F. L. Caine	..	Withdrawn.

The race was sailed under the club rules, and each boat was restricted to the use of mainsails.

The daily count of the free delivery letters, papers, etc., has been discontinued at Quincy and throughout the country, as needless red tape. It was some satisfaction to note the increase in Quincy and compare it with other places, but there will probably be counts for short periods now and then.

The distance from the Central Station to the scene of Tuesday morning's fire, is exactly 2 1-27 miles. Considering that the steamer weighs with the supplies and crew something like three and a half tons, the time in which it and the other pieces made the run (seven minutes) is a remarkable performance.

The valuable property situated near the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance office, consisting of a large nice piece of land and two houses, one now known as the Quincy house, and the other on Spear street, occupied by Prof. Wahl, has been sold to the Quincy Hospital Association. We learn that no change is to be made in the property, for the present at least.

Rev. Edward Norton, pastor of the Congregational church, preached a forcible sermon Sunday morning on the evils of lotteries and gambling. It was not aimed at any particular branch but included the Louisiana lottery, the investment societies, the prize packages, chances at church and charitable fairs, stock gambling, etc., etc. It had become a mania which should be checked. The sermon was timely and should have been heard by more.

Work on Miss Floretta Vining's new residence at Stony Beach, which is to replace the one destroyed by fire last March, is progressing rapidly, and, when completed it will be one of the most magnificent private residences at this end of the peninsula. The new home will be ready for occupancy upon Miss Vining's return from Europe in the autumn. She will probably occupy it as a year-round residence, as she is one of those who appreciate the beauties of the country as well in winter as in summer.—Breeze.

Is the Fourth to be stormy also?

Poll tax bills will soon be out; they are a little late this year.

Rev. Sherrard Billings will preach at Christ's church during the summer.

Mr. T. B. Pollard will address the Young Men's meeting on Sunday at 4 P.M

The electric lights will be burned all night tonight. A good idea, Commissioner Ewell.

Mr. Cornelius Kelliher of Union street is laid up with a very sore hand caused by an abscess.

The Women's Relief Corps will have a sociable for the benefit of the Post next Friday night.

Those present were: Miss Sills, Miss Bates, Mrs. West, Mrs. Crehan, Miss Mason, Miss Reaney Miss Davis, Miss Welsh, Miss Wallace, Miss Tarbox, Miss Shunk, Miss Cameron, Miss Esson, Miss Parker, Miss Boyd, Miss Newcomb.

Mrs. E. E. Hall, Edward's hill, gave a five o'clock tea Wednesday, July 1st, in the way of celebrating her birthday. Although several who were invited disappointed the hostess yet a goodly number surrounded the table when the summons was given, and a delightful time was enjoyed over the tempting dishes put before them by the two sweet-looking servingmaids,—Edith Chapman and the daughter of the hostess. May many happy birthdays come to her.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Louis Butler has started a cellar on Intervale street.

Mary A. Spear is home from West Chester, Penn., for the summer.

Igo & Warner begun business as granite contractors this week on Intervale street.

Letter Carrier Williams and wife and Miss Spear go to Cornville, Me., next Monday, for two weeks.

There is some talk of making the telegraph office at South Quincy a Western Union office, and a petition is in circulation among the business men for that purpose. South Quincy is quite a business centre for the granite men, and a Western Union office would be of great benefit to them.

Rev. A. F. Roche has not given up the idea of getting a workingmen's trains to and from Boston. He knows that the Old Colony management will stave it off as long as possible.

There will be a formal hearing at the City Council meeting next Monday evening on the order to widen Water street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain of Middleboro are visiting friends at South Quincy.

Mrs. C. A. Follett and son George returned from North Conway, N. H., on Saturday.

Mrs. A. L. Parkman of Brockton has been visiting her sister, Mrs. C. H. Penniman of South Quincy.

William Kingstree, of South Quincy, returned Monday from a month's trip to Europe. He reports himself in good health and had a good time.

The petition for a Western Union telegraph office at South Quincy has about sixty signatures.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bianchi left Wednesday for New York to spend the Fourth.

Vacation Scheme.

One of the most popular vacation schemes of the season has been inaugurated by the management of the popular steamer John Brooks of the Boston and Portsmouth steamship line.

An arrangement has been completed between Treasurer W. A. McCrillis of the steamship line, and the management of the following hotels whereby patrons of the company are enabled to obtain board for one week for the sum of $12 at any of the following hotels; Pepperell Hotel, Kittery Point, Me.; Hotel Bartlett, Garrison House and Sea Cottage, Long Beach, Me.; Ocean House, Atlantic House and Fairmount House, York Beach, Me.

The above sum also includes a round trip ticket from Boston to any of the above named points, and the offer will hold good during the first two weeks of July. Send for circular to 300 Washington street, Boston.

THE NEW LAW. Contrary to the general belief, any persons convicted of drunkenness twice under the old law in the twelve months preceding his or her last arrest made under the new law can be convicted. It is not necessary that a person should be convicted all three times under the new law.

WEST QUINCY.

Daniel Reynolds has opened livery stable at Brewer's corner.

August A. Weeden has moved into his new house on Nightingale avenue.

It is understood that Mr. Hodges will not open a bakery at Grignon's old stand.

Miss Mary Hayes, of New York, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Daniel Hayes, at West Quincy.

Josiah Leavitt of Concord, N. H., formerly of this city, is visiting his son Charles on Willard street.

The stone work on the new Willard schoolhouse is practically completed, all but two of the stone cutters having been discharged.

Frank Walsh of West Quincy, is at home for the summer months from St. John's Seminary, Brighton. He was ordained a sub-deacon last week.

Funeral services over the remains of Edward Flannigan who died Wednesday, were held at St. Mary's church Friday morning. Mass being celebrated by Rev. Fr. Cuffe.

Mr. James Rapson of Quincy, through whose efforts Matilda Lorendo was rescued from the horrible fate of being burned to death on the afternoon of May 18, 1891, (though she has since died), has been awarded a silver medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society.

The public carriage at the depot has been discontinued.

The stone sheds shut down Wednesday until after the Fourth.

Misses Kate Kinna, Ella Becker and Ethel Sanguinet have gone to Martha's Vineyard, chaperoned by Mrs. Louis Sanguinet, for a four weeks' trip.

Mrs. John Shea and three children are going to Ireland the firstof the month.

The family of Mr. George L. Miller left this week for their summer residence at Rockland, Me.

The St. Mary's will play two games on the Fourth, that in the afternoon being with the Emmets of Brighton. The morning game has not been arranged as yet.

The St. Mary's Sunday School hold a festival in a mammoth tent in the field near the church the Fourth. There will be ice cream, cake, fruit and fancy tables. An interesting operetta entitled "Golden Hair" will be given to the children's choir. Fr. Roche will have charge of the affair.

Dudley Folsom is at Deer Isle, Me., for the summer.

A rock blown from a blast in the quarry of Edward Baker, Monday, tore away one side of McDonnell & Son's engine house.

Sunday Morning Fire.

The alarm from Box 46 at 4 o'clock Sunday morning was for a fire in a small building attached to the rear of P. F. Lacy's old shop on Copeland street now occupied by A. W. Woodward.

The department made good time and had the fire under control before much damage had been done. The fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin.

The Quincy department under Chief Ripley is fast becoming one of the best in the state and the fires are handled in a way that shows the chief is the right man in the right place.

Ogren—Erickson.

The Swedish Baptist church at West Quincy was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday evening, about one hundred guests witnessing the ceremony.

The contracting parties were Miss Edla Erickson and Mr. Charles Ogren. The bride wore a gown of white mull and a bridal veil of white tulle, with a crown of myrtle upon her head. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Miss Mary Anderson was maid of honor, Miss Hannah Jacobs bridesmaid, and Mr. Charles Johnson and Mr. Augustus Jacobs groomsmen.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peter England, pastor of the church.

After the ceremony a reception was held and light refreshments were served to the guests. Music was rendered by an orchestra. The couple were the recipients of a large number of presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogren will reside on Hillside street, West Quincy.

ATLANTIC.

Mr. C. F. Merrick and family will spend the fourth in Lawrence.

Mr. Natt Churchill is visiting friends in Newton.

Quite a number of out-of-town people have sent word they are coming to the lawn party to be given July 11th by the Ladies' Benevolent Society.

The Cadets of Honor held a meeting Thursday evening, at Memorial chapel, and elected the following general officers for the next quarter.

Commander,—Emma Curtin.
Vice Commander,—Beatrice Briggs.
Secretary,—Mabel Drew.
Treasurer,—Mary Melzard.
Guard,—Frank Curtin.

The election was followed by a sociable greatly enjoyed by all.

Local fishermen, of Atlantic, are making some good catches of mackerel.

The electrics on the Neponset route will run on twenty-minute time Saturday.

Work on the repaving of Hancock street will be commenced Monday.

The entrance to the Chemical 2 house, at Atlantic, is being paved.

Friday evening after the stores close at Atlantic, there will be a grand display of fireworks at Frank Hatch's "Buttercup" cottage. D. W. Osborne will have charge of the slow match.

Councilman and Mrs. Rinn mourn the loss of a little two-year-old daughter.

Superintendent Merrick of the Memorial church Sunday school has resigned.

Rednor Coombs of Billings street is on the sick list.

The condition of Capt. C. B. Newton is reported as better, and gaining strength every day.

W. C. Appleton and family of Roxbury have taken the Guild place on Squantum street for the summer.

A party of young misses from Boston were entertained Monday by Mrs. Carter, on Appleton street.

Edward Pope has sold his cat-boat Drift to Ed. Crocker; he has also exchanged his safety for a pug dog.

Mr. Weil and family of Boston Highlands have taken rooms with Mrs. William Wilson on Squantum street for the summer.

The citizens of Atlantic want a fire alarm bell. As it is now they seldom know when there is a fire unless they happen to hear the Wollaston whistle.

St. Ann's church, of Neponset, will hold a picnic at Faulkner's grove, East Milton, on the Fourth.

Children's Sunday at Atlantic.

The postponed Children's Day concert of the Memorial Sunday school was held Sunday evening.

Mr. H. H. Bemis was the pianist and leader of singing. The decorations were arranged by Mr. Nat. Churchill.

The Canton Journal has doned a new dress throughout, bonnet and all, and presents a very neat and attractive appearance. We are pleased to see this evidence of prosperity and extend our congratulations and best wishes foı a continuance of success.

A SALARY with expenses paid will come handy to anyone who is now out of employment, especially where no previous experience is required to get the position. If you want a position, see advertisement on page 2 headed, "A chance to make Money."

WOLLASTON.

Farrington continues to hold the Wollaston tennis bowl, having beat Thursday.

"There is no place like home"—such weather as this.

Sunday morning, Rev. Luther Freeman will preach in the Methodist church, Wollaston, at 10.45 o'clock. Subject, "True Freedom." "The Great Question of 1891," will be his subject in the evening, at 7 o'clock. Every one invited to these services.

The annual Wollaston village picnic will be held at Lovell's grove on Wednesday, July 8th. The party will go to the grove on the 8.30 A. M. car, and after enjoying the fornoon there, will take the barge Clifford for a trip down the harbor to Fort Warren, where a landing will be made, and will then go outside to Nantasket beach and return by the way of Broad Sound.

Several families are talking of moving from Wollaston on account of the lack of accommodations afforded by the O. C. R. R. under the new sechedule. One man put his place into the hands of an agent to sell, on Wednesday. This place can be purchased for about $1000 less than it cost him. Others who have lived there for years, and have contributed much to the welfare of the city, will leave as soon as the summer vacation is over unless there is a radical change.

Mr. Charles H. Brigham and family and Mr. Frank H. Armstrong and family are at Wolfsboro, N. H.

Capt E. S. Huntington and Capt C. E. Brown, of Boston, address the Lynn Nationalist Club Wednesday evening, speaking on economist subjects.

The Steadfast Ten, King's Daughters, Wollaston, held a very successful ice cream sale on Tuesday evening. These sales will be held every Tuesday evening throughout the season, at the corner of Warren and Grand View avenues.

Mr. George R. Prescott is seriously ill.

The man killed on the railroad near the Wollaston station on March 17 is now thought to have been Edward Packard who lived on Sagamore street in Holbrook.

There will be eight officers on duty in Wollaston on the third and Fourth of July.

The salaries of the third class presidential post offices have been adjusted for the ensuing year. The Wollaston office is in this class and Postmaster Bass will receive $1200 per year instead of $1100.

Fourth of July.

Col. Merrill, the veteran landlord of the Wollaston hotel, intends to make about as much stir on Fourth of July evening as any one in this city, as far as we know. He has secured the American band of Boston and purchased fifty dollars' worth of fireworks, and he intends that it shall be lively on that evening in front of his hotel.

Auction of Pews.

The auction sale of pews of the new Wollaston Unitarian church was held on Saturday evening.

Sixty-four pews were offered for sale. Each pew will hold four or six persons, alternating. The rentals vary from one to five dollars per month. The sale was for a choice of pews above the rental and the premiums realized amounted to $140.

Wollaston Fires.

The alarm from Box 51 at 4.38 Tuesday was for the burning of a small shed on the Quincy estate. Loss, about $50. The fire was probably of incendiary origin.

Remarkable quick time was made by the Central Station apparatus and Chemical 2 in getting to the fire.

The apparatus from the Central Station made the run in seven minutes. This beats all previous records.

Chemical 2 of Atlantic, which is composed wholly of call men, including the driver, who lives at a considerable distance from the Chemical house, drove up to the fire in exactly nine minutes.

Hose 2 of Wollaston made the time in twelve minutes.

Wollaston narrowly escaped having another alarm of fire late Tuesday night. Just before 12 o'clock Mr. O. F. Maguire of Woodbine street discovered that his hen house, which is in close proximity to his house, was on fire. Mr. Maguire soon extinguished the blaze, and noticing that it was of incendiary origin, rushed across the street to his blacksmith shop, which he was afraid the firebugs would also attempt to destroy. As he ran around the corner of the building he heard voices, and drawing his revolver he fired, scaring the incendiaries off. These were probably the same parties who set the small shed on fire a few mornings ago opposite the Maguire place.

An attempt was made Wednesday to burn the toboggan slide on Third hill. Engineer King discovered the fire and extinguished it.

A New Lodge.

Merry Mount Lodge, No. 127, Ancient Order of United Workmen was instituted at Plumer's hall Monday night by Deputy Grand Master Workman, S. S. Symonds of Salem, assisted by brothers of the order representing Maine, California, and various parts of Massachusetts. The new lodge begins its work under very favorable auspices. It has long been a source of astonishment to many that the largest and cheapest assessment insurance society was not represented in our city. With a fine field, an excellent set of officers, an enthusiastic membership, and, last, but not least, the advice and assistance of the members of other lodges who reside in the vicinity, we venture to prophesy a large increase in the immediate future. The following is the list of officers:

P. M. W.,—A. H. Gilson.
M. W.,—Jas. M. Nowland.
Fireman,—E. E. Hoxie.
Overseer, —Wm. Spargo.
Recorder,—C. W. Garey.
Financer,—C. E. Jones.
R.' v' r.,—C. B. Tilton.
Guide,—Frank Freeman.
I. W.,—John W. Shannon.
O. W.,—E. G. McGill.
Trustee,—Alfred Shaw. F. H. Bussell.
Med. Exam.,—C.W. Garey, M. D.

QUINCY POINT.

An average of 95 tons of crushed stone per day are turned out by the stone crusher at Quincy Neck, and used on Washington street.

Mr. Walter Shaw and family, of Osceola, Nebraska, arrived this week, and will spend a couple of months in the East. They are the guests of Mrs. Isaac Phillips at the Neck.

Rev. Geo. Benedict will fill the pulpit of the Union church, Boston, Sunday, supplying for the pastor Rev. Nehemiah Boynton. The services at the Washington street Congregational will be as usual, Mr. Benedictt furnishing a supply.

There is a prospect of a coach line from Quincy Point to North Weymouth village. Where is that Weymouth street railway?

The Girl's Club connected with the Union church, Boston, picnic Tuesday at Cedar Point, North Weymouth shore. The Boy's Club of the same church camped on same spot a week last summer.

I. F. Hall, superintendent of school, at Leominster, has resigned for "pecuniary and professional reasons." He will be remembered as principal of the Washington school.

Mr. T. B. Pollard, principal of the Washington, entertained the graduates of that school at his residence, on South street Monday evening. A thoroughly good time was enjoyed by the class. Mr. Pollard was presented with a very pretty oak study chair which will serve as a pleasant memento of the class of '91.

A number of little people gathered by invitation at Mrs. Abbie J. Higgins, on Washington court, on Tuesday to help celebrate the sixth birthday of her son Freeman. The children had a delightful time.

Haymakers at the Point and Neck are busy, hoping to get all in before the glorious Fourth.

Master Fred Newcomb, who was injured so badly by a fall, has so far recovered as to be out again, to the surprise of all.

Master Charlie Carter, the LEDGER boy on the Point route, is quite sick at his home, No. 33 South street. He has carried the LEDGER since last September, and his patrons have found him faithful and obliging, and will miss him.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Nellie T. Collins presented Miss Dorcas C. Higgins in behalf of the C Grammar Class of '91 of the Washington school, with a beautiful inkstand. Although taken completely by surprise, Miss Higgins responded in a feeling manner and assured them that the memory of the pleasant surprise would not soon be forgotten.

Plenty of Sport.

The Quincy Point bridge is covered with crowds every day the cause being the advent of a large school of mackerel. When a PATRIOT representative visited the bridge Wednesday he found the steamboat pier covered with admirers of the finny tribe, while thirteen or fourteen boats and yachts filled with human freight were having a busy time pulling in the "spoils of the deep." Mr. Joseph Hayden on Monday caught seventy. Here is a chance for some of our experts to distinguish themselves.

ORIGINAL. No. 41.

Strawberry Cottage Pudding.

BY MRS. DEARBORN,
Principal Boston Cooking School.

Cream ¼ cup butter; add ¾ cup sugar gradually, beating all the time; then add 1 egg beaten till thick and light. Mix together a generous pint of pastry flour and 2 tea sp. Cleveland's Baking Powder; add this to the first mixture alternately with one cupful of milk.

Beat well together, pour into a buttered baking-pan and bake about thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Cut in squares and serve with stewed and sweetened strawberries and cream. (Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

An even teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does as much as a heaping teaspoonful of others. A large saving on a year's bakings. Try a can, Cleveland's.

Q. H. S. Graduation.

Graduation exercises are often termed dry and uninteresting, but the innovation at the graduation of the Class of '91 of the Quincy High School, Wednesday evening, would not allow these adjectives to apply. There were a few essays but they were not called such on the programme, and somehow coming as they did, and being delivered without notes, did not appear as in the past. There were no readings or declamations, everything being original and committed to memory.

The platform was considerably enlarged for the occasion, and accommodated the school. On the wall in the background was the motto in daisies, the letters being about a foot long:

> OBSERVE, CONVERSE,
> READ, REFLECT.

Above were the two silk flags presented to the school by the graduating class, and on the right and left busts of Washington and Lincoln, and pictures of Lowell and Holmes, also gifts of the class.

The whole hall had been reserved and only enough tickets issued to fill the seats, so that there was no rush and no crowd, yet the hall was full. Among those present were noticed Mayor Fairbanks, the members of the School Committee, city officials, Senator Eaton and other distinguished citizens.

The exercises begun promptly at eight o'clock.

The "Excursions" were the class history. The three years were given separately and served as introductions to the three parts into which the programme was divided. The historian was Miss Melzard of Atlantic.

To Miss Sullivan was assigned the honor of opening the regular programme, as she was second in scholarship for the whole course; second, although she differed by only half a per cent. from the leader. Her subject, "Manger Births," showed the wonderful rise of those of lowly birth to power and positions of trust. She showed that it was particularly true of America; and therefore, as the advantages and possibilities were so much greater here, the responsibilities resting on the class were also greater.

A literary heptalogue followed. Seven of the young ladies of the literature class by conversation and recitation set forth the beauties of our best authors, together with a running criticism of their writing and a brief synopsis of their life work.

Master Thomas asked the question, "Why Do They Come?" and concisely answered it. He reviewed the condition of the great powers of Europe, and showed under what burdens the poorer class were struggling. He then showed the cheapness, rapidity and safety of our present modes of travel and finally summed up the inducements offered by America to the deserving immigrant. The subject might well have been "Emigrants and Immigrants." It was an able production well delivered.

Four young men followed Miss Melzard's introduction to the Second Excursion with a history of "Our Flag." The origin, symbolism and history were traced. Incidents of the different wars, remarkable associations in times of peace, and the songs of "Our Flag" were harmoniously strung together. The great orators and the poets were freely quoted.

"The Future" meant the prophecies of '91. Miss Jones made use of the planets, stars, and constellations together with the mythological history belonging to them as the base of her revelations. After an invocation to Apollo and Diana and a prayer for assistance, every member of the class presented a golden star to the prophetess who gave the name of the particular star and what its portents were. The prophecy thus presented was unique, and was as creditable to the author as it was pleasing to the audience and class.

As soon as the "Third Excursion" had been given six young ladies entertained the audience with an account of the wild flowers of Quincy. Like the literature selection they relied on question and answer to set forth the fundamental facts. The parts, too, gave them a wealth of happy comparisons and gems of beauty to illustrate their subject. It was a very pleasing and instructive feature.

"Woman" was the succinct subject that permitted Miss Eaton to demonstrate the world's debt to God's second human creation. By examples of the past and the present the noble work of "woman" was disclosed. The different fields of work she has invaded, her professional successes, and, greatest of all, her work as a philanthropist, Miss Eaton declared, should put her in the front ranks of the world's greatest spirits.

Master Hammond, the class leader, took for his subject the wonderful and still unknown possibilities of that mysterious power—electricity. His subject was "Our Debt to Electricity," from Galvani's well-known experiment with frogs' legs to the present multiplicity of electrical contrivances and strange applications of this force. Master Hammond traced his theme.

The proficiency in music was gratifying to parents and friends. What Mr. Wade begun has continued to improve under the present director and efficient teachers. The graduating class had several good singers.

Dr. Sheahan in presenting the diplomas spoke substantially as follows: After the splendid programme presented, it would be useless for me to add anything. I have listened to the exercises with a feeling of enjoyment and pride. I rejoice as a graduate of that institution, for which I have as much interest as a cen—quarter of a century ago. The success attests to the zeal and patience of your principal, an opinion shared by the whole school board. To note the patriotism was gratifying: a devotion inculcated in the public schools. I observe a superiority of numbers presented by the young ladies, but would not give them all the praise of quality. The reasoning of the young ladies was however acute and logical, and it is a shame for the Commonwealth to debar women from entering many fields. The study of nature was an innovation on the past Nature was coming under the domination of man, by insight and careful labor. The visit in spirit to other lands, to reflect on the people, statesmen and poets of years ago, was salutary. In bidding the class of '91 farewell, he wished that their success may be repeated in life.

It was the intention of the LEDGER to have printed in future issues the individual parts, and a request was made for a copy of the same. But Principal Lull desires to save them for a high school paper which he intends to issue in the autumn.

Observed and Reflected.

The fourth page of the programme gave the new course of study. Parents will, therefore, have an opportunity to see what subjects are offered to their children next year.

Miss Pfaffmann, after seven years' faithful work, has resigned her position as first assistant to continue her studies at the Harvard Annex. While she is to be congratulated on her pleasant prospects, the school in its loss will have the sympathy of all those interested in its success.

Mrs. L. French Smith, formerly of Fitchburg, but now the successor of the late Mr. Wade, conducted the music.

The decorations of the hall were provided by the second class. This is a new custom and frees the graduates of all responsibility on the day of graduation.

The six individual parts were assigned for scholarship. The combinations were made up arbitrarily.

All the subjects treated were, as far as possible, intended to review matters studied in school. Thus they gave to the audience an idea of the breadth and scope of work.

The Class of '91, numbered at the start 19 boys and 32 girls. The second year begun with 26, and the third with 25. The number of graduates was 24.

The Reception.

The class of '91, Q. H. S., gave a reception to their friends at Faxon hall, Thursday evening, and a very pretty as well as exclusive party it was.

The ladies, for the most part, were in light evening costumes while the young men wore neat black suits with white ties.

The party numbered about 100 and they were nearly all in their teens, but nevertheless they made the most of the evening and enjoyed themselves until midnight, worshipping Terpsichore.

The grand march which opened the order commenced shortly after 8 o'clock and was led by Master Thompson and Miss Gannett, Master Priest and Miss Melzard, who were followed by some forty or more couples, who encircled the hall, making a very pretty picture. The necessary accompaniment being furnished by Bryants' orchestra. At 10 o'clock, during a brief intermission in the festivities, Caterer Wales served ices in the lower hall.

The floor was in charge of Arthur W. Priest, who was assisted by J. W. Thompson, W. L. Thomas, C. L. Hammond and W. P. Hill, as aids.

Miss Souther, Miss Pfaffmann and Mrs. Lull did the honors as matrons, and the special invited guests were Dr. Sheahan, Dr. Hunting, Dr. Ellslee, of Chelsea, Mr. Lull, Superintendent Aldrich, and Mr. Walter Loud.

Outside of the hall there was a large gathering of people who stood on the sidewalk and watched the happy throng through the open windows, and so orderly were they that the services of Officer McGrath, who was on duty at the door, were not required to preserve order.

Old Colony Must Pay $22,500.

An agreement for judgment for $22,500 for the plaintiff was entered Friday in the superior court, in the case of Silas H. Gardner, of Brockton, vs. the Old Colony R. R. Co.

Mr. Gardner was one of the victims of the accident at Quincy last August.

The company has now settled all but six of the cases arising out of the accident, of which there were over 100. The total cost of the accident to the railroad company thus far has been over $400,000.

Fourth of July Races.

The following events have been arranged for the morning of the Fourth on the Neponset river. The start will be at 8 A. M. One prize is offered in each:

Water Commissioners.

The board of Water Commissioners of the town of Braintree has adopted a new schedule of rates, which went into effect on Wednesday, July 1. We congratulate the water takers of that town upon the low rates. Litigations over the purchase of the company's works and with the mill owners were very expensive, yet the town offers to supply water much cheaper than does the Quincy company. Glance at these prices:

Dwelling houses occupied by one family, supplied by one faucet,	$6 00
Each additional faucet,	2 00
One bath tub,	5 00
One water-closet, of approved kind,	5 00
When both bath tub and water-closet are used, for both	8 00
Provided, that in no case shall the charge for the use of water by a private family, exclusive of hose and stable, exceed	20 00
Hose service, when used in connection with dwelling house or other rated use,	4 00

Braintree has to pump its water; and if it can afford to supply water at the above rates, certainly the Quincy company could, and should do even better, for Quincy is more thickly settled and four times as large. Water takers in this city some years ago sought to overcome the excessive rates and put in meters. For a time they succeeded, until the company raised its minimum rates, and since then they have had to pay for water which the meters show they do not use.

Situated as Quincy is, the only remedy now appears to be the purchase of the works of the company. The city may have to pay for them more than they are worth, but that is one of the uncertain things. Certain it is, however, that if the city wants better and cheaper service, it should own the works. The mains should be extended.

To the Citizens of Quincy.

Editor of the Ledger.

The committee appointed at the public meeting held Saturday, June 13, 1891, to interview the management of the Old Colony Railroad and endeavor to have the obnoxious time table of June 15 revised by the addition of more trains for Quincy, have attended to their duty and respectfully submit the following report:

In accordance with the sentiment shown at the meeting, resolutions, inviting the City Council to co-operate with your committee, were submitted by Councilman Gray, of Ward 1, on Monday, June 15. After discussion in that body, during which the members from Wards 3, 4, 5 and 6 announced that their constituents were well satisfied with the new time table as they had more trains than before, the resolutions were made to apply to the central station only, and then adopted. A committee of five was joined to the citizens committee and General Manager Kendrick was interviewed Saturday, the 20th. After quite an animated discussion during which the grievances of Quincy were presented to his attention, the committee received assurance from him that on July 1st, a number of extra trains would be stopped at the central station. That assurance has now become a fact and four inward and five outward trains have been added to the previous number.

In regard to the "workingman's train" Mr. Kendrick expressed his willingness to meet a committee from the petitioners and make such arrangements as would undoubetedly prove satisfactory to all concerned.

Your committee feel that while much has been accomplished in the matter of increased accommodations, yet the central station is not now receiving its just dues, and we believe a very short trial will so demonstrate this fact that the management will gladly grant at least three more trains in each direction. A request to this effect, together with one for an improvement in the quality ot the cars, will be submitted to Mr. Kendrick at an early day.

That Willard Granite.

Much has been said first and last about the granite used in the new Willard school building and in justice to the contractor who furnished the same the facts of the case should be made known, as the reputation of Mr. Wilson's granite has been injured by the stories that have been in circulation.

The plans for the building called for Quincy granite, pink preferred, and the contract was given to Mr. Wilson. The architect visited his quarry and examined his pink granite and was perfectly satisfied; thus the granite used is what was called for and is not the cheapest quality as gray granite could have been furnished by him much cheaper.

However the granite discolored as it is today is no credit to the building but that is not the fault with the granite. The PATRIOT man called at Mr. Wilson's quarry this week and saw blocks of this same granite that had laid out in the sun and water for more than a year and it was just as bright and clear as the day quarried. What then is the cause of the discoloration?

It is simply this: The water washing the mud and lime from the bricks commenced the trouble, this dirtied the stone, which was finally washed with acid which discolored it so that it cannot be erased.

Another thing claimed is that several cap stones were removed for being faulty. This is partially true. One cap was removed because it was found there was a seam in it; this is nothing strange, for quite often there is a seam in a piece of granite which is so hidden from view that it is unnoticeable. The other pieces removed were some of the mullion backs. The contract said these were to be twenty inches wide, which was what was furnished, but Contractor Cushing made a mistake on some of them, for instead of having them in one piece twenty inches wide he had them in two pieces seven inches wide, which were not strong enough, and these were the other pieces removed.

Mr. Wilson has furnished for the building something like 5000 running feet of granite and out of this but one piece has been poor and an investigation convinces us that he has acted in an honorable manner and furnished just what was wanted.

HOUGHS NECK.

The weather the past week has caused the faces of the cottagers at Houghs Neck to assume their natural expression, and the general wish is that we shall see no more cold weather for some time. Now that the schools have closed, people are beginning to flock to the sea shore, and Houghs Neck is assuming its summer look.

Henry Smith and family, George Withington and family and Miss L. E. May all of Stoughton, are at Houghs Neck.

Mr. Henry Snow and family of South Braintree, are at their cottage, "The Snow Flake."

Joy Bros., of Brockton, have occupied their new cottage on Bird street.

John J. Day and family of Boston, have moved into their new cottage on Bird street.

The campers near Mrs. Lapham's are C. B. Cowling and family; F. R. Cowling and family, and W. E. Wyman and family all of Dorchester.

Timothy Smith and family of Dedham, are at their new cottage on Bell street.

Samuel Butcher and family are in one of Pierce's cottages.

Mr. L. A. Hoey, of Boston, with family, are at the cottage on the corner of Cottage and Crosby streets.

Mrs. M. Elizabeth Green of the PATRIOT and LEDGER has arrived at her cottage on Bay View avenue.

Mr. Guild of Brockton, has taken a cottage on the bluffs.

J. Dolan of Boston Highlands, with his family have arrived at their new cottage near the "Lorretta."

Mr. Clark, of the firm of Clark & Roberts, and his family, are at Tuckerman's cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gould and son of Providence, R. I., Miss McZanz and Mr. Lee Frazier of Boston Highlands, are at the "Loretta."

Dr. Cumming, of Boston, has been at the "Loretta."

Miss E. A. McIntosh, of Stoughton, has taken her new cottage on Bird street. cottage on Island Avenue.

John Lewis and family. of Brockton, are at the Plymouth Rock Wheel House.

Charles French and family, of Stoughton, are at the Sea Drift cottage.

Albert S. Libby and family, of Roxbury, arrived at their cottage on Bay View avenue, Wednesday.

Henry Moebs, of Roxbury, is at the Bayside cottage. He is also erecting a large stable.

Quincy Yacht Club Hop at the Club house Thursday evening.

L. C. Smith and family, of Maplewood, arrived at the Belle cottage, Wednesday.

The catboat Mary Agnes, Capt. Sinclare's from Pierce's Hotel is making daily mackerel trips. The catch of two men Wednesday was five hundred.

A Unitarian Sunday School from Roslindale held their picnic here Wednesday with headquarters at the Casino.

John Edwards and family, of Brockton, are in one of Pierce's cottages.

Thomas Downey, of the Boston Globe and family, are domiciled at a cottage on Sea street.

A new cottage is being erected on Charles street for William Schlusemeyer of West Dedham.

W. E. Horton of Foxborough is erecting a cottage on Bird street.

Capt. Boyd at the Post office is the agent of the DAILY LEDGER and PATRIOT.

George Gifford, of Brockton, is erecting a new cottage on Bird street.

Many of the cottagers will celebrate the glorious Fourth by decorating with flags and lanterns, and there will also be several private displays of fireworks.

The old United States sloop-of-war Brooklyn, which was towed to Nut Island last week, was bought from the government by Thomas Butler & Co., and others of Boston, and will be burnt for what junk there is in her hull.

The Brooklyn was built in 1858 in New York by Westewelt & Co. She was a steam frigate with a length of 233 feet, a breadth of 43 feet, a draught of 19 feet, 6 inches, and a displacement of 3000 tons.

Her engines were of 1116 indicated horse power and she could steam under ordinary circumstances, 10 knots an hour.

Her complement of officers and men when in commission was 291, and her main battery consisted of 12 9-inch smooth bore guns, one 8-inch muzzle loading rifled gun, and one 60-pound breech loading rifled gun.

The Brooklyn's record has been a brilliant one. She has been in commission up to within about two years.

The Messrs. Butler stated to a PATRIOT representative that the Brooklyn would probably be fired in about two weeks.

This is the second man-of-war which has been beached on this island to be burnt for what copper there is in her hull. The Niagara was burnt here in 1885.

Probation Officer.

Judge Humphrey has tendered the appointment of probation officer to Francis A. Spear of Quincy, at a salary of $750 per annum.

Officer Spear will immediately resign his position on the Quincy police force to accept the appointment.

Mr. Spear is a native of Quincy, 37 years of age, and is unmarried. He has been in the Quincy Police force for twelve years and has had an extensive experience in criminal business and was an inspector for the Quincy Board of Health.

The districts includes, Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Cohasset, Holbrook and Randolph.

Celebration at Weymouth.

Fourth of July celebration at Weymouth promises to be a "red, red, day." All parts of Weymouth and Braintree are invited to take part.

In the morning at 5 o'clock, an antique, horrible and trade display will be formed at Commercial street, below the Weymouth depot, headed by the Weymouth band and will proceed through the following streets, viz:—Commercial, across Braintree line to Quincy avenue, to Allen, to Front, to Commercial, to Washhington square in Weymouth, thence to Front, to Federal, to Washington streets and back again to Washington square. Here twenty-seven dollars in prizes will be distributed to those who may have made the best local hit, best ornamental display, best comic display, best trade display.

This will be followed by a series of races and amusement on the Institute grounds, wherever these are, band concert, and grand base ball match game for a prize of ten dollars, given by the Weymouth Gazette.

In the evening at 7.30 there will be a band concert in Washington square. Should the weather prove favorable there will be witnessed one of the biggest times that has ever taken place in connection with the celebration of the glorious Fourth.

MILTON.

The schools of Milton closed Wednesday for the summer vacation. No graduation exercises were held at any of the schools.

Mr. H. T. Tuell, the principal of the High school, gave a reception to the graduating class Wednesday evening at the Town Hall. The class gave a pleasing charade, and ice cream and cake was served. The names of the graduating class are: Grace Alden, Isabella Sage, Alice Whaley, Fannie Kemp, Lizzie Collins, Mary Dudley, Florence Ferry, Marion Bradlee, Elmer Taylor, Charles Mitchell, Leonard Littlefield.

Leonard C. Elden has commenced work on the cellar of his new house on Washington street.

A hay wagon party from here went to Houghs Neck, Wednesday evening.

Several of East Milton's citizens are having their residences connected with the water mains.

Mr. Isaac Choate who is sick does not seem to improve much.

Mr. C. B. Davis and family of Philadelphia have taken the Cunningham estate.

Tuesday, Hose No. 2, of Milton, came out and tried the new hydrants. The pressure at the depot was enough to force a good stream over the flag pole.

A party of twenty from here are to take an outing at Ponkapoag pond.

A handsome brass tablet has been erected in the Dorchester M. E. Church to the memory of Josiah Webb late of Milton.

East Milton division Sons of Temperance, received a pleasing visit from "Ever True" division of South Boston last Tuesday evening. These officers were also elected:

W. P.,—John Merrill.
W. A.,—Mrs. Josiah Babcock.
R. S.,—Albert Clements.
Assistant,—Miss Alice Shields.
F. S.,—Mrs. Louis Staples.
Treasurer,—Miss Alice Babcock.

Assistant,—Walter Skinner.
J. S.,—Freeman Gray.
O. S.,—James West.

July Weather.

William H. Sears, Plymouth's weather prophet, predicts for July that there will not be much stability in regard to the winds—baffling and variable. The rain periods, both local and general combined, will most likely occur on the following days: 5th, 7th, 8th, 11th, 15th, 17th, 18th, 20th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 25th, 29th.

The electrical storms will most likely occur on or about the 7th, 11th, 18th, 29th.

—Hingham's rate of taxation will be $13 on a thousand.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly

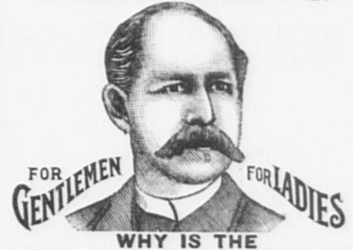
Ask my agents for W. L. Douglas Shoes. If not for sale in your place ask your dealer to send for catalogue, secure the agency, and get them for you.
☞TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.☜



WHY IS THE

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we have had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1891.

Our Yesterdays.

EDWARD L. WHITE.

I saw my yesterdays go past,
A sinuous stream of souls of days,
Clad diversely; in the vague haze
Some forms, it seemed, no shadows cast;
Each right hand held its mirror fast,
Some wreathed with myrtle, some with bays,
And those that answered to my gaze
Showed me my memories as they passed.

Over a twilight plain afar
Their blurred line faded out of view
Toward mountains mystic as the sea;
But, shining each one like a star,
The mirrors wherein I saw you
Gleaned backward through the dusk to me.

Household Receipts.

POTATO TURNOVERS. Mix about a pint of hot mashed potato with one egg, season to taste, and roll it in flour. Make it into balls and press or roll them out thin; put a tablespoon of meat, minced and seasoned, on one half; fold over and press the edges together, and brown on each side in butter or sausage fat.

ICE CREAM CAKE. Beat one-fourth pound butter to a cream; add gradually one and a half cups of sugar; then add a half-pint lukewarm water, two and one-half cups flour; beat thoroughly and stir in carefully two even teaspoonfuls baking powder and the well-beaten whites of four eggs; bake this in three layers. Put it together with a boiled icing.

FRIED CHICKEN. Singe; cut at the joints; remove the breast bones. Wipe each piece with a clean wet cloth; dredge with salt, pepper and flour, and saute them in hot salt-pork fat till brown and tender, but not burned. Arrange on a dish with boiled cauliflower or potato-balls and pour a white sauce over them. Or dip in egg and crumbs, and fry in deep hot fat and serve with tomato sauce.

Oil cloths will last twice as long if a layer or two of wadded carpet lining are placed under them.

Fresh cod is exceedingly nice boiled and served with egg sauce; but you must get a piece from the thickest part of the fish, and it should weigh three or four pounds.

Ammonia is a most useful household article. For washing windows, brushes and for performing many other services it becomes almost indispensable to the careful housekeeper.

The spice poultice is a growing favorite in the sickroom. It is pleasant to use and easily made. Mix together dry, one heaping teaspoonful each of ground ginger, cinnamon, cloves and flour. Moisten with hot water until of proper consistency to spread. Double and heat a piece of old cotton, spread the plaster on it and cover with cheese-cloth. When cold, moisten with brandy or whiskey and reheat.

☞ One of the most remarkable home comings in the world's history is that of Lucas Negreiras Paez, who returned to Barcelona, Spain, the other day. Senor Paez, now ninety-three years of age, has been in business for seventy years, and is very wealthy. When he sailed for his native land, on one of his own ships, commanded by one of his grandsons, he took with him his entire family of 279 persons. Paez was married three times and is the father of thirty-nine children.

☞ Numerous remedies have been prescribed for mosquito bites, but a German writer says that ordinary soap is as good as any of them. He always carries a small piece with him on his country excursions, and in case of a bite makes a lather over the effected part and allows it to dry on. The burning is at once relieved, and all pain soon disappears. Should it return, as sometimes it happens, it is only necessary to repeat the application.

☞ A new system of house wiring for electric lighting consists of fitting the building with continuous tubes of insulating material, through which the wires are drawn. The tubes are made of paper soaked in a hot bath of bituminous material, and are said to be hard, strong and tough.

☞ The British Museum has secured from Thibet a copy of the Jangym, a monster cyclopedia of Thibetan Buddhism. It comprises 225 volumes, each of which is two feet long and six inches thick. There are, it is supposed, only two other copies of the work outside of Thibet.

☞ In the United States there are eaten every day 2,250,000 pies. Each week, 16,750,000. Each year, 819,000,000, at a total cost of $164,000,000—an amount greater than the internal revenue and more than enough to pay the interest on the national debt.

Largest selection Silverware and Clocks for Wedding presents. Williams, West Quincy.

Anecdotes.

Employer—"James, here is a letter for you from the dead letter office."

James (in agony)—"Then it's from my son. He's bin sick for weeks, and I've bin expectin' this every day.

For the first time in his short life Jack had bitten his tongue. Wishing to describe the accident he ran to his mother and said pitifully.

"Oh, mamma, I 'tepped on my tongue wiv my teef."

Farmer—"That was a stavin' paper you got out last week."

Country Editor—"I'm glad to hear that you were pleased with it."

Farmer—"Them stories that you had in about them fellers bein' cured of long-standin' diseases were the entertainingest bits of news I've read for a long time."

"I'm afraid, Johnny," said the Sunday school teacher rather severely, "that I will never meet you in heaven."

"Why? What you been doin' now?"

"He shouldn't say shoulder arms to those cavalrymen."

"Why not?"

"They have nothing but swords. He ought to say shoulder blades."

Johnnie—"Papa, that Chicago boy said us St. Louis boys were all pygmies."

"Papa—"Ah, indeed! Well, my son, tell him he is a hogmy."

Mother—"Goodness me! Johnny! Johnny! Why ain't you at school, instead of hurrahing around the streets like a wild Indian?"

"Johnny, dancing a jig—"No school to-"

Mother—"No school? Why?"

Johnny—"Teacher's dead."

Quincy Yacht Club.

A rattling nor'easter greeted the first championship race of the Quincy Yacht Club, off the club house, Houghs Neck, Saturday afternoon, the yachtsmen appearing in oil suits and sou'westers. The breeze was strong at the start but lightened considerable before the finish.

In the first class the Erin, Eureka and Adolph were the only boats to start. The White Fawn came over to enter but was informed by Commodore Shaw that its time would not be taken unless the professional skipper, Amber Cleverly, was put ashore. This the owners refused to do, and they put off towards Hull.

The Quincy Club is sailing under Corinthian rules this year, and Commodore Shaw means they shall be lived up to.

The first gun was fired at 1.15, and five minutes later the first class were under way, the Eureka leading the way, the Erin bringing up in the rear, but the latter soon took the lead and kept it, finishing with a lead of nearly six minutes. The Adolph got "hung up" on Bunkin island buoy and lost several minutes.

The second class were delayed in starting, the flag boat having drifted away. This made a rather mixed up start and the results were the Mabel protested the Madge for crossing wrong, and the Helen protested the Madge and Scamp for the same reason.

The Madge took the lead and held it, the first round crossing the line nearly a minute and a half ahead of the Helen and finished with several minutes to spare. The Egret fouled the flag boat in the first time round, which lost her so much time that she withdrew.

In the third class the contestants were the Bess, Rocket, Freak, Flora Lee, Mab and the Dandelion, Charlie Adams' old boat which was handled by Arthur Adams, a young son of John Quincy Adams, who was assisted by Jack and Hal, sons of Charles Francis Adams.

The Rocket was the first to cross the line and kept the lead until the second time round, when she was passed by the Bess in rounding Sheep island buoy. The Bess then kept the lead until the finish, but lost the race on time allowance.

The Mab started with three reefs but when off Raccoon Island a reef line tore out making a large hole in the sail, she lost some fifteen minutes here, but continued in the race until the first time round when she withdrew.

The race over, several of the boats left immediately for Hull.

As a result of the races the Erin secures a leg for the championship and Sanborn cup in the first class. In the second class the Madge takes a leg in the championship prize and Rice cup, which is for the second class only; and in the third class the Rocket secures a leg in the championship and a second leg in the Sanborn cup.

The Eureka, Bess and Flora Lee take a cash prize of $5.00 each.

Commencement at Harvard.

The Boston Home Journal says, "The commencement at Cambridge passed with brilliant success. It is a ceremony which increases in interest with every year. The event of the day was the exhibition in the western corridor of Memorial Hall of Power's statue of Edward Everett. Nothing better can be asked than the beautiful head, the bust and the arms. If by good luck some Vandal had knocked it down and the lower half been crushed and the upper half only recovered, we should all say that the statue must have been perfect. Powers had, however, a cruel passion for the ultra realism of his time. Mr. Everett himself had to defend the dress coat and trousers of the Webster statue against a storm of criticism. So Powers has here immortalized a particular dress coat, a particular pair of boots, and a particular pair of trousers about which this generation is indifferent. It is a pity of pities, too, that the statue was not large enough to be placed opposite that of Quincy at the right of the stage in Sanders. Still we are grateful for what we have and we must all thank Dr. Everett for adding this noble statue to the glories of Memorial. As he said in his speech of presentation, his father died for the country as much as if he had died in battle."

Regarding Free Delivery.

The following is an extract from a letter received by a Wollaston gentleman from the post office department regarding the establishment of the free delivery system in that place:

"Yours of the 19th inst., asking if there is any probability of Wollaston having free delivery, has been received. We presume you have reference to the extension of the carrier limits of Quincy so as to cover that territory. This question it is impossible for us to answer intelligently at this time, as the demands upon the department for the free delivery service are so great that many places that are applying for extension of service will not be able to receive it."

Keep your eye on the newspaper and see which of the merchants want your custom and are sufficiently courteous to invite you to call. There is much more in advertising than you may think. It is not only to tell of his goods that a man advertises, but it is to invite the people who read—the thinking, the intelligent—to pay him a visit and judge for themselves as to the quality and price of what he offers for sale. People read the advertisements. Don't make any mistake about that. They are just as much interested in knowing where to buy to an advantage as the advertiser is in selling his goods.

This is an age of progress and new and novel ideas. The latest thing to startle the world of inventions is an electric railway signal. By it an engineer of any train can tell just when a train is coming on the same track towards him and its distance away. By the use of this signal a collision and its attendant horrors is impossible.

Representative Josiah Quincy will deliver the next Fourth of July oration before the Boston city government. Josiah Quincy delivered one July 4, 1798. Josiah Quincy delivered one July 4, 1825. Josiah Quincy, Jr., was the city orator July 4, 1832.

A Worthy Presentation.

A very interesting event occurred at the new bakery of the United States Baking Company on Medford street, Charlestown, Monday noon. According to previous understanding, at the sound of the gong, the employes, to the number of one hundred, gathered in the spacious storeroom of the building, and Mr. Warren Mansur, the manager, a recent resident of Quincy, was sent for and ushered into the presence of this company by Mr. Reuben S. Smith, book-keeper, and a neat speech he presented Mr. Mansur with an elegant silver tea service, consisting of ten pieces. For sometime the workmen of this establishment have been discussing how best they might express their high regard for, and appreciation of Mr. Mansur, as an employer, and finally decided on the above arrangement. Mr. Mansur's feeling were so wrought upon by the surprise, which was a genuine one to him, that he was unable to make any extended reply, but every one present knew that in his heart he felt what he could not speak. It is well known by all who have come in contact with Mr. Mansur in business dealings that he is in every way worthy of this expression from his employes. The gathering lasted about five minutes in all, and at the close three hearty cheers were given for Mr. Mansur and also for the United States Baking Company.

We predict a bright future for this company, where the manager and every employe are so closely in sympathy with each other in the extension of the already large business which the company are doing throughout New England.

What Mothers Are Made For.

A home is what a woman makes it; a daughter is, in nine cases out of every ten, the reflection of her mother. The training of the girl of fifteen is shown in the woman of fifty. A son may, by contact with the rough world, sometimes outlive his early home influences—a daughter rarely does. She may make a misstep. Indiscretion may be to her a necessary teacher; but her early domestic training will manifest itself sooner or later. A mother's word, a domestic proverb, told at eventide by the quiet fireside, has been recalled by many a woman years after it was uttered.

"I thank God that my mother told me what other women have been taught by the world," said a gentlewoman to me not long ago. This, my friend, is the tribute which your daughter and mine should be able to pay to our memories long after we are gone. The world has a sharp way of teaching its truths to a girl. Is it not far better, then, that her mother should tell her with that sweet and sympathetic grace and gentleness which only a mother knows? The flowers most beautiful to the eye and sweetest to the smell grow in good soil. The world's noblest women have sprung from good homes.—Edward W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

Teacup Lore.

Here are a few old women's signs which may be read from a cup of tea: If any body happens to have two spoons in their cup, it is a sign that they will figure prominently at a wedding before the year is out. If milk or cream is put in your cup before sugar, it will "cross your love." A tea stalk floating on top of the tea is called a "stranger." When this happens to unmarried ladies they should stir the tea around briskly, and then place the spoon in the centre of the cup, holding it quite still. If the "stranger" in its gyrations is attracted to the spoon, the "stranger" will come that evening; should it, however, cling to the sides, he will not come at all. We may observe that it really depends on the state of the atmosphere as to whether the stalk goes to the middle or not. It is a sign of fair weather if the clusters of small air bubbles, which usually arise after the sugar has been put in, collect themselves and remain in the centre of the cup. If, on the contrary, they struggle to the sides it is a sign that it will certainly rain in a few hours. This cluster of bubbles is also called a "kiss," and portends that the owner will be thus saluted during the course of the day. A cluster of tea leaves with a few stragglers at the front at the bottom of the cup, signifies a hearse, or a funeral, while the couple of tea leaves at the bottom, if close together, signify a wedding—and so on to the end of the chapter.

How to Keep Cool.

Cleanliness, not only next to godliness, is part of coolness, says the Ladies' Home Journal. So take a plunge bath in the morning, letting the water be tepid, and afterwards giving yourself a cold shower. Omit starch from your clothes as far as possible. Eat a light breakfast. Greasy food, or a great quantity of food, taken in the morning, will most certainly heat your stomach for the entire day. A woman who stays in the city and is always cool gives this as her bill of fare: A cup of coffee in the morning, with bread and butter; a luncheon of cold beef and baked potato, with lemonade or iced tea; and a dinner after sunset consisting of a little soup, a bit of meat and one hot vegetable, a cool green salad, a cold desert and a small cup of coffee. Keep this in mind also; there is no better preventive against heat than good temper, when you combine good bathing, proper food, and evenness of disposition with it.

There are getting to be complaints of bad odors along the shores of Massachusetts Bay, and of quantities of dead cats and dogs and other disagreeable offal being cast up along its shores. There are also large streaks of greasy water in the vicinity of the coast. Some are inclined to attribute this to Boston's discharging its sewage into the bay; but it may arise from the neglect of other municipalities. It will be a bad thing if Nantasket beach and other summer resorts of that region are to be spoiled by the sewage of the vast population within a few miles of the ocean; and when the new metropolitan sewerage system goes into operation the causes of the evil will be increased.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The sugar beet industry of Nebraska has assumed such proportions that it is attracting the attention of the beet sugar growers of Europe. Another honorable and profitable industry is thus fairly launched in the United States, and another step is taken toward unfolding the capabilities of this great country.

The colossal equestrian statue of Gen. Grant, designed by Louis Rebisso, of Cincinnati, has been cast at Chicopee, and is to be shipped to Chicago shortly. This statue is the largest ever cast in this country.

The firm of F. B. Washburn & Co., of Brockton, furnished Barnum & Bailey's circus with 500 loaves of white bread, 35 dozen of rolls, 35 dozen of doughnuts and 100 pies of various kinds, which were used to feed the employes during their one day stay in that city.

☞ Garfield was the first Knight Templar ever elected president. Fillmore, on the other hand, was wafted into the State Legislature from Erie county, N. Y., as an anti-Mason, during the excitement that resulted from the abduction and murder of William Morgan.

A considerable expenditure will be made this year in grading and improving the surroundings of the National monument at Plymouth.

—Hingham's rate of taxation will be $13 on a thousand.

Teachings of Science.

Partial paralysis of the nerves which cause contraction of the blood vessels of the face, consequent enlargement of these vessels and redness and eruptions of the face are common. There is foulness of the breath, not so much from the simple smell of ths alcohol passing off, as from its vapor changed in character and mingled with effete and decomposing matter from the system; and if a strong odor of tobacco be added to these, the effect upon the senses and feelings of others, especially upon a wife with delicate nerves, I shall not attempt to describe.

All this may happen to a steady drinker who would warmly resent being called a drunkard and whose friends would feel greatly scandalized by such a charge. He may never have been so much under the influence of liquor as to be deprived of self-control or to become incapable of doing routine business. A temporary abstinence may for the time diminish his capacity or disqualify him for business, and he may readily persuade himself that the indulgence is good for him if not a necessity; thus he floats on into a whirlpool of more degraded drunkenness, or is prematurely arrested by some disease rendered fatal by his condition, or his powers fall early into general decay. That this is a true account of the average tippler, few will attempt to deny.

Hot Water for Headache.

When nothing will give relief, the following manner of applying hot water to the base of the brain will almost surely destroy the congestion and ease the pain. Have several large vessels of hot water close at hand, or have the hot water where it can be obtained without any waiting. Let the patient lie across the bed with the head extending over the side, and being a little lower than the body. Wrap a towel closely around the neck, and place a large basin on the floor, under the patient's head, to catch the water. Now, pour the water, as hot as can be endured, in a small stream at the base of the brain, and let it go over the whole head. Use several large pitchers of the water. Now, dry the hair carefully with a soft towel, but do not shake the head at all. Wrap the hair in a dry towel, and the patient will drop asleep, and wake free from pain.

Manchester has the honor of four generations on one side and five generations on the other, in one family, viz; Mary H. Preston, 87 years old; Lucy A. Preston, 46; Harlan A. Preston, 26 years, and Clarence A. Preston, 9 months. On the other side: Thirza Haskell, 89 years old; Thirza Davis, 61; Irena D. Blanchard, 38; Alice A. Preston, 22 years, and Clarence A. Preston, 9 months.

☞ The largest gold coin now in circulation is said to be the gold ingot, or "loof," of Annam, a French colony in Eastern Asia. It is a flat, round gold piece, and on it is written in India ink its value, which is about $220. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the "obang" of Japan, which is worth about $55, and the next comes the "benda" of Ashantee, which represents a value of about $49. The California $50 gold piece is worth about the same as the "benda." The heaviest silver coin in the world also belongs to Annam, where the silver ingot is worth about $15.

A clever, thrifty little woman at Wichita, Kan., is the happy possessor of a new black silk which she earned in a most peculiar way. Every time her husband bought twenty-five cents' worth of cigars she laid a like amount away in a drawer. In less than nine months she had enough to buy the silk and pay for the making and trimmings.

☞ In the town of Kallies, Pomerania, a great potato country, the entire population of between 3000 and 4000 shut up their houses, leave the keys with the mayor, and scatter all over Pomerania to the potato harvest, leaving the mayor and bellringer alone in charge of the town.

At the golden wedding recently celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Dodge at Concord, N. H., Mr. Dodge wore the same shoes as at the wedding 50 years ago.

There are 82 national cemeteries in the United States, and they have 327,179 graves about one-half of which are marked "unknown."

The total valuation of Boston is $999,694,180, of which $883,590,317 is taxable. The rate of taxation will be $13.30 per $1000.

Queen Elizabeth of England, who succeeded her sister Mary in 1558, is said to have left 3000 dresses behind her when she died, every one of which was more or less elaborately ornamented with lace.

Midgets 50 inches high and weighing only 70 pounds each were married at Vevay, Ind., last week.

In Richmond, Mo., there is a horse which measures 19¾ hands high and tips the beam at 2,690 pounds. He is 5 years old.

When an Addison, Me., woman called last week on relatives living only a mile away whom she hadn't visited for 20 years, they thought the world must be coming to an end.

At the close of the civil war there were 700 steam vessels entered on the naval register of the United States, but today only 27 of them survive. Of these survivors the most famous is the Kearsarge.

The painting of the cruiser Charleston cost about $20,000. Of course the finest paints had to be used, but part of the heavy expense was due to the fact that the work was much delayed.

In February, 1877, Queen Victoria received from the empress of Brazil a dress woven entirely of spiders' webs, which for fineness and beauty is said to surpass the most splendid silk.

A couple living within one mile of Lithonia, Fla., have been married 40 years, and the husband affirms that he has never kissed his wife. Neither has she ever kissed him. They are the parents of 11 children.

The California honey crop promises to be the largest for many years.

There is a La Marque rosebush at Orange, Cal., that covers a side of a house, measuring 900 square feet. It is at this season a mass of snowy blossoms.

The Legislature of 1891 was in session 156 days, the shortest period, except in 1888, since 1884. In that time it passed 438 acts and 118 resolves.

Our Water Supply.

What was proven at the hearings on the petition of the city for a new water system:

That the plant of the Water Company is a good one, well constructed, of first-rate material, and ample to supply those parts of the city where mains are laid and to carry the extensions required.

That the lay out of the mains has been such as to properly allow for extensions without taking up any main now down. That the water shed above the reservoirs is large enough to supply 30,000 people with 50 gallons of water daily, if sufficient storage basins are made. That the water shed is a remarkably good one and that the few "outs" about it can be easily and cheaply remedied.

That the water now furnished by the Quincy Water Company is better than that furnished to many of the towns in the state by public system.

That the typhoid fever of Quincy comes from the wells and not from the water furnished by the Quincy Water Company, there being only about one case in fifteen from houses using the Quincy water, and those not attributable to the water.

That the total amount of impurities is only about four grains per gallon, most of that too, being entirely harmless. That the water is steadily improving. That the Company went about its business in a purely business manner, and as a permanent thing.

That when more than a million and a half gallons of water are needed daily, the water from Blue Hill river can be brought into Town brook by cutting a channel that will cost not over $1500, and that the surveys to determine the connecting of the two sources of supply had been made three years ago by the Quincy Water Company. That the organization of the Water Company was open to the public, and that for nearly three months the public was invited to become stockholders.

For the Patriot.

A Song.

Some poets sing of gentle spring,
Of fragrant rose-lipped June,
Some, of the pensive autumn days,
With golden harvest moon;
A royal queen shall be my theme,
I sing with pride today,
The tender grace of her fair face,
Our own bright Quincy bay?

I've roamed entranced through flowery
France,
Through olive groves of Spain,
And 'neath the blue Italian skies
With joy akin to pain.
Amid it all thy witching thrall,
More potent far than they,
Recalls my heart with subtle art,
Thou dear old Quincy bay!!

In summer's smile or winter's frown,
Of queens thou art the gem,
The sunshine is thy regal crown,
The stars thy diadem,
Eternal hills send down their rills,
To bathe thy throne each day,
The night winds rest on thy calm breast,
Majestic Quincy bay!!

WHY SHE DIED.

"Died, September 4th, 18—, Agnes, wife of the Rev. George Maynard, in her thirty-second year. Funeral on Friday at the Brick church. The remains may be viewed at the parsonage on Friday from ten to twelve A. M." Thus ran the notice in the Blanktown Bulletin, and thus, and thus only, for the most part, was it brought to the knowledge of the Rev. George Maynard's parishioners that his wife had passed away. Some shook their heads and sighed, as they thought of the motherless babies, four, five now, so rumor said, who were to be left to the mercies of the cold world; but some, and these were by no means a majority, more than hinted that perhaps this dispensation of Providence had been a fortunate one. "She was never any help to him," so the comments ran; "always taken up with her babies and her sewing, and her everlasting reading;" this with a bitter contempt, for the Blank-town people were not distinguished for a cultivated literary taste. "Poor Mr. Maynard has had his own troubles, no doubt; if he only had a wife like Amanda Berry, now, so brisk and lively, and never missin' a prayer-meetin' or sewin' society; well, well, there's no tellin' what may happen yet, though, to be sure, it's soon to talk of such things, and the funeral not over."

And thus, before poor Agnes' mortal frame was robed for burial, the tongues of those who had helped to ruin her life, planned and gossipped of her successor; it was the old story, "Le roi est mort, Vive le roi!" Poor Agnes had not been a success in her recent position; she was little fitted, by taste or training, for the burdens that congregations of the brick church variety wish to lay upon the unfortunate being who comes among them in the unappreciated and unsalaried capacity of the clergyman's wife, and though she made some futile attempts to please at first, they were received with such marked disapproval,—as being so "entirely different from dear Mrs. Harris' methods," —that she finally gave it up and went back to her work, and solaced her lonely hours with the "readin'" which the good housewives of the church so unanimously condemned.

Not that, according to her light, she neglected the social duties which she had been taught belonged to a lady; she returned her calls promptly; she accepted the invitations that came, when her health permitted; she was constant at church when "the baby"—there was always a baby—allowed; but this was not enough, nor was it enough that, ill or well, busy or at leisure, she received all who came, young and old, rich and poor, with a gentle graciousness and courtesy which, it would seem, should have gone far toward overcoming the prejudice which had sprung up against her. She could not make it seem her duty to go to "meetings," and "boards," and circles" all day and every day, as did the wife of the Rev. Dr. Harris, who had preceded Mr. Maynard in the spiritual control at the brick church flock, and who was held up to her daily and hourly as a model of all the virtues; to be sure, it had more than been hinted in Dr. Harris' time that "he had the worst boys in town; they were a disgrace to the church," and dire tales of undarned hose and buttonless coats went the rounds of the congregation; but those minor sins were all forgotten now in the glory of Mrs. Harris' past achievements as "an organizer." Poor Agnes bore no ill-will toward the worthy institutions or projects which these boards and committees represented; she was willing to join them one and all, and to give to them, also, from the meagre pin money which the occasional wedding fees—the only perquisites of a minister's wife—afforded her, but time she had not to give, and so could not give to those things. "They must be left to people with fewer cares and more money," she said, with her pretty air of dignity,—making no secret of her limited resources, and thinking how George had told her in the days of their engagement that "she need not worry about the work, he would do all that; her work was to be only for him." She had never dreamed that he would turn against her, and join with the outside world in finding fault that she could not live the lives of the two women at once.

But so it had been; gradually, as the cares and illnesses that came thick and fast took the youthful beauty from his wife's face, as the ever increasing babies rendered the parsonge a less quiet and pleasant place to abode, so gradually Mr. Maynard began to look upon his wife with the eyes of his parishioners, and to regard her as the failure they pronounced her.

And so the end came; coming in one night cold and tired from a round of calls, and irritated by the reiterated inquiries as to why "his wife never came to see them?" and "was Mis' Maynard never coming out to meetin' again?" and the veiled sympathy with his own hard lot,—on which the ladies of the brick church were always ready to condole with him—he waited, as men will, until he reached home to give vent to the annoyance which filled his mind so much as to blind him to all other things. Thus it happened that the unusual pallor of his wife's face escaped his notice, and her half-apologetic mention of a "bad chill this morning," his ears, as he confronted her, full of righteous purpose to "speak his mind for once." "Agnes," he said, all the hoarded irritation speaking in manner as well as voice, "you must try to do something in the future toward filling your position; wherever I go I hear nothing but complaints of your nonfulfilment of your duties, and I must beg that you will not give my people and myself any further grounds for them."

Agnes answered never a word. Pale and trembling she turned from him and went up to her room, which she was never to leave alive, leaving him to pass on to the cheerful, brightly-lighted dining-room, and to hear from the children how "mamma had told them that it was the anniversary of her own and papa's wedding-day, and they had a surprise for him; such a nice supper, and flowers, and, papa, such a pretty dressing-gown for you; mamma said she would rather spend the money grandma sent her for it than to have a nice dress for herself, and, papa, where is mamma?:'

Ah, yes, where was mamma? When Mr. Maynard, repentant and unhappy, hurried to her room, he found her lying unconscious upon the floor, from which the hastily summoned physician roused her, only to see her fall from one convulsion into another, until at midnight word came to the startled household that the tired spirit of the mother had gone home, leaving behind her another feeble baby to add sorrow to her sorrowing husband's heart.

And so her life was ended, and there were none to care, it seemed, except the widowed mother, who came too late to kiss the living lips of her favorite daughter, and who, stunned by her grief, refused to leave the side of the casket, even when the parlor doors were open to those who came to give a last look and a last word to the marble-like woman whom neither love nor hate, praise nor blame could help or harm any more. One after another, the solemn procession filed by; here a group of the children of the neighborhood escaped from nurses and parents, determined to have one more look at the face of the "sweet lady," as they called her, who had ever had a smile and a kindly word for them; following, in ludicrous contrast, came a colored laundress bearing her baby, and whispering low to it as she bent over the casket, "Look at her, honey, look close, and try to 'member you's'll nebber see her like in dis worl'; ah, but she was kind to de poor."

A group of gay young girls came next, and half fearfully gazed at the unconscious form, whispering to each other how much they had "liked" her. "She did not seem like a minister's wife," they said, but would "talk about parties and dresses, just like a girl herself, and never a bit of 'preaching'; it was a pleasure to stay at her house and some way you always felt better, too, for having been there."

And so, one after another, the solemn procession filed by, young men from the mills and shops, who bent reverent heads to look on the calm face which had never been too proud to smile on them, no matter how begrimed and toilworn they might be. An old colored servant and an Irish one, who had left her house, the one to go to the dignity of her "own floor," and the other to be married, came arm in arm, jealousy and race prejudice forgotten in their common grief; "she was such an easy lady, the girl would have been hard to please that couldn't get along with her.

Few of the passers noticed the pallid face and black-robed figure of the bereaved mother, and their words fell on her ears like the knell of the funeral bell, already pealing from the brick church tower. Agnes was dead! of what avail were these kind words now, of what value were these tears? could they unseal the blind eyes, and open the deaf ears of the woman to whom the battle of life had proved too hard, and who, tired of the struggle, had gone home to God? "Ah," she said to herself, "why could not some of this have come to her when she was alive; she thought no one in all the city cared whether she lived or died." Poor mother! she could not remember in her sorrowing disappointment over her daughter's broken life the sweet promise, that those who "cast their bread upon the waters" shall find it "after many days," and we may believe that Agnes, the living Agnes, "in her father's mansion," heard and understood, and was comforted.

Has my story a moral, my reader? Ah, yes, a common moral,—there are many Agnes Maynards in the world,—and if you do not find it in the careworn face and depreciating manner of your own minister's wife, be not too sure that your neighbor might not see it written on the brows of hers.

A Fire Dog.

The fire-dogs of New York deserve mention. Bravery is a very common quality among these active, bright-eyed dogs. Bluff is a typical fire-dog. He belongs to Capt. Peaslie, who is justly fond of his big Newfoundland. Bluff has not overcome his bad habit of jumping up and barking at the horses and looking back at them while running to a fire. This habit causes much anxiety to his master, who has lost two dogs that were run over while indulging in this trick. He evinces the greatest disgust when his boon companions, the fire-laddies, clean the engine-house, and when the place is inundated with water and soapsuds he abandons his friends and sits on the opposite side of the street, growling, showing his teeth and manifesting his displeasure in a hundred and one disagreeable ways. He goes regularly to one of the large hospitals, which is quite near his engine-house, and carries home a small basket of bones for his breakfast. One day, just after the kitchen-door had been shut behind him, he heard the alarm sound in the engine-house. Dropping his basket, he barked furiously, and jumped up at the door. The frightened cook, thinking that the dog had gone mad, hastened to open the door, just as the engine dashed out of the engine-house. Off ran the breakfastless Bluff in hot pursuit. Once at a fire he rushed into one of the rooms of a tenement house and, picking up a baby that lay in its cradle forgotten, carried it down the stairs, his teeth firmly fastened in the child's long clothes. He was hailed with cheers of delight by the firemen, none of whom had seen the child.—Illustrated American.

A Foreign Letter.

PARIS, May 24, 1891.

MY DEAR FRIEND: After leaving Malaga in Spain, we went to Gibralter, Tangiers, Cadiz, Seville, Granada, Cordova, Madrid and then to Paris, where we are now stopping for a time. At Gibralter we saw the fortifications of the famous rock of Gibralter. In Tangiers, Morocco, we saw another fortification, and one in Cairo, also. In Cadiz we visited the large markets and the ancient cathedral, and in Seville the Alcazar, an old Moorish palace.

In Granada we saw first, of course, the celebrated Alhambra; I thought the building very interesting. We saw the tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella in the cathedral at Seville, and their palace too. I forgot almost to say that we saw a bull fight in Seville and I would not enjoy seeing another.

In Cordova we visited the cathedral, which is very large and very old, also many other interesting objects. In Madrid we visited the royal armory and stables, they were great sights. In the stables we saw the state coaches of mahogany, ornamented with silver, tortoise shell and ebony. There are 150 carriages in all. We took the train le luxe right from Madrid to Paris, where we have been staying since the 18th of this month.

My mother, I am sorry to say, is not well at present. We hope she will soon be well again. We think of turning our steps next towards Russia, and expect to be back in New York during September.

I am enjoying my stay in Paris very much, and I have three American boys to play with here. *I hope the number of prisoners is getting smaller in the New York prisons, but I am afraid it is not.

We are to leave this beautiful city in about a week. So far we have not done much sightseeing in Paris, we have only seen the Louvre and have been to Versailles.

I shall be happy to receive another letter from you. Please address me at Paris and your letter will be forwarded to me wherever we shall be. I will now close this letter hoping it will interest you, and I remain,

Your affectionate young friend,
BRUCE MCLEAN FALCONER.

*This kind and thoughtful allusion to the prisoners is explained by the fact that Bruce took great pleasure in visiting them with his father, going from cell to cell and giving the prisoners books and papers to teach them in an attractive way the precepts of a Christian life. The bright face and gentle voice of this superior youth, I am sure, have proved a blessing to many wayward and wicked men who have seen him in the house of bondage. J. B. G. H.

Ideas.

Down in a certain district, the story began, there lived a saddler who wanted to become a politician. So he secured his appointment as a sub-elector, who in our country means a man who can make speeches, but for whom no one can vote. Well, this young harness-maker started off to make speeches and he ended his campaign in the Democratic stronghold of the district.

The hall which he had hired proved too small, and he went out under an oak tree, prepared, as he says, to shake the acorns. In the front row of the crowd sat Major Blank, the bell-wether of the Democratic flock. The amateur orator was vastly pleased. "If I can make an impression on the major, he said, "my political fortune is made."

After a great display of oratorial fireworks, during which he kept his eye on the major, he descended from the improvised platform on the side nearest the major, who, much to his delight, beckoned to him.

"I have heard the greatest orator," said the major, "and never before did I see the fire of eloquence kindled as it has in your eyes today——"

"Oh, thank you," said the blushing orator.

"And your gesticulations were perfect. If I had been deaf I should have understood all that you said——"

"I am delighted," murmured the saddler.

"And your voice is as musical as a deep-toned church bell——"

"You flatter me, major," interrupted the listener again, "you flatter me."

"And if you only had some ideas, young man," concluded the major, with crushing emphasis, "just some ideas, you would beat the world!"—Exchange.

Change of Occupation.

As for the feeling that we need rest, rest, rest, it is often a fallacious one. It is action which makes muscle. The spirit of life enters into us when we take a vital part in today. Often we suffer from rest. A change of occupation is what we most need, as a rule, and the relief hours of an active person turn out to be very intelligent. We must rest, but we need not lose our electricity, which the will, the thought, can command at all times, and which ought to be on guard, like an orderly, to summon up when we should become alert.

Headaches evaporate if we must exert ourselves for those we love, or we almost forget the pain, which is the same thing, and ill temper cannot flourish unless we have idleness in which to reflect upon the motes belonging to some one else. With energy leading the way, ennui lifts from the horizon, and we see color and distance again. There are women who labor day by day in hunger and despair. It seems as if others might labor in comfort and health, instead of sitting down to lassitude and sighs.—Harper's Bazar.

Giving Animal Food to Infants.

There is no greater error in the management of children than that of giving them animal diet very early. To feed an infant with solid animal food before it has teeth proper for masticating, shows a total disregard of the plain indications of nature in withholding teeth suited to this purpose until the age at which the system requires solid food. Before that time, milk, farinaceous food and animal broths afford the kind of sustenance which is at once best suited to the digestive organs and to the nutrition of the system.

The method of mincing and pounding meat as a substitute for mastication may do very well for the toothless octogenarian whose stomach has been habituated to concentrated nutriment, but the digestive organs of a child are not adapted to the due preparation of such food, and will be disordered by it.—Hall's Journal of Health.

CITY COUNCIL.

There were three absentees from the regular meeting of the City Council Monday evening—Councilmen Morton, Rinn, and Roberts.

Public Property.

A communication of Mayor Fairbanks enclosed an inventory of the city property, which was received and placed on file and ordered to be printed in the next city book. It was a lengthy, interesting and valuable document, and was printed in the DAILY LEDGER of Thursday.

Monthly Reports.

City Treasurer Adams and City Auditor Hall submitted their monthly reports which were referred to the Committee on Finance without reading.

Licenses and State Aid.

An application of Peter Donlin for a pool license was referred to the Committee on Licenses.

The Committee on State recommended the following monthly payments: To Mrs. F. R. Chubbuck, $6; to Michael Early, $4; to Aaron Leavitt, $4. Adopted.

Election on Sewer Act.

The Committee on Elections recommended the submittance of the Sewer Act to the people, and offered an order for the issue of warrants for an election Aug. 27.

Councilman Bryant opposed a special election. He did not think the people were sufficiently enlightened on the plan, and suggested that meetings be held and that the act and plan be printed.

Chairman Duffield said the committee had reported on the matter by order of the Council. He was in favor of a special election as it would keep the matter free from party politics at the annual election.

Councilman Bryant moved to lay on the table.

Councilman Pratt opposed; the act should be accepted if possible before streets were permanently rebuilt.

Councilman Fallon favored laying on the table.

Councilman Bryant did not think any level could be obtained which would be of use this year even if act was accepted at the time proposed.

The motion to lay on the table was lost by a vote of 6 yeas, 11 nays. The yeas were Councilmen Bryant, Drake, Gray, Fallon and Little.

Field Drivers Elected.

The Committee on Elections reported the following candidates for field drivers, and other offices, to which they were respectively elected:

Field Drivers—Charles G. Nichol, Patrick Conners, Samuel DeForest, Daniel R. McKay, Mark E. Hanson, Daniel McGrath.

Measurers of Wood and Bark—Frank S. Patch, Herbert B. Adams, Harry H. Safford, Thomas J. Foley, A. L. Baker, Frank E. Badger.

Fence Viewers — Charles S. French, Ebenezer Adams, James Nightingale, John R. O'Neil, Quincy A. Faunce, Cephas Drew.

Water Street Hearing.

At 8.15 as advertised a public hearing on the widening of Water street to forty feet was held.

President Thompson read the preamble and order and the return of the officer who had notified the abutters, and invited all persons at interest to speak on the matter.

H. H. Faxon desired to see the plans, and a recess of five minutes was taken for that purpose.

Mr. Faxon then wanted to be enlightened by the Committee on Streets, but no statement was forthcoming. He hoped the street would be widened to 45 feet certain, saying it would cost but little more to move a building ten feet than five feet. Delays were dangerous, and anything less than 45 feet was a mistake. The street should now be laid out wide, even if not built at present.

Miss Kincaide spoke for her mother, an abutter. The widening as proposed would cause great damage to her estate, as both the house and store must be moved, which would seriously injure her business. Four valuable trees would be spoiled. She did not think necessity demanded that that portion between Franklin street and the railroad should be widened.

Chairman Jones of the Committee thought the Council was not required to make a report at this time. The hearing was to hear abutters relative to damage to their estates, etc. Later the Council would decide how the work should be done and what damages should be paid.

Mr. Faxon who owns a valuable estate on the corner, believed it would be benefitted by a wider street. Did not care if fifteen feet was taken, if he was paid pro rata with others. To Councilman Fallon who enquired how much he valued his land he said 30 cents, but would accept 15 cents if others were paid pro rata, or even 8 cents. Believed estate would be worth more if street was 45 feet rather than 40 feet. It was not extravagant to widen to a proper width and it should be done at once in one job. No street should be less than 45 feet. Water street was going to be a main thoroughfare.

Mr. McDonnell did not oppose the widening, but it would be a great damage to his business, and he wanted to know what damages he was to receive.

Councilman Bryant asked him for an estimate of his damage, but he was non-committal.

The hearing closed, and Councilman Jones moved that the whole matter be recommitted to the Committee on Streets to assess damages and report an order.

Electric Freight Railway.

The Committee on Streets at the request of the chairman has granted permission to hold a five minute session, and the Council took a recess.

On its return the committee reported in favor of a public hearing on the petition of the Quincy Electric Freight Company for August 3.

Councilman Pratt opposed this undue haste. The matter should first be investigated by the Committee on Streets. Moved to lay report on the table.

Councilman Bryant thought hearing would bring out facts wanted, and Councilman Holden believed hearing desirable.

Councilman Moxon said the Legislature had practically given the location, but the Council could if it saw fit, surround it with restrictions. Believed committee should first investigate and report.

Councilman Jones did not think a hearing would commit the Council, and was at the same time opposed to rushing it through.

Councilman Pratt said it was to get an opinion from the City Solicitor as to whether the Council must grant the location, that he moved to lay on the table.

Councilman Bryant changed his mind on a public hearing. It was required that a hearing should be held before a location could be secured. After it had been held the Council would have no check, and he therefore favored postponing the hearing.

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1891.

TELEPHONE 54-3, QUINCY.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton,
Friday, July 10, 2 P. M.

Indications for Saturday: Fair and warmer.

H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

Ladies' Day, Q. Y. C.

Ladies' Day will be observed by the Quincy Yacht Club on Tuesday, July 14. It is intended especially for the entertainment of the members who are not yacht owners and the lady guests of the Club. No pains will be spared to make the occasion thoroughly enjoyable, and the committee in charge of the arrangements hope that there will be a large attendance of the members and their friends.

There will be a review of the yachts belonging to the club, beginning at 3 P. M. The Commodore's yacht will be anchored off the club house, and at a signal the yachts will pass in review. The review will be followed by a sailing excursion, in which the lady guests of the club will be invited to participate. Upon the return to the club house, which will be at about half past five o'clock, ice cream and coffee will be served, after which there will be dancing until eleven. It is particularly desired that the hop shall be considered informal and, as requiring no more elaboration of toilet than on the deck of a yacht or tennis court.

There will be music at the club house afternoon and evening.

Yacht owners who do not have a full complement of guests are requested to place their yachts at the disposal of the House Committee.

Orders to Yacht Captains.

At three o'clock a warning gun will be fired from flagship Christine, Commodore Shaw, which will be a signal to the yachts to assemble to the windward of the flagship in such a position as directed by the Fleet Captain.

Fifteen minutes later a second gun will be fired as a signal for the fleet to pass in review. After passing the flagship yachts will proceed over the course, which will be communicated to the captains by the fleet captain prior to the review, and return to the Club house.

Vice Commodore Sanborn, of the steam yacht Fairy has been appointed acting Fleet Captain for the day.

Workingmen's Trains.

An enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of West Quincy was held Thursday evening at the store of S. B. Little, on Copeland street.

Some few weeks ago a petition containing the signatures of 238 of the citizens of this ward was forwarded to the Old Colony asking that workingmen's trains be established between West Quincy and Boston, and word having been received from the management that they were willing to receive a committee to discuss the subject, this meeting was called to appoint that committee.

Mr. T. L. Williams was chairman of the meeting, and Mr, J. E. Woddick, secretary Remarks were made on the subject by Councilman Little, Messrs. T. L. Williams, George L. Miller, James White, S. B. Little, D. H. Fitzgerald, and others.

It was decided that the best time for the to run was to leave West Quincy at 6.15 A. M., and leave Boston at 6.20 P. M.

The following committee was then appointed to wait upon the management:—George L. Miller, T. L. Williams and Peter J. Donahoe.

After the business in relation to the workingmen's trains had been completed, a preliminary meeting was held in regard to the formation of a business association to be known as the Citizens' Association of West Quincy. Several of the gentlemen present spoke on the subject and pledged themselves to do all they could to enthuse the citizens of this ward in the formation of the above association.

The gentlemen present decided to call a meeting for next Tuesday evening, which will be held at Donohoe's hall at 8 o'clock, when officers will be elected and the benefits of such an organization will be fully discussed. A general invitation is given to all interested to be present at this meeting.

City Property.

The inventory of city property submitted to the City Council by Mayor Fairbanks is a valuable document, and if followed by future administrations will show the progress of the city year by year in the accumulation of city property. The last inventory on record is that of 1865, when the total was $93,250; the town then had a population of 6,718 and a valuation of $3,854,150. Five years previous the population was 6,788, valuation $3,716,850, and value of city property $63,200. In 1890 the population was 16,711 and valuation $13,677,410.

In twenty-five years the population has increased 9,993, two and one-half times; the valuation $9,823,260, over three and one-half times; and the value of city property $313,172.68, over four and one-third times.

In 1860 if the public property was divided among the citizens each would have received $9.31. In 1865, the amount would have been $13.86. Today, on a basis of 17,000 population, $23.90.

Some may argue that other property might be included in the inventory; for example, the Neponset bridge. Then the highways are increasing in length and being improved; certainly they are known as "city ways." Thus there is much public property which is not, and cannot well be included in an inventory.

Following is the inventory presented by Mayor Fairbanks:

Central Fire Station.

The main building is of granite and was formerly used as a schoolhouse, which was built in 1829 at a cost of $1142, including the land. Additional land was afterwards purchased for $500. Building arranged in 1882 for the use of the fire department.

Free Delivery.

Inspector Stoddard of the Post Office Department is on here from Washington to advise the department as to what action to take regarding the extension of the free delivery system to all parts of the city.

There is a slight opposition in Wollaston, but when the remonstrants in that ward understand that the government will not give Atlantic free delivery unless Wollaston also has it, the opposition will without doubt be withdrawn.

Atlantic is a unit in favor of free delivery and it is to be regretted, if it is to be thwarted in this by the conservatism of a few Wollaston people. Wollaston is always foremost in advocating radical public improvements, and it seems incongruous to hear of its opposing the extension of the free delivery and of its hindering other wards in the enjoyment of that much sought privilege.

—The annual meeting of the National Editorial Association is to be held in St. Paul, July 14-17, and the prospects are that it will be the largest gathering of newspaper men ever seen in this country. The annual address will be delivered on the evening of the 14th by Mr. A. H. Siegfried, Eastern business manager of the Chicago Daily News, whose subject will be "A Criticism of the Counting room." Mr. George W. Prescott and daughter, Miss Annie, of this city, left yesterday to attend the convention.

—Rev. H. Price Collier of Brooklyn, N. Y., will preach to the Cadets in camp at Hingham on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Milton Rice of Hyde Park gave a very pretty party Saturday evening at their residence on Beacon street. Among those present were the following from Quincy: Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Rice, Miss May Rice, Mr. Fred B. Rice, Miss Kitty Faxon, Mr. Henry M. Faxon, and Mr. Charles Price.

On the occasion of the visit of the Antiquarian Society last week the tomb of the Presidents Adams was opened, the first time in thirty years we are informed. Many Quincy people have curiosity to visit this tomb, but have never had the opportunity. It is about thirty feet by fifteen feet and very simple.

It don't look as though the City Council would get a vacation this summer. It has already adjourned to July 20, and a hearing and election are proposed for August. Important matters are also under consideration which cannot well be delayed. If the evenings are as comfortable as Monday, little objection can be raised on account of heat.

Two horses of Austin & Winslow's express at separate times Tuesday were thrown down in Fountain Square, probably by electric shocks. Men were engaged in putting up the crane for the new fountain and the wire guy which the horse touched is thought to have also touched the trolley wire of the electric railway.

Mr. George H. Locke leaves today for Deerfield Centre, N. H. He will stop at the old homestead and will enjoy many hours among the scenes of his boyhood. If you wish to see him at his favorite game take a run down to the Owl club's grounds on South street, Quincy Point, where he can be seen almost every evening indulging in this wholesome recreation with the other members of that famous club.

The timetable of the Quincy Point route has been corrected since last week; look out for changes.

May Result Seriously.

A sad and painful accident which may result in the loss of an eye to the victim, occurred on Saturday afternoon on North street. It seems that Master John McGuane lighted a fire-cracker, but it failing to go off, he picked it up to ascertain whether or no it was lighted, when suddenly without any warning it exploded and striking him in the eye, burnt it in a terrible manner the eye-lash and eye-brow being completely burnt off. He was carried to Dr. Donovan's office, who alleviated the boy's sufferings as far as was in his power. It is now thought that the eye-sight will not be lost.

Coming Picnics.

Engagements to date for Lovell's grove and barge Clifford are: Gardeners and Florist Club of Boston, July 21; Wollaston village picnic, July 8; Lithographers Union, Aug. 1; Boston lodge I. O. S. B. 80, Aug. 2; Entrachet lodge 19, Aug. 9; Vine Associates, Aug. 17; Scandanavian mechanics of Boston, July 12; Evening Star Fishing Club, Aug. 23, and Hibernians of Quincy, July 25.

Badly Scalded.

Wednesday evening, at the supper hour, on the schooner M. A. Powers, at Patch's wharf, Quincy Point, Andrew Phillips, the cook, passed a pot of boiling hot tea out of the window to two seamen whose names are A. Holmes and A. Trenslberg. One of the two, it is not known which, seized the pot and dashed the contents on the cook whose neck and back were badly scalded. The two men then fled and their whereabouts is not at present known, but a warrat for their arrest has been taken out and placed in the hands of officer Nichol, who has gone to Boston in hopes to find them there.

The injured man was taken to his home in Fall River.

The only cause given for the affair was that the men had been drinking.

Electric Car Accident.

The electric car number 19 with Jerry McCarthy at the motor and Conductor George Dunham met with a serious accident on its noon trip from the Point, Thursday. It left the Point with seven passengers and ran smoothly until it came near Chubbuck street, when from some unknown reason it left the track and plunged down an embankment on the side of the road, and it was a miracle that it did not capsize altogether. Motorman McCarthy stood bravely at his post until the car was brought to a stop.

Several lady passengers fainted, and a gentleman from North Weymouth was reported to have been seriously injured, but this rumor could not be verified. Superintendent Weeks was soon on the spot with a wrecking gang, and the very minute he arrived he threw off his coat and was one of the hardest workers there. After three hours of hard labor the car was placed upon the track with the assistance of ropes, pulleys, and horses which Frank S. Patch kindly loaned. The escape of the passengers from serious injury is considered miraculous.

Nantasket Trains.

The large number of Quincy people who went to Nantasket on the Fourth were disgusted with the train accommodations when homeward bound. They left the beach at 5.55, arrived at Braintree about 6.30 and had to wait then until 7.06. They might have left the beach at 4.25, but this was too early, while the 7.30 was too late. The 5.55 from Nantasket should stop at Quincy, and at 6.30 P. M. would be a convenient Boston train.

WEST QUINCY.

The St. Mary's play the Electrics of Lynn at Lynn, today.

Georgie, the two year old son or Chief Engineer Ripley, is quite sick.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hearn of West Quincy entertained a number of Mr. Hearn's gentlemen business friends at their residence on Copeland street, Wednesday evening. The evening was pleasantly passed with music, games and a banquet.

At the West Quincy M. E. church the pastor, Rev. J. H. Humphrey, preached Sabbath morning from the text, "This is the victory which overcometh the world even in faith—I John, v. 4. In the evening the usual monthly consecration meeting was held by the Epworth League, after which the pastor gave a familiar talk on the subject, "How may I know the will of God?" The series of Sunday evening talks being given by the pastor is well received, as is shown by the good attendance and the interest manifested.

The principal event the Fourth was the festival of St. Mary's Sunday school, which was held in a mammoth tent in the field near the church.

There was a third hearing of the creditors of I. H. & E. H. Cushing, contractors for the Willard schoolhouse, at Plymouth, Monday. Adjourned to September.

Patrick D. Young a quarryman employed at the Braintree Red Granite Company's quarry was blown up by a premature blast Monday and severely burned about his face and arms. Dr. Dearing dressed the wounds.

Herbert Boutin, a clerk, employed by E. H. Doble & Co., had a narrow escape from a serious accident Monday afternoon. He was driving a delivery team along Crescent street, when the horse suddenly shied and struck a telegraph pole throwing him violently to the ground; he however escaped with a general shaking up. The force of the blow was enough to plow a deep furrow in the pole and break the shaft.

St. Marys Reorganize.

The St. Marys ball team held a meeting Monday evening and reorganized with John Reardon as temporary manager, and James Gilraine as treasurer. The players and their positions now, are as follows;

SOUTH QUINCY.

M. J. Heany and wife were in town this week visiting relatives at Quincy Adams.

A little two year old child of William Dickie accidentally fell into the pond near Spear's ice-house Thursday afternoon, and would have been drowned but for the prompt assistance by workmen employed near by.

The Stars of South Quincy, would like a game with any strong boy's nine, in or out of Quincy. Address William Walsh, No. 7, Water street, South Quincy, Mass.

Miss Annie Donovan, a sister of Senator E. J. Donovan of Boston, is a guest of her cousin, Miss Annie Kelliher on Quincy avenue.

Mrs. James Pollock, of New York, formerly of this city, is visiting her parents.

Mr. Richard Brooks has gone to Cottage City for a week' vacation.

Miss Kincaide, who spoke at the City Council meeting Monday evening, was we believe the first woman to address that august body.

Mr. and Mrs. William Davidson of South Quincy have gone to San Francisco on the Phillips excursion.

Mrs. Charles A. Follett and son, after enjoying a short vacation at North Conway returned home last week. She expects her daughter, Miss Minnie, to return from Europe soon.

Councilman Moxon had at the Council meeting Monday a prospective plan for the new schoolhouse in South Quincy. If adopted it will be a more attractive building than the John Hancock.

Remarkable Monument.

Washington, D. C., July 8, 1891. A remarkable monument which Henry Adams, the historian, son of Charles Francis Adams the great, has just set up over the grave of his wife, who died in 1885 (as was given out at the time) of accidental poisoning due to taking a chemical preparation used in photography by mistake, is attracting the curious to Rock Creek cemetery, and rapidly becoming the talk of the town.

It is an elaborate structure of marble and granite, with an extraordinary bronze figure leaning against a high granite slab, a long, low marble seat facing the figure. The figure is by St. Gaudens, and represents Despair. It is a lifelike woman, heroic size, whose expression and attitude perfectly represent the subject.

It is weirdly fascinating, but it only shocks the venerable rector of Rock Creek church who is trying to devise some way of getting it removed. He fears that it is true, as reported, that Mr. and Mrs. Adams were agnostics, and longs to get their unchristian monument out of his churchyard. —Herald.

At the Emergency Hospital, Boston.

James Gillis, of Quincy, who works for Field & Wild as a handrubber on marble, said he was hit by a brass-knuckle and received a severe compound fracture of the nose, which was reduced at the hospital, Wednesday.—Globe.

A SALARY with expenses paid will come handy to anyone who is now out of employment, especially where no previous experience is required to get the position. If you want a position, see advertisement on page 2 headed, "A chance to make Money."

WOLLASTON.

Deputy E. E. Williamson, of Wollaston, installed the officers of Randolph Lodge Knights of Honor, Wednesday. His suite will consisted of Dictator W. B. Orcutt and P. D. John H. Roberts, of Wollaston Lodge. Grand Reporter Pratt, by special invitation of the installing officers, was present.

The members of Wollaston Lodge, Knights of Honor, made extensive preparations to receive the deputy and suite on Monday evening. An elaborate collation was provided, and the members were out in good numbers only to be disappointed at the failure of Deputy W. I. Small to put in an appearance.

Messrs. H. J. Polk, Frank A. Gordan and Walter L. S. Gilcreast have been visiting in Wollaston this week.

Mr. Frank H. Armstrong who has recently built a summer residence at South Wolfboro, N. H., has named it "Castle Wollaston."

Deputy Williamson and suite, installed the officers of Plymouth Bay Lodge, Knights of Honor, at Plymouth last week Friday evening.

The famous Owl Club was royally entertained on the night of the Fourth at the residences of Mr. Alphonso Williams, Mr. H. T. Whitman, Mr. W. H. Brazee, Mr. Arthur P. Gardner and Mr. A. G. Olney.

Rev. W. B. Eldridge, of Boston, will assist the pastor in the love feast and in the administration of the communion service in the Methodist church, Wollaston, next Sunday morning at 10.45 o'clock. In the evening at 7.00 o'clock Rev. Mr. Freeman will preach a serman to men only. Ladies are kindly requested to make a note of this fact. It is hoped that a large number of men will be present. A short praise service will be held before the sermon. The Sunday school will be held at 12.00 o'clock as usual, and the Epworth League meeting at 6.00 o'clock.

O shun the ocean, was the motto of the picnickers on Wednesday.

Personal.

Dr. George F. Brooks, the well known and very popular physician, of 18 Temple Place, Boston, is very successfully doctoring the families of several citizens of Quincy. Being obliged to make a daily visit to Quincy to see these patients, he would be much pleased to call on others desiring his medical attendance. Names and address may be left at Durgin's drug store. He will charge nothing for his first medical consultation. We copy the following notice of the doctor from the Brookline Chronicle:

"Dr. George F. Brooks has given many years to the successful treatment of the diseases of women, who can be assured of being treated by the very latest scientific methods, and having the greatest interest and consideration given to their cases, and whose testimonials of cures are from the very highest of sources. Fleshy ladies can also be assured of being reduced in weight without the least injury to their health, in a very short space of time and without any inconvenience (such as weakness and the loss of physical strength). Dr. Brooks will be pleased to visit lady patients at their homes, who may not care or be able to visit the doctor at his office at 18 Temple Place. All letters will be considered strictly confidential and will be answered at once."

Thomas Gilligan who was shot the Fourth is improving rapidly.

Mr. Frisbee and family have taken M.D. Lincoln's house on Appleton street.

Councilman Roger Wilde has purchased a fine family horse and easy carriage.

Mrs. Harry W. Reed and children will pass their vacation in Deerfield, Mass.

Mrs. Cephas Drew and daughter, of Atlantic, are among friends on the Cape.

The Old Colony are to erect nine more block signals between Atlantic and Boston.

Mrs. W. H. Leffingwell, of Colorado Springs, is the guest of Mrs. J. H. Yeoman.

Henry Hunt has commenced work on two more new houses on Botolph street.

If the weather is favorable it is safe to predict a grand success for the lawn party Saturday afternoon and evening at Atlantic. Clam chowder, ice cream, cake, music and other good things in proportion. If stormy the party will be held in Memorial chapel.

Mrs. John Carver gave a tiddledywink party to ladies only, Wednesday evening. It has leaked out, however, that a most enjoyable evening was passed, prizes being awarded as follows: first, Mrs. Leffingwell; second, Mrs. Hall; booby, Mrs. Priest.

The annex to Memorial church has been completed and the interior is very attractive. There is a room 20x30 for the use of the primary class of the Sunday School and for smaller gatherings. There is also a large kitchen and toilet room. The walls are tinted in pink and the woodwork in imitation cherry. The work was done by Whittaker Bros., at a cost of about $500. The church is greatly indebted to the Ladies' Benevolent Society which organization has directed the work and assumed the financial responsibility.

It will be five weeks Sunday since Capt. C. B. Newton was taken with apoplexy, and he has not been able to leave his bed since. His recovery is slow.

C. W. Hodgkins mourns the loss of seven dogs which some one poisoned.

George N. Tarr and family have taken Mrs. Parker's house on Atlantic street.

P. P. Coombs and family, of Billings street, have gone to Maine on a short vacation trip.

Capt. Wilson G. Hammond and family have gone to Cottage City for a week.

The interlocking system of switches will be put in at the Atlantic station on the Old Colony immediately.

The threatening weather did not interfere much with the rowing regatta on the Neponset river on the Fourth, although the water was very rough for the contestants. The judges and timers occupied John Duggan's steam launch, Wic-Wy.

Electric Car Accident.

About 6 P. M. Sunday as Mr. and Mrs. Broad, a daughter (Mrs. Walters) and a son, of South Boston, were returning home from a ride, they met with a serious accident on Hancock street just south of the Atlantic bridge. An electric car bound for Quincy met them here. The horse did not appear frightened, but when the car was almost to them, the animal suddenly jumped in front of the car; he cleared himself but left the carriage to be crushed under the car. It was a bad wreck, but the escape was remarkable. Dr. Gilbert who was summoned, discovered only a few scratches.

The first remark of one of the women when she was pulled from the wreck was, "Where's my hat," illustrating again what is uppermost in a lady's thoughts.

No blame is attached to the street railway company. No power was on at the time, as it is customary to shut it off on the down grade. This fact probably saved the occupants of the carriage from getting a shock.

Christ's Church Picnic.

The annual picnic of Christ's Church parish and friends was held Tuesday at the residence of Mr. William Amory, and quite largely attended. Capt. Whitmarsh's yacht was engaged for the day and added much to the pleasure. There was also a series of sports which resulted as follows:

Running race for boys—Fred Peterson first; Joseph Alden second.

Running race for girls—Minnie Datson first; Mary Graham second.

Potato race—Thomas Gould first; Willie Spargo second.

Three-legged race—Willie Cannon and George White, first.

Bag race for boys—Fred Peterson, first; Guy Duffield, second.

Bag race for girls—Annie Graham, first.

Throwing base ball—The prize of a ball was won by John Matson, 304 feet; Fred Peterson second, 171 feet.

Throwing base ball (by girls)—Minnie Maxim, first.

Base ball teams captained by Mr. Mitten and Prof. Wrigley played an interesting game. A prize was awarded to Mr. W. W. Osborne, making the nearest to a home run.

The prizes were the gifts of Henry H. Faxon, Esq.

Little George Curtis was injured accidentally while at play, the wound being dressed scientifically by "Doctor" Mitten.

Clan McGregor Picnic.

Clan McGregor, O. S. C., held its annual picnic at Downer Landing last week Friday, which was largely attended.

A series of sports had been arranged which resulted as follows:

PUTTING SHOT.
W. Marshall, 33 feet, 5 inches.
J. Westland, 33 feet.
J. Copland, 31 feet 4 inches.

THROWING HAMMER.
A. Emslie, 84 feet, 3 inches.
J. Copland, 83 feet.
A. Kemp, 82 feet, 3 inches.

LONG JUMPS.
T. Raleigh, 15 feet 6 inches.
W. Marshal, 15 feet, 2 inches.

HOP, STEP AND JUMP.
W. Marshal, 35 feet, 6 inches.
G. Westland, 35 feet 5½ inches.

HIGH JUMP.
W. Marshal, 4 feet 6 inches.
T. Raleigh, 4 feet 5 inches.
J. Yule, 4 feet 3 inches.

The game of ball between the married and single men of the clan, attracted much attention; both nines had won a game and this was the rubber which was finally won by the single men by the score of 13 to 8.

Electric Freight Railway.

There seems to be a diversity of opinion as to whether the proposed Electric Freight Railway will be a benefit or an injury to this city. At first thought the universal opinion seemed to be that it would be a benefit, but that opinion is now somewhat changed, and many are found who believe that the injury to the streets and private property, and the attending danger would out-balance the benefit. Many are probably ignorant of the exact route, which is not confined to streets, but which for the most part avoids them. It is described as follows in the act of incorporation:

Beginning at a point on the northwesterly side of Weymouth Fore river, near the stone derrick, in that part of said Quincy, known as Quincy Point.

Thence running over private lands and a private way called Wharf street to Washington street.

Thence westerly on Washington street to a point near South street.

Thence over private land to South street.

Thence over South street and Howard street to the head of Bent's creek, so called.

Thence westerly, southwesterly and westerly over private lands, crossing said South street in two places, to New road.

Thence over New road to Quincy avenue and across said Quincy avenue to private lands.

Thence over private lands crossing Phipps street to Franklin street at its intersection with Independence avenue.

Thence crossing said Franklin street and along Independence avenue in a southwesterly direction to a point nearly opposite the pumping station of the Quincy Water Company.

Thence in a westerly direction over private lands and underneath the tracks of the Old Colony Railroad Company to land of the Quincy Water Company.

Thence over lands of the Quincy Water Company and private lands in a northerly direction to Liberty street near its intersection with Brooks road, so called, crossing Lawyers lane.

Thence across Liberty street, making a turn to the left and running over private lands in a general northwesterly course, nearly parallel with Brooks avenue, and across Intervale street to Centre street, near its junction with Albertina street.

Thence across Centre street and along Albertina street, in a general westerly course for about three hundred feet.

Thence in a northwesterly direction over private lands to Station street.

Thence along Station street, and across the location and tracks of the Granite branch of the Old Colony Railroad Company by means of an overhead bridge at said Station street.

Thence over private lands in a northwesterly direction to West street, near Doble street, so called.

Thence across West street and over private lands to Willard street, near a private road leading to the quarries.

Thence along said Willard street in a northerly direction to the West Quincy station of the Granite branch of the Old Colony Railroad Company, but not crossing the tracks of said railroad company.

Then beginning on Willard street, near said West Quincy station, on the northerly side of the tracks of said railroad company.

Thence along Willard street to Rogers street.

Thence along Rogers street for a short distance.

Thence in a northeasterly and easterly direction over private lands and across a branch of Furnace brook to Common street.

Thence across Common street and along Quarry, Granite, School and Marsh streets to the yard of the Old Colony Railroad company near the Quincy Adams station.

Also a branch which leaves the main line at the junction of School and Pleasant streets and runs along Pleasant street to Water street.

Thence along Water street, crossing the tracks and location of the Quincy and Boston Street Railway Company and over private lands to Liberty street.

Thence along Liberty street to a junction with the main line near Brooks road, so called.

Together with all the necessary side tracks and spur tracks to the various quarries, stone sheds, polishing shops and other business establishments along the line, but said Quincy Electric Freight Railway Company shall not take any land of the Old Colony Railroad Company, nor cross its location at grade, without its consent and the consent of the railroad commissioners.

The act provides that the location shall be Subject to Approval of Council

So far as said railway is located in the streets, except so far as therein otherwise provided, in substantial conformity with the above routes. Said company is granted all the powers and privileges and is subject to all the restrictions, duties and liabilities created by the general laws. It is given authority to operate its railway with double or single tracks, sidings and spur tracks. The proceedings for the fixing of the route, location and construction in the streets and keeping the same in repair shall be similar to those prescribed by general laws in relation to street railways and reference to the Public Statutes, Chap. 113, Section 7, shows a public hearing necessary:

The board of aldermen of a city or the selectmen of a town, upon the petition of such directors or a majority thereof for a location of the tracks of the railway therein, shall give notice to all parties interested by publication in newspapers or otherwise as they may determine, at least fourteen days before their meeting, of the time and place at which they will consider such location, and after a hearing they shall pass an order refusing such location, or granting the same or any portion thereof under such restrictions as they deem the interests of the public may require; and the location thus granted shall be deemed and taken to be the true location of the tracks of the railway, if an acceptance thereof by said directors in writing is filed with said mayor and aldermen or selectmen within thirty days after receiving notice thereof.

Other proceedings are necessary to take private property, similar to those prescribed by general law in relation to railroads.

The route runs largely through unoccupied land, and for the most part unproductive. According to the Assessors' plans the following are some of the estates traversed:

Sheppard & Barker.
Mrs. Charles E. Tower.
Unknown
Peter Malone.
Henry H. Faxon.
Terrance Keenan.
Mr. ——— Collins.
L. S. Dabney, attorney.

Fourth of July.

Another Fourth of July has come and gone, and many a property owner has drawn a long sigh of relief that his buildings remain intact and that another twelve months will have to pass before Young America will again make night hideous and quiet sleep impossible by the noise which his patriotic spirit prompts him to make.

The Fourth in Quincy was passed rather quietly except for the occasional explosion of a firecracker and the ringing of the Old Church bell at sunrise, noon and sunset. But not so "the night before."

The smaller boys thronged the streets early in the evening, especially in the Centre, and heralded the coming day with horns and crackers; these boys kept things lively until 11 o'clock, when the older boys began to congregate and at 1 o'clock there was the largest and noisest crowd around the old town pump seen for a number of years. Many of these came from Boston on the late trains and were well supplied with firecrackers and fire water, a combination which kept the large police force on duty busy, and kept the citizens who lived in that neighborhood from obtaining their necessary sleep. Many sat up all night and watched their property, as there was no knowing what a gang like that would take it into their heads to do. This forethought saved Albert Keating the loss of his lumber yard.

Mr. Keating was secreted at his wharf keeping a diligent watch over his property and was all ready for the crowd which came silently into his yard in the early morning and began preparations for a huge bonfire between two large piles of lumber. The crowd went to work and piled up a large pile of old boxes, entirely unconscious that Mr. Keating's watchful eye was upon them. He remained quiet until one of the young men lit a match and was about to apply it to the combustibles, when he drew his revolver and fired several shots into the crowd. This caused them to scatter. A little later they set fire to a lot of boxes in the middle of the street which had just begun to burn freely when a crowd of a hundred or more came down Washington street with Tisdale's watering cart which they intended to burn, but were under such headway that they could not stop and they went nearly to the top of the hill, turning round they came down on the run and turning into Canal street dumped the cart into the canal.

Meanwhile another crowd were at work in different streets, pulling down fences and overturning outbuildings; one crowd even going so far as to pull down part of the stone wall in front of Mr. Anderson's and Mr. Hunt's places on Granite street.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 4 o'clock Officer Nichol was informed that the saw-mill of J. F. Sheppard & Sons, near the railroad track, was on fire, and an alarm was pulled in from box 26. The department quickly responded and soon had the flames extinguished. The parties had entered the building and started a fire in the centre of a large pile of pine kindling wood.

At West Quincy

It was comparatively quiet. The overturning of a lamp in the house of James Quinn on Grove street occasioned the alarm from box 47 at 3.40 o'clock, but this was extinguished with a small loss.

At Atlantic

A shooting affair took place which may result seriously. A crowd of young men and boys had been tormenting Thomas Brady, who lives on Hancock street, near Ramsdell's store. He finally lost control of his temper, and rushing into the house, came to the door with a gun which was loaded with duck shot and fired into the crowd. Four of the shot entered the right side of Thomas Gilligan, a young man about 18 years of age, employed at the electric car house. Doctors Donovan of Quincy and Fifield and Padula of Neponset were called, and the injured man taken to his home, where the shot were probed for. Two of them were removed, but the remaining two had not been taken out at last accounts. Dr. Fifield now has charge of the case, but whether it will result fatally or not cannot as yet be foretold. Brady was promptly arrested by Officers McGrath, Holloran and Maxwell and taken to the police station at Quincy, where he was subsequently bailed out.

At South Quincy.

About 12.30 A. M., Alexander Williams, a stonecutter who boards on Liberty street while under the influence it is said of intoxicants, was struck by an outward freight train at the Water street railroad crossing. The ambulance was called and he was taken to his home where Dr. McLellan made an examination and found that his hip was somewhat bruised but no bones broken.

At Wollaston.

Wollaston was not disgraced with but one act of disgraceful vandalism this Fourth. Mayor Fairbanks foresight in appointing a large number of special officers had the desired effect.

The one act of vandalism which was referred to, was the breaking into and entering of the Baptist church. The object was to ring the bell, but the sexton had anticipated the boys and removed the tongue of the bell to a place of safety.

Capt. Merrill of the Wollaston Hotel had a fine display of fireworks and an excellent band concert, in the evening.

At Quincy Point.

In the afternoon of the Fourth Frank Pray, of Quincy Point, was celebrating with cannon crackers when one of them exploded in his hand lacerating it in a horrible manner.

At Houghs Neck.

During the day many went to Houghs Neck and other pleasure resorts and the cars on the Quincy and Boston and the Manet Street railways carried hundreds of passengers.

During the thunder shower between 4 and 5 A. M. on the morning of the Fourth, the house of Mr. William Barker at Rock Island was struck. A tile chimney was shattered and one of the pieces slightly injured Mr. Barker.

Squibs and Pin Wheels.

Commissioner Ewell had the city teams out early in the day removing the debris from the street, righting fences, etc.

Nature contributed to the celebration, by a thunder shower between 4 and 5 A. M. A house at Houghs Neck was struck as is noted elsewhere.

For home amusements there were but few. A Swedish picnic took many of that nationality to Merry Mount Park, others went to Neponset to witness the sports which took place near the bridge.

In the evening there were many fine displays of pyrotechnics by our citizens who wisely chose to remain at home to celebrate rather than be subjected to the crowd which would gather at places where public displays were being held.

Saturday evening there were but few officers outside of the regular force on duty, and they had but little to do as young America had spent its force the night before.

The game of ball advertised between the St. Marys and Emmets did not take place and rumor says that all is not well in the St. Marys nine.

Albert Keating asks, where were the police? He thinks it very strange that no arrests were made, and added: "Is it not about time that in a city of this size we should have men on the force who have back-bone enough to make an effort to protect the property of law abiding citizens?"

Saturday afternoon Edward Millett, Benjamin Millett and a man named Taylor were celebrating with a small cannon on Old Colony street, Atlantic, when it exploded, burning the faces of the two Milletts and knocking Taylor over backwards into a tub of water. No serious results followed.

Except what has been mentioned above no serious accidents have been reported from the use of fireworks in our city, although many an urchin has a sore finger, the result of having it too near fire.

All of the stores except those who sold celebrating articles closed from Friday night to Monday morning.

MILTON.

The family of Selectman Simpson are at Greenland, N. H.

Rev. Nathan Hunt has returned from his trip to the state of Maine.

The ladies of the East Milton Sewing Circle held a picnic Thursday at Nahant.

Miss Susie Foly is the new book-keeper at T. L. Pearce's store.

Miss Emma Zeigler is visiting friends in Maine.

Granite Lodge, Fraternal Circle, has elected the following officers:

President—Thomas Robertson.
Vice President—James Gibbs.
Secretary—William W. Robertson.
Treasurer—James L. Nesbitt.
Chaplain—John Reynolds.
Marshal—William A. McKee.
Guard—George A. Merrill.
Sentinel—William M. Clark.
Past President—A. M. Gardner.

The order is to celebrate its second anniversary July 25, at Nahant.

Miss Hattie Birley celebrated her birthday last Tuesday, and received a number of presents from her friends among which was a gold ring.

A party from Lynn spent the Fourth at Henry Gallagher's on Pierce street.

Miss Orrisa Baxter and Miss Martha Rand have gone to Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Josiah Babcock has gone to North Adams on a brief visit.

The East Milton Congregational society will picnic at Downer Landing next week.

Last Saturday James A. Daly, of East Milton, rescued a lady and gentleman from a sad predicament at Ponkapoag. They had walked from Blue Hills and in crossing through a swamp they got stuck in the mud and sank up to the waist and could not move. Daly secured a boat and after nearly an hour's hard work, rescued them. The gentleman rewarded him with a $5 bill.

It is Isaac Shute and not Isaac Choate who is quite sick.

Wollaston Tournament.

The greatest event in out-doors fete the Fourth was the games of the Merry Mount Lawn Tennis Club of Wollaston at its grounds at the corner of Arlington street and Elmwood avenue.

After the games, the scores of which are given below, the members of the club entertained their friends. The committee having the affair in charge, Mr. Charles W. Godfrey, Mr. J. F. Emery, Mr. Amos T. Leavitt, Miss Helen Foster, Miss Ella Godfrey, Miss Winnifred F. Howard, Mr. George P. Merrifield, Mr. John H. Osborne and Mr. Howard W. Battison, had the grounds elaborately decorated with Chinese lanterns and bunting.

Preceding the fireworks display Bryant's orchestra discoursed excellent dance music.

Relics of Bygone Days.

Rev. D. M. Wilson in tearing up some of the floor boards at his residence, the old Butler house, one day recently, unearthed two relics of by gone days in the shape of two shoes which had seen hard usage. The larger of the two is a man's shoe and all that remains is the sole and part of the vamp. The other a child's shoe is nearly all gone; all that remains being the sole and a small portion of the vamp.

The shoes are very peculiar in shape being nearly square at the heel and running to a sharp point at the toe which turns up. Mr. Wilson has given them in charge of J. Munroe Hayden who has them on exhibition at his shop on Hancock street.

HOUGHS NECK.

Frank C. Graham and Theodore Walters of Hyde Park, have taken cottages at the Neck for the summer.

Mosquitoes have arrived at Houghs Neck in large numbers and are quite busy.

Things have been rather quiet at this famous resort since the Fourth, due mainly to the changeable weather and what a few weeks ago promised to be an unusually lively season now has the appearance of being a quiet one. The season here is a short one and the first month has passed without any excitement and with but comparatively few visitors which has caused the venders of shore dinners to have a forlorn look, but still there is time yet and all that is needed is settled weather.

The People's Five Year Benefit Orders of Highlandville and Newtonville, picnic at Houghs Neck, Saturday, with headquarters at the Casino.

John and Thomas Hartwell of Brockton, with their families, are in one of Pierce's cottages.

W. B. Sprague and family are at Rock Island.

E. Luce and family of Faulkner are at the Guild's cottage on Great Hill.

Taber has erected several patent swings in front of the Casino.

Charles Alexander and family of Brockton are at their new cottage the "Lakeview" on Manet avenue, and have as their guests, Benjamin Gilbert and family of Brockton.

Men are at work on the old sloop-of-war Brooklyn, removing the spars and finishings, and it is rumored she will be burned the first of next week.

George A. Robbins and family of Malden are at Rock island.

H. E. Guy of Quincy has occupied his new cottage on Manet avenue this week.

Mrs. James S. Sheppard of Quincy is at Rock island.

A. H. Taber and family are camping near the "Clam Shell."

There are a number of cottages yet unoccupied.

Charles Rogers and family of Brockton are domiciled in one of Pierce's cottages.

The concert last Sunday at the Casino was greatly enjoyed and another will be given tomorrow from 11 A. M. to 5.30 P. M.

Edgar Fuller and family of Brockton arrived at their cottage this week.

Walter Taylor of East Dedham is building a new cottage in the rear of the Chemical house.

Dr. Ernest Doble and Mr. Arthur Doble have moored their new sloop yacht "Electra," off the club house.

Mackerel are being caught in large numbers, also quite a number of bluefish.

A new pier one hundred feet long is being built from the yacht club house which will be completed before Ladies' day, which occurs next Tuesday.

Rumor says a barge line is to be started between Houghs Neck and Quincy Centre and that the fare will be 5 cents a trip.

Religious services will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the house of Mr. O. L. Joy on Bird street.

A. Edgecomb and family, of Boston, have arrived at their cottage at Rock Island.

Houghs Neck ought to have a policeman to take care of the hoodlums that infest the place, and go about doing mischief.

A Serious Plight.

Miss Jennie Clarkson and Orrin E. Wade, both of this city, had a very narrow escape from drowning last Tuesday morning. They are visiting with their folks, at Raccoon Island, Quincy, and Mr. Wade took Miss Clarkson out for a sail. When about 300 feet from the shore and in twenty-five feet of water, Mr. Wade jibed the boat and the craft went over in a second. As it careened he seized Miss Clarkson and they went under water together. When they came up the spar of the boat chanced to be within reach and Mr. Wade grabbed it. He was thus able to hold himself and Miss Clarkson above water until their cries brought help from the shore.

On Wednesday Mr. Wade shot a 125-pound seal, the first one ever shot on the island.—Brockton Enterprise.

Liquors seized from Cornelius O'Keefe of Randolph were forfeited to the Commonwealth.

"Life, Liberty,

And the pursuit of happiness" are the birthrights of all American citizens. But life is misery, liberty is slavery, and happiness impossible, if foul humors and germs of disease are lurking in the blood, if you are worn out with

THAT TIRED FEELING, or if you suffer from indigestion, sick headache, biliousness or other similar troubles. The remarkable blood-purifying, building-up properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla entitle it to your confidence as the GREAT HEALTH-GIVER.

We point to its record of wonderful cures, request you to hear the words of praise it is continually receiving, and ask if you feel the need of a good medicine, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla now. Its popularity is this year greater than ever, and far beyond any other article of the kind in the market. It is an unequalled blood purifier, an unapproached tonic and appetizer, and beyond all comparison as a general building-up medicine.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

CITY COUNCIL.

Councilman Powers opposed laying on the table. A hearing granted no power.

Councilman Moxon thought it due the citizens to go carefully. Wanted opinion from Committee before the hearing. A hearing would go a long way in giving the corporation what it wanted.

Councilman Powers moved that the counsel for the petitioners inform the Council whether a location must be granted if a hearing was given.

Councilman Bryant opposed, and Councilman Moxon raised a point of order that the motion was not in order.

President Thompson ruled the point well taken, and it was then voted to lay the motion on the table.

Councilman Jones wanted the vote reconsidered, that it might be recommitted to the Committee on Streets, but by the rules a motion to lay on the table cannot be reconsidered.

It was voted, however, to refer the whole matter to the Committee on Streets.

The Sewer Act.

Councilman Moxon offered an order that the "Sewer Act" be printed in the local papers to enlighten the people.

Councilman Newcomb opposed the order as a useless expense. If an election was ordered the subject would be sufficiently agitated.

The order was lost.

The New Schoolhouse.

Councilman Moxon moved to take the order from the table appropriating $35,000 for the new brick schoolhouse in South Quincy, that it might be advanced a stage. The plans had been ordered and would probably be submitted at the next meeting. Voted.

Councilman Bass believed a low estimate had been placed on the cost of a brick schoolhouse, $27,000. It was less than the John Hancock cost. He favored a wooden building.

The order took its second reading, and the question came on passing it to be engrossed.

Councilman Gray said the city would be required to pay 4½ per cent. interest, which would really make the building cost $44,000 instead of $35,000. The city should not go to its debt limit and he therefore opposed the appropriation.

Councilman Warner thought there was an opposition to everything Ward Three asked.

Councilman Newcomb said the Council was not here to legislate for wards. The School Committee was required to furnish accommodations. The question was of enlargement or a new building, and he believed it wise to build.

Councilman Moxon said the land had been bought and plans ordered.

The order was passed to be engrossed.

Electric Freight Again.

Councilman Powers moved to reconsider the vote whereby the order for a hearing to the petitioners for the freight railway was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Councilman Bryant opposed.

On motion of Councilman Pratt the Council adjourned at 10.25.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1891.

Are You in It?

You criticise your neighbor's wife,
  You criticise her daughter,
You help to swell the scandals rife,
  You wade in foreign water.
So stop and think before you speak;
  Just cogitate a minute;
It makes all the difference in the world
  If you're not in it.

You rail at playing cards and such,
  You swear at "decoration,"
Society you scorn to touch,
  Whate'er may be your station.
The chances are, could you get in,
  You would the first begin it;
It makes all the difference in the world
  If you're not in it.

You find fault with the churches, too;
  The members and the preacher;
Their creeds may seem unwise to you,
  You microscopic creature.
Take off those glasses; look around
  Unprejudiced a minute;
It makes all the difference in the world
  If you're not in it.

A funeral went by today;
  You called the dead "a sinner":
I wonder what the world will say
  When you forget your dinner;
When you ride by in such a coach,
  A long pine box within it!
It makes all the difference in the world
  If you're not in it.

There's not a thing upon the earth,
  Or over you in heaven,
But you must weigh its little worth,
  Insert the gossip's leaven.
I wonder when you view the Throne
  What flaw you'll find within it?
It makes all the difference in the world
  If you are not in it.

Evelyn C. Roe.

Household Receipts

Baked Bananas. Select large, ripe bananas and bake them in the oven as you would potatoes. When the skin begins to split at the seams, they are done. Take them out and serve one to each person, as a vegetable. They should be peeled and eaten with butter and a little salt.

Ham Balls. Chop the ham fine; add one egg for each ball; season with pepper and a very little salt and some flour. Make the chopped ham into balls and fry them in melted butter. Serve with toast.

Apple Tapioco Cream. Soak a teacupful of tapioca in one and one-half pints of water, all night. Pare and punch out the cores of ten apples and fill the holes with white sugar. Pour one large coffee cup of boiling water over. Pour on the tapioca, having first thinned it to the consistency of custard with boiling water. Bake one hour and serve with sugar and cream.

If ink is spilled on the carpet, throw a quantity of salt on it, which will quickly absorb the ink; take this up and put on more salt. Keep repeating this, rubbing it well into the inkspot, until the ink is all taken up by the salt; then brush the salt out of the carpet.

Buttermilk Cake. One cup of sour buttermilk, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one egg, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half cup of raisins, cut and rolled in flour, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and half as much allspice. Mix a little stiffer than cake having more eggs in it. This cake resembles a raised cake.

Mashed Potatoes, with Egg. Before removing mashed potatoes from the stove, beat the white of an egg with a pinch of salt until very light. After the potatoes are taken up into the dish, smooth them over, and spread the beaten egg on them, just as you would frosting on a cake, and hold a very hot inverted stove lid over them for a few seconds, or until the egg turns just the least bit yellow.

☞ The level of the Caspian sea is remarkable not only as being the lowest of any body of water in the world, but on account of the changes to which it seems to be subject. Local tradition points to the fact that these variations occur in periods of about thirty years; but the investigations of Lieut. Sokolof, a Russian naval officer, seem to indicate a shorter period—perhaps thirteen years. The general tendency, from the beginning of the Christian era down to 1865, was to a lowering of the level, but since that time a gradual rise has taken place.

☞ In the congressional redistricting deal, Mr. Josiah Quincy, by putting the city of Quincy into a strong Democratic district, thought he had "set up the pins" for his own purposes; but it is now well enough understood that he will meet with strong and determined opposition. Boston managers propose to retain that particular plum for their own delectation. But perhaps the Quincy reformer and statesman will take up his residence in the city of beans, which would complicate things amazingly, we're thinking, for some of 'em.—Milford Journal.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

Anecdotes.

"Did you ever meet a real pirate?" asked the young lady.

"Yes," replied the old naval officer; "once on the coast of Maine."

"How delightful! And did he live on a sloop painted black?"

"No. He kept a summer hotel."

Little Johnny Fizzlebob has the habit of waking up every night and demanding something to eat. At last, his mother said to him:

"Look here, Johnny, I never want anything to eat in the night."

"Well, I don't think I'd care to eat anything, either, in the night, if I kept my teeth in a mug of water."

The man fell down the elevator and was picked up unconscious.

"Anybody know him?" inquired a policeman.

"I was standing on the third floor as he was falling," answered a witness, "but it never struck me to ask him his name."

She Was Laying Off.—"Did the man you bought that hen of tell you that she would lay without stopping?" asked Mr. Knowitt's wife.

"Yes."

"Well, you've been swindled again."

"I haven't either."

"Yes, you have. There hasn't been an egg for three days."

"Well, she's laying off, ain't she?"

Mother—"Had a good dinner, Jimmy?"

Jim—"Tip top."

Mother—"I hope you didn't ask twice for soup."

Jim—"No, ma'am, I asked three times."

Teacher—"How many of you can tell me something about grass? Well, Johnny, what do you know about it?"

Johnny—"Please, ma'am, it is something you always have to keep off'n.

—Mr. Henry E. French, of West Dedham, Mass., says that the crows are taking his chickens as a regular diet. That the dark-garbed robbers have already killed and eaten 250, and he also states that the crows show that they are able to discriminate between the chickens, as to size and plumpness, selecting three pounders in preference to the little light-weighs.

—Near Lamar, Col., a little girl of four years was blown from the platform of a car while the train was running at a high speed. A locomotive was sent back and the searchers found the child at midnight sitting unhurt in a clump of weeds and keeping very still for fear the Indians would get her.

—At Chico, Cal., the other day a cat caught a sparrow, when half a dozen other birds came to the rescue and made such a vigorous onslaught upon puss that she was glad to drop her prey and run for shelter.

—Some idea of the amount of work done in Boston by the West End Railway conductors on the Fourth can be gained from the statement that 54,000 people were carried on the Grove Hall line alone on that day.

—The absorption of the dimes by the little dime savings banks still continues. The demand on the mints for this denomination of coins is unprecedented, and last month the director of the Philadelphia mint, which has hitherto coined all the dimes, had to call on the institution at New Orleans to help out. What an object lesson in the art of saving money these little banks have proved.

—Kingston, Mass., has a promising gastronomical athlete. One evening recently he ate 14 good sized bananas on top of a hearty supper, and he wasn't very hungry for bananas either.

—Three old ladies of Walpole, Mass., spent one day last week together whose united ages make 263 years. Sitting under the trees and having their pictures taken was one of the pleasant events of the day.

—A Whitman man has hired a shop at South Hanover and opened it as a place of business, where he will repair watches and jewelry, cut hair and shave. Quite a combination.

—Detectives for the protection of passengers are on the Fall River boats again this year having proved last year to have been of great service.

☞ It is said that a ranch near Seattle Wash., is visited almost daily by a large black bear from the woods near by. He mingles with the stock on the place and makes himself quite at home. The visits have continued for a long time, and the rancher will not permit "Bruin" to be molested.

☞ Belmont, the former residence of Gen. Philip St. George Cooke, in Powhatan county, Virginia, was sold at auction a few days ago, and only brought $18,000, the amount of the mortgage on it. Of the 1600 acres in the place, 375 are James River bottom lands, and the original cost of the buildings was $75,000.

The managers of a Brooklyn cemetery advertise: "Graves finely situated, surrounded by the beauties of nature, commanding a fine view of the bay, and, in short, meeting every requirement of the human family. People who have tried them cannot be persuaded to go elsewhere."

☞ At the commencement of St. Margaret's school for young ladies at Buffalo, N. Y., the other day, Bishop Coxe (Episcopal) said he had seen girls riding on bicycles who "looked like old women on a broomstick," and proceeded to condemn the practice. This created a decided sensation. St. Margaret's is a fashionable private school, the audience was a very fashionable one, and in it were several society women who ride the wheel.

The Middleboro Gazette says: "A check drawn for $1000 was sent to a distant city to make payment on a bill of goods; the check was received, passed through the clearing house and returned to the Middleboro National Bank, and the cashier of that bank discovered the fact that there was not any signature to the check. Knowing the business relations of the business men of this village, the cashier soon located the check and obtained the requisite signature."

A 15-year old Virginia schoolgirl recently wrote a poem containing 250 lines, each line commencing alternately with M and R, and from which the letter I was entirely omitted.

A curious fact in connection with the deaths in a Pottstown, (Penn.) family is that all the children—nine in number—passed away in their 22d year.

The word "State" was first officially used May 15, 1756, when Mr. Archibald Carey reported to the Virginia convention, then in session at Williamsburg, the famous resolution "to declare the United Colonies free and independent States."

Within a few weeks a petition will be sent from Philadelphia to the Czar, that is five miles long. It prays that he will deal kindly with his political prisoners.

A five-year old child at Eugene, Oregon, grows faster on one side than on the other, and the doctors are puzzled by the circumstance.

At least 100,000 persons have taken passage from New York for Europe since the beginning of May.

The product of gold in the United States the last 16 years has aggregated the enormous amount of $572,900,000.

Henry Clews has a bathroom that cost $40,000. The walls, floor, bath, in fact every part of the room, is of onyx.

The United States assay office has transferred $3,000,000 in gold bars to the Philadelphia mint, which is preparing to coin about $30,000,000 in gold besides a large amount of subsidiary silver.

Here is a sentence of 32 words which some ingenious person has constructed of the six letters found in the word "maiden:" "Ida, a maiden, a mean man named Ned Dean, and Media, a mad dame, made me mend a die and dime and mind a mine in a dim den in Maine."

A San Francisco man has a peculiar mania for opening and closing doors, and will stand for hours at a time at one of the entrances to the post office opening and closing the doors for the accommodation of the pedestrians.

George Holmes, of Cincinnati, is the owner of a peculiar diamond. In the morning it is a beautiful sky blue; at noon it is perfectly white and at 6 o'clock in the evening it begins to turn black, and after sunset is like a piece of coal. The changing process can only be noticed in the evening.

Burr—McClintock.

A reception from 3 to 7 o'clock Monday afternoon at No. 4 Walnut street, Atlantic, followed a quiet wedding at the Unitarian parsonage, Wollaston, the contracting parties being Mr. Fred L. Burr, eldest son of ex-Councilman James Burr, and Miss Lettie McClintock, daughter of Mr. George W. McClintock, of Wollaston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. S. Key.

The bride was becomingly attired in a crape dechene and wore a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms and a corsage boquet of bridal roses. Miss Beatrice R. Marble was bridesmaid, and Mr. Chester L. McClintock groomsman. The bridesmaid wore a costume of cream satin. The bridal party received under a marriage bell of ferns and roses, the guests being presented by the ushers, Miss Mabel F. Burr, Mr. Herbert W. Burr and Mr. Charles A. Priest.

Mr. George C. Gott presided at the piano during the reception. A wedding supper was served by Caterers P. and B. Besse of Boston. The bride and groom left on an early train for a brief tour, returning from which they will take up their residence on Beale street, Wollaston, and will be at home after August first.

The presents received were very numerous and handsome, among them being a handsome piano lamp from the groom's employers—Messrs. Norton, Fessenden & Soule, of Boston.

The reception was a very pleasing affair, many of the guests coming from out of town.

The parlors where the reception was held were very tastefully trimmed with wild flowers which transformed them into a miniature flower garden.

Your Private Balance Sheet.

The census office has just begun an investigation which is likely to cause more dissatisfaction than any other branch of the work this bureau has undertaken.

It is the inquiry concerning private indebtedness, and while no direct complaints or protests have as yet reached the office a number of census officials do not hesitate to say that the inquiry is not only without precedent, but that it is without justification even in theory.

This branch of the census work was conceived by the census committee in Congress, who doubtless thought in the face of accumulative evidence respecting the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, a statement with regard to the extent of private indebtedness would prove not only interesting but of value to the political economist desiring to study and solve, if possible, the problems presented by the two conditions.

Accordingly what was known as the "Home and farm" act was framed and adopted.

The inquiry which this act rendered necessary has just been started, and the work is being done under the direction of Mr. Holmes, chief of the division of farms, homes and mortgages.

The inquiry is made entirely by mail, and though the law provides a penalty in case the information is not given, it is not thought likely that any prosecutions will occur in case the information is refused or the inquiry made ignored.

Mr. Holmes, who is in charge of the work, says that he anticipates no serious trouble in securing the information desired.

Replies to the circulars sent out, he says, are being received at the rate of several thousand a day.—Globe.

Age of Progress.

Competent electrical authorities predict with a degree of positiveness that carries weight, that the day is near at hand when the speed of railway trains will be trebled at least, by the use of electricity as a motive power. No doubt exists among electrical engineers that the electric motor is entirely capable of drawing trains of cars at a high rate of speed, and at the present time a locomotive is being built at the Thomson-Houston works at Lynn, which is to weigh ten tons, with a capacity of 60-horse power. This is simply a beginning, which is certain to result in the application of electric power to our railway systems in the near future. General Manager Toucey of the New York Central railroad is quoted as saying he believes that inside of ten years, electricity will take the place of steam in all locomotives and that it is a question as to whether one will be able to see the train as it flies past at the rate of 100 miles an hour, or may be much more.

Bible Conference.

The Eighth Annual Bible Conference at Crescent Beach, Revere, Mass., will be held July 21st, 22d, 23d and 24th.

This is the Northfield meeting for the study of the Bible and learning what it is, for Boston and vicinity and the parts beyond. The meetings are increasing in interest; the coming meeting bids fair to excel all others.

The Bible is at present the subject of the severest criticism. It is not the Critic's book, it is the People's book and God's book, and so the Bible Conference will treat it.

Among the speakers who will be present are Rev. Nathaniel West, D. D., Rev. O. P. Gifford, Rev. George C. Needham and Mrs. Needham, Evangelist W. S. Martin, Rev. E. H. Byington, D. D., Rev. Mr. Jameson, Russell Sturgis, Esq., Christian Endeavor speakers and others. Mrs. Bailey, who sang at the Moody meetings last winter in Boston, Rev. Robert True and Lawrence Greenwood, are expected to sing. Other distinguished speakers and singers will be present.

There are yet on the pension rolls twenty-three widows of Revolutionary soldiers.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

Teachings of Science.

But it may be inquired, "Cannot one indulge in the habitual use of moderate quantities of alcohol without all these results?" Certainly this is possible and the possibility has been illustrated in numerous instances. But is any one in health the better for any ever so temperate use of alcoholic liquors? Is he not worse, in some degree, for such indulgence?

This is the only question which remains, and it is one which must be determined in the light of the scientific facts which have been stated, though imperfectly, in the preceding articles; by the general experience, and by observing the condition of abstainers, and those who moderately indulge. The essential effect of alcohol upon the heart has been ascertained by mechanical instruments of precision and has been demonstrated to be sedative or depressing and not stimulating. By other precise means it has been demonstrated that oxidation in the lungs is retarded and not increased by the indigestion of alcohol in whatever quantity.

In the Clover.

Butterfly,
Flutter by,
Over the clover,
Under the sky.
Sail and falter and fall,
And cling to the fragrant spray:
Shift and shirk,
No weather for work
Falls on a summer day.

Bumblebee,
Tumble free
Into the bloom of the tulip tree;
Cease your bustle and boom,
Swing on a stamen and sing,
Or clutch a flagon frail and fine,
Or drowsily drink the wine,
And rest your rumbling wing.

Meadowlark,
Glow like a spark
That will set the fields afire;
Tenderly whistle
On top of a thistle
A "turilee" to your mate up higher
In a dusty locust-tree,
There! there!
Away goes care,
And a dream comes over me.

A boy, tired out with play,
On a summer holiday,
In the grass so cool and deep,
Let me lie and sleep,
While the butterfly goes fluttering ever,
Between blue sky and purple clover,
And the bumblebee bumbles
And whirls and tumbles,
While the meadow lark's nest
And her golden breast
Have clover
All over
For cover.

PAYING A BOARD BILL.

"I hear you have left your boarding place, Mr. Alden," Mr. Baker remarked to his clerk, on meeting him one morning in the store.

"Well, yes, I left there at the end of last week, three days ago," said the young man. "Some of the boarders were not very agreeable people, and I have secured a more pleasant place at the same price."

"But I hear that your bill has not been paid in a satisfactory way. Of course you are aware that Mr. Norton received you on my reference, and if there has been anything wrong on your part, I must know it. He must not lose anything in consequence of any unjust or dishonorable act committed by you. I heard his version of the story last evening, and would like now to hear yours."

"I have his receipted bill," said Mr. Alden in a slightly changed tone. "And am not aware of anything unjust or dishonorable in the way of obtaining it."

"Mr. Norton's story," said Mr. Baker quietly, "is that you remarked to him some time ago that you would like to let your bill run up until it amounted to a hundred dollars, if just as convenient to him, and he consented to that arrangement at the same time saying that the money would come just when he would need it for the payment of his quarterly rent."

"Well, sir?" said the clerk, as his employer paused for a moment.

"I should like to ask you," said Mr. Baker "if his version of the transaction is correct up to that point?"

"You may consider it so, I suppose," was the somewhat cautious and guarded reply.

"Last Saturday morning," continued Mr. Baker, "Mr. Norton handed you, as he tells me, a receipted bill for $104. You looked at the bill, said it was all right, and then, instead of handing him what he expected to receive—money or a check—you gave him a release of an old judgment that had been obtained and recorded against him at the time of his failure, six years ago. He looked at the document a moment with indignant surprise, and asked for what purpose you were offering him that paper, to which you replied in a low tone, and with an averted look, that he was welcome to the difference, amounting to nearly one hundred dollars. He said no more, but allowed you to leave, as you did within a few minutes, with the receipted bill in your pocket. Your baggage was called for and taken away by an expressman the same day. Is this account of the transaction substantially correct, Mr. Alden?"

"I believe it is, sir," was the reply.

At this point Mr. Baker was called away suddenly to attend to some busines matter, and remarked as he went out that he would be gone an hour or more. His absence will furnish the reader a good opportunity to learn something of the history of the young man who had been paying his board bill with a release of an old judgment bought for that purpose for a trifle.

Rance Alden had been with Mr. Baker a little more than a year. His introductory letter was from an old friend on whose judgment and opinion the merchant supposed he could safely rely. The applicant had a good mercantile education and some experience in that line of business, and, as a further recommendation, was provided with a certificate of deposit representing some four thousand dollars in bank.

"Disposed to indulge in sharp practice," Mr. Baker would say to himself sometimes, when observing the manner in which his clerk went through certain transactions. But taken altogether, his services were valuable. That four thousand dollars which had been deposited in his employer's hands soon after he came into the store, had also enabled him to approach a little nearer perhaps than his real merits, without that material aid, would have brought him.

But the favored clerk had found another way also by which he had been coming still nearer. When this affair in regard to the board bill occurred, only four weeks and three days more were required to bring the date appointed for the marriage of Mr. Rance Alden to Miss Lulu Baker. The engagement had been made with the full approbation of the young lady's parents, and the wedding was to be followed immediately by receiving the prospective son-in-law as a third partner in the firm of Baker & Son. Toward that consummation everything was now hastening, and the new relation was looked forward to with deep interest by all parties. On the day preceding the unfortunate denouement with which our story opens, Mr. Baker was startled by his daughter, the prospective bride entering his counting room with something to tell him that troubled her so much that she could not even wait until he came home to dinner.

"Look at this, father," said Lulu, showing him a paper given her, as she added, by Louise Norton, a short time before. That paper was the judgment release above referred to. Louise had been on her way to Mr. Baker's store when Lulu met her. Her father, she said, was not willing to let Mr. Baker know anytning about the matter so she had taken the case into her own hands, determined to let Lulu's father and Lulu herself know exactly how Mr. Alden had treated them.

There was a full and free ventilation of this affair in the Baker family circle that evening. Mr. Baker had in the meantime interviewed Mr. Norton and obtained his version of the story, as already given. The unanimous conclusion was that a man who could engage in a transaction of that sort, was not wanted in that family.

"And now," said Lulu, with that mixture of gaiety and courage which was one of her chief characteristics, "I suppose you wonder why I do not feel like dying to order in view of this strange revelation in regard to the character of the man who was so soon to have been my husband. The truth is, I have for several weeks been carrying in my secret thoughts some painful suspicions; and yet the matter had gone so far that I saw no way to turn back and dared not even think of doing so. How much do you suppose this engagement ring cost, brother George?" she added, after a moment.

"Twenty dollars would be a high price for it," was the brother's reply.

"Rance told me that he paid fifty dollars for it, and that, he said, was ten dollars less than the price charged. For the last three weeks I have known that he paid eighteen dollars for it and no more. A friend of mine, unknown to him, saw him buy it."

"Much better part now, my dear," said Mr. Baker, after a pause, "than after you are married."

"We will return Rance the money he has loaned us, and have no more to do with him," added George.

During Mr. Baker's absence from the store, which we have utilized to bring in this intermediate explanation, Mr. Alden had been ostensibly busy examining and arranging some old accounts, but his real thoughts were centered upon that board bill and its possible consequences.

"The governor has been making himself mighty free with my private affairs," he grumbled to himself. "Any shrewd fellow would do just as I did. Many a rich, honorable and religious man has done scores of sly tricks worse than that. I took up an honest debt for Mr. Norton and gave it to him at a good, large discount, as I could well afford to, having bought the claim for twelve dollars. But my old governor-in-law has been letting himself into the inside of my trasactions and I must move my cards scientifically or I'll be euchered; and then what will become of my dear Lu? By Jove, I can't lose her! She is just the girl for a fellow to be proud of, and when the old man goes over, she will get a good pile. That would be a nice story to go back to the girls and boys in Vermont, who know of our engagement, and just when we are to be married. I declare it makes me nervous!"

And his nervousness was by no means allayed by the look on Mr. Baker's face when he returned at last.

"Mr. Alden," he said quietly, "that transaction with Mr. Norton, must, I think, alter our relations. I shall not need your services after the end of this month; and if you prefer to leave sooner it will be no inconvenience to me."

"If that is your decision, sir, self-respect will compel me to terminate my engagement immediately," said Mr. Alden, stiffly. "But before this is done, I would like to say that I do not see wherein I have treated Mr. Norton unjustly. My way of settling my bill may look like sharp practice, but there was nothing in it legally wrong. I was the actual owner of that judgment—had bought it and paid for it—and had a full legal right to tender it in payment on any claim against me."

"I suppose that is so," said Mr. Baker. "It is no doubt true that a man whose obligations in an available form are on the market and can be bought for a nominal sum is practically disqualified from collecting his debts in his own name. The law presumes that a man must clear his own record before he goes into court to enforce the payment of claims against others. But I did not suppose, sir, that you had yet to learn that there is another law within and above the civil law—a law of justice and honor, that requires us to do to others as we would have them do to us. There are no meaner or worse men than those who are willing to do any act that can be done under cover and protection of the law.

"In all business transactions," continued Mr. Baker, "there is among just and honorable men, an implied agreement to carry each transaction through on its own merits, and without attempting any diversion by taking advantage of the poverty, ignorance or misfortune of either party. The grocer with whom I am dealing was unfortunate some time ago, and his notes are now lying over and can be bought at a discount. Would it be fair or honorable for me to let my account with him run up to a hundred dollars and then pay him with one of those notes? This principle runs through all operations of business, and any departure from it involves forfeiture of mercantile honor. It seems to me that you cannot fail to be conscious that you have not paid that bill as an honest man would pay it, but have simply endeavored to escape it by an unworthy trick."

"Your remarks have given me a different view of the matter, sir," was the answer his would-be son-in-law managed to get off, but without raising his eyes, except with a furtive glance to note the effect of his words. "I am willing to do exactly as you think I ought to in this matter. What should I do, sir?"

"Send Mr. Norton the full amount of your bill," was the prompt reply.

"I will do so at once," said Mr. Alden, and immediately writing and enclosing a check for the amount he sent it out by a messenger boy.

"Now I have a word to say in regard to the judgment," continued his employer. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Twelve dollars," admitted Rance reluctantly.

"Which I will refund," said Mr. Baker, suiting the action to the word, "and will return the judgment release to Mr. Norton."

"Return it to him?" echoed Rance. "May I ask how it came into your possession, Mr. Baker?"

The mystery was promptly explained, and terminating the conversation at the same time, Mr. Baker turned to attend to some other business until the time for closing the store.

"Well, father," said Lulu, as Mr. Baker came home to dinner, "what does Mr. Alden say for himself?"

Her father related the interview as it occurred.

"Do you think he sincerely regrets what he has done?" continued Lulu.

"I do not," said Mr. Baker, gravely. "His conduct was too evidently actuated by the desire to retain my favor and his former footing in our family."

"He will be thoroughly undeceived this evening," was Lulu's quiet but determined rejoinder.

"No man can be my husband who is not the master of my heart," Lulu said an hour later as, drawing her engagement ring from her finger, she laid it quietly in Rance Alden's hand, reluctantly extended to receive it. "And no man can occupy that place whose conduct is not actuated by those principles of justice and honor which alone can command my affection and esteem. I bid you good evening, Mr. Alden, and, at the same time, good-bye forever."

Whether Rance Alden ever attempted to pay a board bill in a similar manner again, this historian can not state, but he was accustomed to say to himself that he never had paid one that had cost him so dear. If it brought him the lesson it was meant to inculcate, he might at last come to count it as well invested even at that price.

A Misdirected Letter.

The wind was blowing through the streets with the fierceness of March, though the calendar said it was April. A timid, uncertain ring brought a member of the household to the door, who found standing on the stoop an old woman. Her dress gave every evidence of self-respecting poverty. Her face was wrinkled, but as though kindly smiles and sympathetic tears had been the tools used by Father Time to etch her life-history thereon.

"Duze a lady named——live here?" The name was so mispronounced that it was asked again, and then hurriedly followed the reason of the call: "She did not send this letter to the right place to be sure! This place is a coal-yard; shure, nobody lives at a coal-yard," she interjected, seemingly astonished that the location of the coal-yard was not known. "This lether," she continued, holding out a letter which the listener recognized as having mailed the evening before, "the posthman gave me today. Sometimes I resave a lether—not often, shure—and he knew this was me name, though I live at 52, and this is 122; and I tore it open, never looking, and when I read it, and it was to a milliner to come and make a hat, sez I to meself, 'Shure, this is Friday, now, and the lady will be disappointed, she wanting her hat for Sunday; and I'll jist go over and tell her as she didn't know how to address the lether, and then I thought maybe—" and here an appealing look came into her kindly face, and an entreating tone into the voice—"I was afeared that some gurl, who would be glad of the work, would lose it, bekase the lady thought as how she didn't attend to her business; and ye know she couldn't, shure, if she didn't git yer lether."

The listener stood dumb. A walk of over a mile in that raw, fierce wind, to benefit two people whom she had never seen!

"You are very kind—" began the listener.

"Shure, what else are we here for but kindness? 'Deed, it might make a great difference all around; for if the gurl got this work, she might git more, and ye might not be so happy if ye did not have yer hat. I've seen a time I cared; it don't matter now I'm old. I've got nothin' to do now but the little things; me stren'th is gone, but not me heart, thank God! That's where it ever was. D'ye think ye can find the gurl, and give her the work? Shure, I'd be glad to hunt fer her; I've lived on that street for thirty years. Could I find her fer ye, d'ye think? She'd have time to make it tomorry, Saturday, and thin ye'd both be happy." And the kindly face was full of hope and interest.

And only the day before the world seemed so inhuman, so indifferent whether a brother stood firm or fell by the wayside! The kindly, shabby figure went down the street, never dreaming of the lesson she had taught.—Christian Union.

Wanting and Getting.

It has been said that the reason so few people get what they want in this world is that they do not want it hard enough. There is profound truth at the bottom of this odd conceit. Earnest striving and perseverance are rare qualities. A little struggle, and then a falling off; a few faint efforts, and then despair—this is the usual story of attempts to "get anything," whether it be a physical, mental, or spiritual good. But to long for a thing so strongly that for the sake of its attainment one can conquer óbstacles, live down opposition, ignore discouragement, and work persistently and through years of trial and obscurity toward the fulfilment of a hope—is not this the record of all grand achievements and the history of all purposeful lives?

Many more wishes might be realized if people were willing to pay this price for them. Anything worth having in this world is dear, including experience. Genius itself has been defined as only unlimited patience, or an endless capacity for hard work.

It was told of some celebrated general that he never knew when he was defeated. By-the-by, he could not be defeated. A little of the same spirit infused into ordinary life work would make many a dream possible that now seems to the wistful dreamer as extravagant as the cloudiest castle in Spain.—Harper's Bazar.

Do Something.

You remember the story of the two Irishmen who were caught in a thunderstorm. They fled to the barn for shelter. Presently the barn was struck by lightning and set afire.

"Pray, ye divil, pray," says one to the other.

"Divil av a prayer do I know," says the other.

"Thin ef yez cannot spake a prayer, say the multiplicashum table. Something's got to be done, begorra!"—Exchange.

Keep Cool.

Do not talk too much. Learn how to be silent. There is nothing like the man or woman that can keep the mouth shut. Not that people should always keep the tongue still; it is made for use; but there are times when silence is the best and most effective reply. When a boor speaks roughly or uncivilly to you, when you are asked an impertinent question, when a sneer is conveyed under cover of an inquiry for information, or when, having appealed to you on a question of taste, your opinion is met with ridicule, the best answer to these or like exigencies is masterful silence, bespeaking reserve power, conscious strength, dignity, self-command; and nothing at times is so effective as the silence which springs from contempt. He who can endure reproach silently, and can keep silent under trying circumstances is a man of no common character. He who is irritated, and who loses control of tongue and temper, is at the mercy of his opponent. He who can keep calm and cool, can mould men as he will.—Exchange.

Tall Buildings in Boston.

The subject of the height of the great buildings that have recently been put up in this city has attracted a good deal of attention from persons visiting the city and has led to much discussion. The question of limiting the altitude to which structures should be reared, particularly on narrow streets, has even been brought before the legislature. In this connection the following figures show the heights of some of the principal buildings: Fiske building, State street, 183 feet, cupola 206 feet; Ames building, Washington and Court streets, roof 186, wall 196; State street exchange, 162 feet; American Bell Telephone building, Milk street, 125 feet; Albion building, 120 feet 6 inches; Globe building, 118 feet; John Hancock, Devonshire street, 116 feet; Mason, Liberty square, 114 feet; Advertiser, 100 feet; Boston tavern, 100 feet; Young's hotel, Court street, 99 feet; Hemenway building, Court street, 98 feet; Sears building, Court and Washington streets, 97 feet.

The Wondrous Power of Song.

Congressman John Allen of Mississippi, in addition to being one of the wits of the House, is also something of a "plunger" in society.

He was present at a musicale given at the Shoreham by Mrs. Jeanette Thurber, and talked music with a fluency that astonished some of those who heard him. During the evening Mrs. Thuber engaged the Mississippi congressman in conversation for a few minutes, and incidently inquired if he was familiar with the study of music.

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. Allen, promptly, "I am something of a musician myself. In fact I am so fond of music that I introduce it into my every day life with very beneficial effect. I control my wife and family, and govern my entire household by the power of my music."

"I don't quite comprehend you," answered Mrs. Thurber, smiling.

"Well," said Mr. Allen, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "it is just like this: When I request my wife or any member of my family to do anything and they refuse, I threaten to sing. They immediately relent and do my bidding rather than hear me."—Baltimore Sun.

Treatment for Dyspepsia.

No better relief for the malaise of dyspepsia exists than to apply a Japanese hand warmer to the stomach for ten or fifteen minutes after eating. It stimulates the flow of the digestive secretions and draws the blood where it is needed. Heat is a great medicine for all diseases.

Lastly, dyspeptic and flatulent persons find great relief by wearing the little Japanese handwarmers which burn a bit of punk for hours over the stomach or below it when discomfort occurs. This sort of hot compress can be resorted to in offices or where other appliance is impossible, as the whole affair is about the size of a card case. Sea captains and business men wear them under their coats; women hide them in their dresses and avoid many a pain and annoyance by it.—Shirley Dare in N. Y. Herald.

Cultivating Disease.

The internal organs do not want to be thought about. A man's stomach is healthy when he does not know he has one. When we are conscious of the existence of any internal organ that organ is sick. The internal machinery was intended to do its work unconsciously. When we begin to think about our stomachs, digestion is arrested. John Hunter said he got gout by thinking about his great toe. A man who sits at the table wondering if baked potatoes will agree with him, and whether fruits and vegetables are a good combination, is in a fair way to have trouble with the simplest food. Thinking about the internal organs gets them in a sort of stage fright, and they are powerless.—Good Health.

Measured for Umbrellas.

A new scheme is the making of umbrellas to measure. If you are a real howling swell nowdays, you go and have yourself measured for an umbrella just as you do for a suit of clothes. First your length is taken, so as to get the height of the stick exactly right. Then your muscles are sized up so as to fix the weight. Finally you are given a bar of wax to grip in your hand and the handle of your parapluie is modeled in silver or gold to suit your anatomy exactly. Some customers are even so particular as to have the cover of their umbrellas selected to match their complexions, but these gentlemen generally wear corsets and call each other "deah boy."

Ocean Currents.

The United States hydrographic office is studying the currents of the Atlantic ocean by requesting mariners to drop overboard bottles in which are inscribed the name of the ship, date, latitude and longitude. Thousands of these bottles have been thrown overboard, and of the several hundred that have been picked up and forwarded to the office at Washington, data has been furnished for much interesting and surprising information. Bottles dropped in the gulf stream off Florida are usually found, if at all, on the west coast of Scotland. Those dropped in mid ocean usually appear on the coast of Africa.

There is a bill now pending to abolish the last and only turnpike toll road in the State of Connecticut.

Fire at Houghs Neck.

Houghs Neck was threatened with a serious conflagration Thursday evening, and as it was, four buildings were burned and the loss will be about $4000. The fire was discovered just before six o'clock, shortly after the 5.45 car left. The only fire protection at the place is a small chemical engine manned by a volunteer company, and there is no method either for alarming the cottagers or the Fire Department of Quincy. An electric car started for the centre, but meeting a man on horseback gave him the alarm, and he galloped to Box 26 on the Unitarian church, which was pulled at 6.20.

The Steamer, Hose 1 and the Hook and Ladder truck made a remarkably quick run to the Centre, and left for Houghs Neck closely followed by an electric car. The apparatus travelled so fast that the electric car did not overtake it on the trip, giving some idea of the time made.

Scene of the Fire.

The fire started in the cottage known as the Mascot, situated on the West side of Sea avenue near the car house and was owned by Mrs. Lucius Packard of Stoughton and occupied by George L. Williams and family of Roxbury.

It seems that Mrs. Williams lit her oil stove in the kitchen and left it for a few minutes to watch her children, who were in bathing. She had been absent but a short time when neighbors discovered the inside of the house was one seathing mass of flames. The cottagers rushed to the scene and rendered what help they could, but their efforts were fruitless, for in spite of their exertions to save the contents and the feeble efforts of the chemical engine the building was soon flat, everything having been consumed, even the clothing of the children who were in bathing. Two gold watches and a pocketbook containing $150 was also lost.

From here the fire communicated to the Plymouth Rock cottage, also owned by Mrs. Packard and occupied by Henry Butler and family of Avon as the Home Bakery. Some of the furniture here was saved but all the cooking utensils were lost. This building was also totally destroyed.

The small stable connected with the Plymouth Rock cottage and the cottage owned and occupied by M. M. Upham of Boston also took fire in spite of the heroic efforts of the cottagers, and by the time the department from Quincy arrived they were past saving.

Mr. Upham's cottage was furnished in luxuriant style and although some of his furniture was saved it was badly damaged.

Mrs. Anson Guild's cottage was in the direct line of the wind and sparks flew lively for a time. The cottage was occupied by E. F. Luce and family of Boston, who had as guests Edward Kelly and family of Malden. Through their efforts and assistance from others, blankets were kept wet and the house saved, although it caught several times.

Mr. O. H. Weed's cottage, next south, was occupied by Thomas Mullaly of Dorchester, but did not catch.

The Nauset cottage occupied by E. H. Brazer caught, but the spark was quickly extinguished.

The Pleasant View cottage, occupied by H. O. Caryl, of Ware, escaped, also that of Mr. Billings.

The Losses.

The loss on the "Mascot" cottage is $1000; on the "Plymouth Rock" cottage, $600; the stable, $150. These buildings were owned by Mrs. Packard, and her agent, Mr. Harvey, did not know whether they were insured or not, but thought they were.

The Upham cottage was valued at $1500 and was insured in the Quincy Mutual for $900.

Mr. Williams thinks his total loss will reach $600, on which there is no insurance.

Mr. Butler loses $200 on his furniture on which there was no insurance.

Mr. Upham thinks his loss on furniture will amount to $700. This was insured in Boston but he neglected to have the policy transferred when he moved to the shore, and this will be a total loss.

For further particulars, facts and incidents, see the DAILY LEDGER of Friday.

Workingmen's Train.

Messrs. T. L. Williams and P. J. Donaher, two of the committee appointed at the recent mass meeting in West Quincy to interview the Old Colony Railroad management relative to workingmen's trains between West Quincy and Boston, met General Manager Kendrick and Passenger Agent Connors Thursday by appointment and report a very pleasant conference, at the same time a very satisfactory one. They were delighted with the courteous treatment they received.

The Old Colony appeared anxious to do all that was possible for West Quincy. The law relative to workingmen's trains, Mr. Kendrick said, was that 200 workingmen's tickets must first be purchased at West Quincy before the management would be compelled to put on such trains. This he did not think possible at present, but he offered as a compromise to sell fifteen-trip tickets for $1, about 6⅔ cents per trip. The tickets to be good only on the inward train at 6.15 A. M. and outward at 6.20 P. M.

The committee was quick to accept the offer, which they consider fully or satisfactory as a workingmen's train, as it will not be necessary to invest as much in tickets, and they will be good until used.

The new arrangement will be as prompt as it is satisfactory, as it will go into effect August 1.

General Manager Kendrick wished the committee to inform patrons of the Quincy and Quincy Adams stations that similar arrangements could be made by them if a committee waited upon the management.

The matter of Sunday trains was also pressed by the committee. Only one each way was asked; inward about 1 P. M., and outward at 10 P. M. The matter was also favorably received and it was hinted that the request would be granted when a new schedule was arranged in the fall.

Good for West Quincy.

HAVING A PLEASANT TIME. A letter from Miss Annie L. Prescott, written Sunday on arriving in Chicago, says that she is having a delightful time. The party while in Chicago were located in the "Auditorium," the largest and finest hotel in the West. The description of the building and the furnishings of her room gives one an idea of a palace. Miss Prescott says, one could hardly realize that it was Sunday in that city every thing being so busy and stirring. The party enjoyed a ride through the city embarking in coaches and hacks. They drove through the exposition grounds, and had pleasant views of Chicago and its surroundings. The party certainly made an attractive appearance with a long procession of carriages which she said made even "the natives" stare. On Monday they started for St. Paul, where they expected to arrive Tuesday.

During the Convention, which lasts until Friday, she expects to enjoy many pleasant excursions in St. Paul, among which will be a visit to the Falls of Minnehaha, Fort Snelling and Lake Minnetonka.

Presbyterian Picnic.

The Presbyterian Sunday School, which held its annual picnic at Merry Mount Park, on Thursday, was favored with a fair, breezy day, and every one enjoyed the occasion. The park makes a delightful picnic ground for children, particularly because of the abundance of shade trees. The games were the principal features of the day and resulted as follows:

Girls' race, from 12 to 15 years,—Lizzie Esson, first; Dora Mudgett, second; Maggie Chisholm, third.

Boys' race, 12 to 15 years,—W. Patterson, D. Stewart, R. Craig.

Girls' race, 9 to 12 years,—First race, Flora McDonald, Hattie Chisholm, Maggie McDonald; second race,—Jeanie Dackers and Jeanie Privono, equal, Maggie Benzie.

Boys' race, 9 to 12 years,—Walter Young, W. Esson, James Meninick.

Girls' race, 7 to 9 years,—Maggie Milne, Lizzie Thomson, Maggie Esson.

Boys' race, 7 to 9 years,—William Giles, W. Ross, John Gordon and A. McIntosh, equal.

Girls' race, under 7 years,—Emma Marnock, Nellie Higman, Lizzie Marnock.

Boys' race, under 7 years,—Arthur Phillips, Al Craig, George Esson and Charles Howie.

Young ladies' race,—Helena Hutt, Jeanette McLeod, Florence Halley.

Married ladies' race,—Mrs. W. Murray, Mrs. Shirley, Mrs. W. Pratt.

Single men's race,—A. Henderson and J. Wyllie, equal, James Mann.

Married men's race,—A. Clark, A. Howie

Sixth race,—Forbes Craig, Alexander Bonner.

Young ladies' race, No. 1,—Jessie McMillan, Bessie McMillan.

Married ladies' race, No. 2,—Mrs. W. Murray, Mrs. Shirley.

Fortunate Escape.

The three o'clock electric car from West Quincy Thursday afternoon caused a serious accident on Hancock street, yet one for which it can hardly be held responsible. Mr. N. B. Sprague and wife and Mr. Elbridge Sprague, a brother, all of Holbrook, were returning from Houghs Neck, in a two seated covered carriage. They were on the right hand side of the street and had an unobstructed road. The electric car rounded the corner from School street, and Motorman Pratt noticed that the horse was frightened and shut off the power. As the car approached, the horse stopped an instant, and then with a jump turned around to the left directly in front of the car.

The car struck the carriage squarely, making a complete wreck of it. The car jumped the track and ran a little more than its length and the carriage was under it when it stopped. The horse had cleared himself and run down through the Square.

Mr and Mrs. Sprague who were on the front seat of the carriage were thrown out by the shock, but the brother, aged about seventy, crawled out of the wreck after the car stopped, narrowly escaping being crushed. He was taken into the residence of Mr. E. Emery Fellows and kindly cared for, and Mr. and Mrs. Sprague went into the house of Mr. J. H. Emery.

Supt. Weeks was quickly on the spot accompanied by Dr. Gilbert. All three occupants, however, had escaped bodily injury, but it was quite a shock to Mr. Elbridge Sprague.

Mr. Sprague, the driver, attaches no blame to the company, recognizing that the horse was frightened and responsible for the accident.

It took an hour to put the car, which weighs about eight tons, on the track. In the meanwhile Sanborn & Damon attempted to go by, when their horse was frightened and fell down in the shafts, causing no damage however.

New Electric Car.

One of the handsomest of street cars which was built by the Burnham & Duggan Railway Appliance Company, arrived at Quincy Tuesday and was towed to Houghs Neck where it will be equipped for trial. The car is some three inches wider than the ordinary cars and is eighteen feet long and will seat twenty-six.

The outside of the car is painted a neat white with gilt stripes and is numbered 1. The inside of the car is finished in natural cherry with oak veneer, head lining, the seats being richly upholstered in scarlet plush.

The car was built by the above company to try the invention of John Christiansen, which is one of several electrical patents owned by this company.

Mr. Christiansen's invention consists of using one motor only in a car, which is placed on the inside of the car above the floor. This motor operates an endless belt which transfers the power from the motor by means of gearing to the two axles. The gearings are placed in tight boxes and run in oil and by being boxed it is claimed they will run three years without being touched.

There is also a flooring under the belt to keep the dust and water from the belt.

On each platform there is a lever by which a quick running gear is changed to a slow running gear. This is used in climbing steep grades; by this means twice the amount of power is obtained from the motor.

Another arrangement is the wheels of the car, the flanges of which instead of being smooth have teeth which it is claimed in winter will cut the ice from the groove inside of the rail and allow the car to run as readily as in summer.

The new electric was run out Thursday afternoon, and worked to the entire satisfaction of the inventor.

A Narrow Escape.

What might have proved a serious accident had the victim been alone, happened on Wednesday to a young man well known at Quincy Point. Wednesday morning Mr. Henry Moynihan and a son of Councilman Duffield, went mackerel fishing in a small boat, and were absent the greater part of the day. About three o'clock in the afternoon they returned home, and as they were nearing their mooring place Mr. Moynihan stood up in the boat in order to throw out the anchor. In doing so the rope became entangled about his feet, and the consequences was that when he threw out the anchor he stumbled and was thrown head first into the water. Mr. Duffield seeing his chum in distress went to his assistance and succeeded in rescuing Mr. Moynihan from his perilous position. Save the loss of a hat Mr. Moynihan was none the worse for his premature bath.

Home from Paris.

Miss Minnie Follett arrived home Thursday morning from Paris where she has been studying for the past year. A large number of prominent society people, including many distinguished personages from Boston and Braintree were present at her mother's residence on School street to greet the young mademoiselle. The spacious parlor was transformed into a beautiful flower garden, and the dining-room also was filled with choice hot house and domestic plants. Notwithstanding the tedious voyage, Miss Follett looked exceedingly well, and life in the gay capital of France has evidently agreed with her.

Nichols should be given a medal by the Humane Society.

City Clerk Spear has received copies of the Acts and Resolves for 1891. Quincy came in for considerable business, securing acts allowing the city to construct a system of sewerage and to supply itself with water; requiring the School Committee to furnish certain estimates to the City Council, and the incorporation of the Quincy Electric Freight Railway Company.

Quincy ranks twenty-seven in valuation, as shown by the State tax. It is twenty-third in population but the following towns are richer: Brookline, Milton, Beverly and Medford. All the cities larger in population are wealthier, and the smaller cities have a smaller valuation, viz: Newburyport, Northampton, Woburn, Chicopee and Marlboro.

Accident.

Herbert F., the four year old son of Frank R. Cobb, met with a bad accident Wednesday afternoon.

The little fellow was on Washington near Canal street, when he was run over by a passing team. The child's face was cut in a shocking manner, the print of the horse's hoof being left on his face, while one of the boy's ears was partially torn off.

NOT THE DOCTOR. The suicide of Mr. Edward K. Brooks at the office of Dr. George F. Brooks in Boston last Saturday, has led to so many rumors that some have an idea that it was the doctor himself. The deceased was no relation to the doctor, who at the time of the unfortunate affair was visiting his medical patients in Quincy.

The officers of the Granite Lodge M. U., I. O. O. F., will be installed at Temperance hall, Saturday evening.

A few more such men as Mr. T. L. Williams would accomplish wonders for West Quincy. The result of today's conference shows what a little push will do, and should give the Citizens' Association a good start.

Rev. Edward Norton and Rev. J. H. Humphrey will exchange pulpits Sunday morning.

A number of the citizens of West Quincy met at Donahoe's hall Thursday. Mr. T. L. Williams presided, with D. H. Fitzgerald as secretary, and listened to the report of the committee who waited upon General Manager Kendrick, which was received with applause. As several meetings were being held that evening, it was decided to postpone the formation of a Citizens Association until next Wednesday evening.

The alarm from Box 42, at 11.45 Friday morning, was for a fire in an unused stone shed on Smith street, owned by A. M. I. McLeod. The department arrived in good time but as there was nothing but a shell to burn it was down flat and no water was used. It was undoubtedly of incendiary origin; loss $50.

A large crowd of enthusiastic citizens listened to an excellent open air concert by the City band at Brewer's corner Saturday evening. Every number was loudly applauded, especially the baritone solo, "Tramp, tramp," by Mr. Sprague.

HOUGHS NECK.

Last Sunday night the Billing's cottage, near the Yacht Club House, was entered and $25 was stolen therefrom. The theives did not seem to be very smart, for they are said to have taken a coat down from where it hung, containing $100, but for some reason failed to find this large sum. The Manet lunch room was also broken into and a small sum of money taken.

Mrs. Freeman Fisher and son of Dedham, are at Storm cottage for a few days.

A Brockton correspondent from this place tells the following yarn:

Some people have a way of getting their money's worth. A lady took dinner at a hotel paid for it after finding some fault about the price, and went out. Two hours after she returned and said, "I understand I was entitled to a piece of pie with my dinner, and as I did not eat any, would like it now." The proprietor served it free of charge, and the lady departed, apparently satisfied.

A party of eight young gentlemen from Brockton are rusticating for a week at Rock Island.

Very Exciting Runaway.

A horse attached to a two-seated light colored carriage started from near the top of Great Hill, Monday evening. He followed the road to the rear of the Great Hill House, then made a detour through that estate. Coming into the road again he headed for Quincy, passing on the way without collision, several teams and an electric car. He was stopped at the Mount Wollaston farm, and the damage was very slight, although the run was over two miles.

Monuments Defaulted.

Defaults were entered in the matter of two lots of imported finished granite in the United States district court Wednesday afternoon, and, therefore, the goods became forfeited to the United States government, and will be sold to satisfy the claim of the custom officers for duties.

The first lot consisted of six cases, containing sections of New Brunswick granite, the whole comprising a finished monument, which were seized by Col. L. M. Montgomery, special agent of the treasury department, on the 8th of May. The goods had been shipped by Messrs. Epps, Dodd & Co. of St. George, N. B., and entered at the port of Eastport, Maine, on a valuation of $200, and duties were there paid on that valuation. They were sent to Boston, and here the appraisers valued them at $586.12. They were detained in the custody of United States officers on Commercial wharf pending a decision.

The second lot consisted of 18 cases of red granite, finished, which were also seized by Col. Montgomery on May 14. They were entered at the port of Vanceboro, Maine, at a valuation of $259. They were sent from Vanceboro to Boston by rail, and on arrival here the appraisers estimated the value to be $809.20.

The allegation under which the lots of granite were seized was "gross undervaluation." Warrants were issued against the two lots of granite, and made returnable in court yesterday.

As no claimants appeared, a default was ordered by Judge Nelson in each case.—Herald.

WOLLASTON.

The officers elect of Wollaston Lodge, Knights of Honor, will be installed on Monday evening next, by the Grand Dictator who will be accompanied by a full suite of Grand Officers. A large attendance of members is expected on this occasion.

Next Sunday morning, at 10.45 o,clock, Rev. George H. Spencer, of Methuen, Mass., will preach in the Methodist church, Wollaston. Sunday school will be held at 12 o'clock; the Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock, and at 7, after the praise service, Rev. Mr. Spencer will preach.

The Epworth League, of Wollaston, held a clam bake at Taylor's beach last Saturday afternoon. A very pleasant time was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Whitman have gone on a twelve days' trip to the Thousand Isles, and other points of interest, with Raymond excursionists.

Miss C. Belle Gannett is at the White mountains.

Mr. Charles F. Bates and family will spend the summer at Castine, Me.

Mr. W. G. Corthell has sold four of the ten houses which he is building on Brook street.

Miss Sybilla Pfaffmann, who has severed her connection with the Quincy High school, in order to continue her studies at Harvard Annex, was the recipient of two beautiful sets of books, George Elliot and Thackeray, presented by the teachers and pupils of that school.

Deputy W. L. Small says it was never his intention to have installed the officers of Wollaston Lodge, K. of H., on July 6, but that he did name July 20. The deputy has now resigned his commission.

The Wollaston village picnic which was held Friday of last week at Lovell's grove, was an unqualified success. The Quincy & Boston Street Railway transported over 400 Wollastonians of different sizes to the grove.

The forenoon was given up to sports and boating. Over three bushels of peanuts and about twenty-five pounds of candy were consumed.

In the afternoon the barge Clifford was boarded and a trip made to Fort Warren where an hour was very profitably passed in inspecting that famous fortification and former rebel prison.

It was the intention of the managers of the picnic to also have the barge steam around the white squadron which the pilot supposed would be anchored off Deer Island until late in the afternoon, but the squadron finished its evolutions early in the day and had steamed back to its anchorage long before the barge hove in sight of the island. The party returned to the Point at about six o'clock.

Officers Installed.

D. D. G. P., Lizzie A. Monk, assisted by D. D. G. G., M. Lizzie Furnald and D. D. G. Chaplain, Ellen M. Miller of Quincy, installed the following officers of Woodbine Lodge, No. 926, K. and L. of H. of Wollaston, Tuesday evening:

Past Protector,—Mrs. A. A. Brasee.
Protector,—W. J. Battison.
Vice Protector,—Mrs. F. J. Lord.
Secretary,—W. P. Chase, Jr.
Financial Secretary,—W. C. Pierce.
Treasurer,—C. R. Sherman.
Chaplain,—Mrs. H. A. Record.
Guide,—W. E. Simmons.
Guardian,—A. Williams.
Sentinel,—G. A. Lord.

Ice cream and cake was served after the ceremony.

QUINCY POINT.

The workmen who are employed by the city in building Washington street, should be very careful when spreading the crushed stone not to throw it on the electric car tracks. One evening the electric car left the track twice near the residence of John R. Graham from this very cause.

Some twenty-one members of the Wight family had a pleasant reunion at Marcus E. Wight's, Quincy Neck, on Saturday last.

Miss Mattie Bowker, of Charlestown, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. M. Federhen.

Miss Gertrude Wrisley of Quincy Point is visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. B. Dearborn, at Wakefield.

Master Hawthorne Benedict, younger son of Rev. George Benedict of Quincy Point, fell from a tree on Tuesday afternoon and dislocated his elbow.

The church of St. Francis de Sales of Roxbury, held their annual picnic Wednesday, at Lovell's grove, about ten or twelve hundred people attending. It was one of the most orderly Boston picnics ever held in the grove.

Mr. T. B. Pollard left on Monday for Staten Island, New York, to be absent three weeks.

Mrs. M. S. Kittredge is spending a week at Bradford, N. H.

Mr. George H. Carter of Quincy Point has gone to West Falmouth.

Miss Helen S. Delory of Quincy Point is spending a week at East Weymouth.

Miss D. C. Higgins and Miss Kate A. Raycroft, left Tuesday for Toronto and Montreal, Canada.

Mr. Fred Lapham caught 121 mackerel off the Point bridge Tuesday.

Mr. William Caldwell, Jr., of Quincy Point left Wednesday for a month's trip in Nova Scotia.

Mr. John C. Ring's house on Washington street is rapidly nearing completion, the plasterers being already at work on it.

Arrived, Thursday, schooner Taylor and Matties, with 425 tons of coal for J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

Corner Church Picnic.

The picnic of the Corner Church Sunday School at Pine Pasture on Wednesday, was the most successful affair that that organization has known for years. Supt. Sidelinger had ably apportioned his staff of teachers into three committees, one on grounds, one on food and one on games, and each did excellent work.

As many of the children as congregated at the church marched to the grounds and back at the sound of the drum.

Games, sports and races were in progress all day, including base ball between the men and the boys. Dinner was served at twelve and ice cream and cake at four, and iced lemonade all day, and everything was free of expence.

Nearly one hundred children and more than fifty adults were present and the day, the grounds and the management were perfect.

—The city of Lynn is experiencing difficulty in floating a loan of $150,000 for a new high schoolhouse.

—Rev. Patrick J. Supple, D. D., of the St. Mary's Catholic church, of Dedham, has been transferred to the Gate of Heaven church, South Boston.

Make two cakes, one with Cleveland's baking powder; the second with any other.

Note the difference.

The Cleveland cake is fine grained, keeps its natural flavor and moisture; "the other" is coarse grained, as if the sugar was too coarse, soon dries out and becomes husky.

Cleveland's leavens best because its strength is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, not by ammonia or alum.

Electric Freight Railway.

The Committee on Streets of the City Council, to whom was referred the petition of the Electric Freight Railway, gave a hearing Wednesday evening to the parties interested, and if appearances count for anything there will be a hot time when the public hearing, which the statutes call for, comes.

The members of the committee present were Councilmen Jones, Bryant, Holden, Warner, Pope and Powers.

Chairman Jones called the meeting to order and stated the hearing was given that the committee might obtain facts so they could make a satisfactory report. He then called upon those in favor to present their side.

W. G. A. Pattee was the first speaker. He understood this hearing was to be given to the abuttors, this is not the statutory hearing which must come, the petitioners therefore do not come prepared to present their case.

Chairman Jones,—This is a public hearing; it is simply to enable the committee to report understandingly,

Mr. Pattee,—This corporation was formed for the purpose of carrying freight to tide water and several railroad stations of the Old Colony Railroad.

To enable, principally, the carrying of granite from the quarries to the cutting sheds and polishing shops and to the Old Colony R. R., by spur tracks, thereby enabling a party to load a monument in his yard on a car and transport it wherever it wants to go. Men are now put to great delay in handling stone, and a large amount of money in labor alone will be saved. You also have the benefit of having coal brought to your sheds and quarries and get it cheaper than now, by enabling coal dealers to carry the coal to these parts of the city without keeping a large number of teams.

Quincy has suffered tens of thousands of dollars to the streets by heavy teaming. Here is a proposition to take away a large amount of heavy teaming. It is not a but is to make money in a legitimate way. If Boston capital stands ready to build and run it, we shall certainly receive benefit by it, and should we not say, God speed you, come and we will aid you. The road is laid out largely over private property. It goes through only those streets necessary to reach the quarries. It will be of immense benefit by taking off half of the heavy teaming, and we feel that we can demonstrate to the people that it will be for their interest. If we can do anything to encourage business it will be a benefit. We should do everything we can to encourage people to come here, and not drive them away.

Philanthrophic Scheme,

H. H. Faxon thought the project a good one and would be of great benefit to the city. It would run through land of his which is now worth but little or nothing, but if it runs through, there will be a chance to sell to parties. You can not benefit one citizen without benefiting more. If the citizens oppose a thing like this it is like stopping civilization. If you wish to build up a city you must encourage industries.

John Q. A. Field was the first for the remonstrance. Mr. Field thought it strange if it was to be of so much benefit to the city and granite men, that there is only a paid attorney present, and Mr. Faxon who speaks from selfishness. He believed it would be of Great Damage to City

And would not benefit the granite men a particle. We are not opposed to anything that would benefit the city, but every citizen should oppose the location of a freight railroad on our streets, for it will cost many thousands of dollars to widen streets, and this ought not to be allowed.

E. C. Bumpus, appearing for the Boston and Quincy Street Railway, could hardly see the use of this hearing. The time for discussing this subject is when the proper notice has been issued and the citizens have a chance to discuss it.

Chairman Jones,—If this committee did not recommend in favor the City Council would not have any hearing.

J. W. McAnarney appeared for George H. Field, Terrance Keenan, F. S. Patch and others. He said in order to benefit the quarrymen it must be so they can have access to it. Is it the intention of the corporation to connect it to all the quarries and stone yards? If it eventually is connected with all, the plan is misleading. Unless we consider the whole plan wiped out and a new one made teams will have to take the coal from the cars to West Quincy to private residences. Any tracks on our streets injure them.

Mr. Bumpus asked if the hearing that is to be held would be a fair one if this committee is a body which is to report to a body that must later sit on this question.

Chairman Jones,—This committee understands what they are here for.

Mr. Holden,—This matter had been referred by the Council to the Committee on Streets, and how can they report without a hearing.

President Thompson, who was present said, this matter was referred to the committee and they are simply to report an order recommending a public hearing which is actually necessary.

A wordy war then ensued as to the rights of the committee, after which the hearing adjourned.

Ladies' Day.

Tuesday the Quincy Yacht Club held its annual Ladies' Day at Houghs Neck. The programme for the occasion included a review of the yachts belonging to the club, a sailing excursion in which the ladies participated, a lunch and a hop.

The day was all that could be desired which resulted in an unusually large attendance of yachtsmen and their ladies who looked bewitching in their bright yachting toilets.

There was a strong south west breeze blowing which put a damper on some of the timid fair ones who preferred to stay on shore and listen to the music which was furnished during the afternoon by an orchestra, or to sit on the broad piazzas of the club house and watch those who were not afraid of getting a little wet enjoy themselves.

The wind died down some, however, after the start and those on the water were as free from being wet as those on shore.

It was nearly four o'clock when the warning gun was fired from the flagship Christine, which was moored off the club house gaily bedecked with flags. This was a signal to the yachts to assemble to the windward of the flagship. Fifteen minutes later the second gun was fired when the yachts passed in view of Commodore Shaw, being led by Vice Commander Sanborn in the steam launch "Fairy," who was acting Fleet Captain of the day.

The review was a pretty sight and was witnessed by hundreds who lined the shore. After passing the flagship the yachts sailed in the bay in front of the club house until 5 o'clock when they returned to anchorage off the club house and were dismissed.

The yachts participating and their occupants were as follows:

Other yachts which took part the names of the occupants of which could not be learned were the "Egret," Capt. W. B. Barker; "Eva," Capt. J. E. Maxim; "Zip," Capt. J. D. Woodbury; "Clytie," Capt. H. W. Dean; steam launch "Venture," Capt. William Bullard.

Upon the return to the club house there was a lunch of stand-up-to-be-eaten kind, consisting of ice cream, coffee and hard tack.

This pleasing occupation over, the party enjoyed themselves as best they might. Some in promenading and others in enjoying the cool breezes on the piazza.

During the early evening hours a large number came down who were unable to be present during the afternoon, and at eight o'clock when the grand march took place, there was a gathering of several hundred present.

The grand march which was a very pretty one was led by Commodore and Mrs. Shaw, who were followed by Vice Commodore and Mrs. Sanborn, and some fifty couple. Music was furnished by Monk's orchestra.

The order of eight numbers was printed on a neat card, on the first page of which was a cut of the famous "Puritan."

Outside the house was hung inumerable Japanese lanterns which had a very pretty effect, looking at it from the water.

The house committee to whom much of the success of the occasion is due were the Commodore, Vice Commodore and Secretary, W. Henry Dean, James Slade, Jr., John S. Murray and James H. Slade.

Installation.

The officers of Manet encampment, I. O. O. F., were installed Friday evening last by District Deputy G. W. Richardson and suite. During the evening the organist, Chester H. Gray of Shalom Encampment, was made the recipient of an elegant Odd Fellows' charm for his efficient work during the past term by the retiring officers.

The following are the officers for the ensuing term:

C. P.,—Frank W. Folsom.
H. P.,—Franklin Jacobs.
S. W.,—Henry Willey.
Scribe,—John H. Wales.
Treasurer,—E. B. Souther.
J. W.,—C. G. Richards.

Colors Presented.

Paul Revere Woman Relief Corps, 103, gave a complimentary sociable and entertainment to Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., last week, consisting of singing by Mrs. N. O. Parker and Mrs. O. M. Whittier of Wollaston, Miss C. G. Souther and Miss Mary Souther of Quincy; recitations by Miss Minnie Litchfield and John W. Rose; violin solo by Master Walter Loud. Just before the close, Isabel A. Souther, president, in a few well chosen remarks in behalf of the members of the Corps, presented to the Post a beautiful stand of colors which was received by the comrades with a hearty round of applause and singing "Rally round the Flag boys." Ice cream and cake was served, which closed a very enjoyable evening.

Sunday Picnic.

"Where are the North Weymouth police today?" Such was the question that was asked by the residents of Quincy Point, last Sunday afternoon. The circumstances connected with the above question are as follows:

A party of about five hundred Swedes came from Boston to Lovell's Grove, North Weymouth, and proceeded to hold an every-day picnic, much to the surprise and amazement of the peaceful citizens of Quincy Point. An admission of thirty cents was asked to enter the grove, while from the dance-hall came the strains of lively music and the screams and laughter of the dancers. As the day passed on the noise became more turbulent and it was the opinion of many that a noiser crowd had never been seen in the grove; and all this on Sunday! The residents of the Point are disgusted, and it is hoped that no more such demonstrations will be held to break the quietness of the Lord's day.

An Experiment on Streets.

Some attention has been drawn to a plan which the city of Newton has recently adopted in regard to caring for its streets. It is something of an experiment, and suburban towns are watching it with interest. Briefly it is outlined as follows: The city is divided into a number of sections each of which is placed in charge of a man to care for and keep in order. A wheelbarrow and tools to work with are given him and he is held responsible for the condition of his section. He is required to keep the gutters clean, the grass cut on the edges of the sidewalks, the street free from stones, and free from holes, and in general to keep the street clean, and in repair except in times when it is necessary to make extensive repairs. With such a plan in operation the streets of any town are pretty sure to be kept clean and in good condition. The cost of this is estimated at $2000 a year for a suburban town of from 5000 to 10,000 inhabitants.—Milford Journal.

A Novel Wedding Tour.

A newly-married Connecticut couple are now on a novel wedding trip. Both are expert bicyclists, and after the wedding reception they mounted their wheels and will spend their honeymoon in an extended trip through the South and West, covering most of the distance on their bicycles. They will doubtless have an enjoyable trip, but it is hardly probable that they will establish a custom that will be adopted to any great extent by the brides and grooms of the immediate future.

Good Business.

The Plymouth street railway did a rushing business on the Fourth, transporting during the day 4,300 passengers, of these 2,200 were carried on the Beach line, that being the popular ride now-a-days. There was considerable riding the next day also, a full car load of church goers being brought from hotel Pilgrim alone, and the days business amounting to 2,900 fares.

The above from the Old Colony Memorial shows things to be managed on the Plymouth street railways for the accommodation interest of patrons; and the fare is only five cents. The travel to Houghs Neck is immense, and would be greatly increased if better accommodations and cheaper fare were given. Patrons do not like to be packed as if they were cattle.

I. N. L. Elect Officers.

The Quincy Branch of the Irish National League, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President,—George Cahill.
Vice President,—Frank Rafferty.
Recording Secretary,—George D. Cahill.
Financial Secretary,—Timothy Deasy.
Treasurer,—James Parker.
Executive Committee,—James Collins, Peter McConarty, Timothy Ford, James H. Sullivan and Terrence Rafferty.

Kluge—Bryant Nuptials.

On Monday evening a quiet wedding took place at the Harvard Street Baptist Church Boston, the groom being Mr. Frederick Kluge, the contractor of Somerville, and the bride Mrs. Bryant, formerly of Quincy. After the ceremony a reception was held at 33 Oak street. Quite a number of valuable presents were presented to the happy couple.—Herald.

District Court, Quincy.

The continued case of William De Costa, Henry Fraser and John Colligan for assault on David Crotty, at Wollaston, on the afternoon of July 4, came up for hearing Tuesday.

The first witness was C. F. Wilde, who testified that he saw the parties get off a train about 3.45 o'clock. They started towards the street and when they arrived there Colligan struck Crotty, in the face and knocked him down. The only one of the assaulting party the witness could recognize was Colligan.

Walter F. Nichols testified that he was seated on the piazza of his residence and saw three or four men engaged in an altercation. Saw one of the men strike the other. Witness identified Colligan as the man who was astride of Crotty and saw him strike blows.

Dr. J. F. Welch testified to being called to the Hospital to dress Crotty's wounds, which he described on cross examination. He testified that Crotty was drunk.

Harry B. Sanborn saw a man strike Crotty twice, the second blow knocked him down and he got astride of him. The witness testified that the man who struck the blow was Fraser.

Patrick Fitzpatrick testified he saw Crotty strike Fraser on the back of the head and then Frazer knocked him down.

Crotty testified, he came out on train and was called across the track, and the first thing he knew Colligan struck him twice and Fraser also struck him.

William De Costa testified he came out on train and crossed the track and started for home; hearing a noise behind. Fraser and Crotty had a row when Fraser struck Crotty.

John Colligan testified that Fraser and Crotty had a row, witness did not know the cause of row; he called Fraser off and we started for home, when Crotty run after them and struck him in the back of the head. Fraser then knocked him down.

Henry Fraser testified that Crotty got on to the train at Atlantic, and began calling him names; when the train arrived at Wollaston Crotty again called him names and the first thing he knew Crotty grabbed him; Fraser then struck him. DeCosta and Colligan pulled him off and we started for home, when Crotty came up and struck me on the back of the head, then turned and struck him several times.

The court found William DeCosta not guilty and ordered him discharged. John Colligan was found guilty and fined $10. Henry Fraser was found guilty and fined $25.

Michael McAnarney for being a tramp at Quincy was sent to State farm at Bridgewater for two years.

Daniel McMullen for being a tramp at Milton, was sent to State farm at Bridgewater for six months.

John Denneen of Quincy, was arraigned for maliciously stopping a train on the Old Colony by pulling the bell rope, but upon his request the case was continued until Thursday for hearing.

Daniel Shea of Weymouth, for non-support of wife and children, was arraigned and had his case continued to August 26.

Robert Welsh of Milton, for felonious assault on Mrs. Nellie Cross, wife of William Cross, was discharged.

The case of Thomas Brady of Atlantic, for felonious assault on Thomas Gilligan, came up for hearing Thursday. Mr. Pattee appeared for the government and Mr. McAnarney for the defendant.

The first witness was Dr. Padula, who described the wounds.

Thomas Gilligan, the assaulted party, was the next witness. He testified he had been to Neponset bridge to hear the band concert; reached Ramsdell's store about 1 o'clock; heard Mr. Brady tell John Lyons he had better go home. He then went into the store, and got behind the door, and in a few minutes he got the shot. The witness had had no words with Brady, and had heard nor seen any firearms.

James Lyons testified that he saw Brady go into the yard and pick up the gun and fire towards the store door.

John Hayes said he walked from the bridge with Brady towards his house. On the way there a cannon cracker was thrown at them by a crowd, and then they began to call Brady names and threatened to shoot him. When we reached the house Brady went in and came out and took his gun and went back to the fence. He pointed the gun at the corner and told the crowd to scatter and gave them time enough to do so.

Cross examined the witness said, the crowd told Brady they would shoot him and told him to get his gun.

Patrick H. Farrell saw Brady come up from the bridge as far as the store. Had some conversation with him, and the three went back to his house. In a few moments the shot came and Gilligan said he had got that.

The government rested here and the defence did not offer any testimony.

Brady was then held in $700 for his appearance at the next session of the Superior Criminal Court.

The continued case of John Dennen, of Quincy, for stopping a train on the Old Colony railroad by pulling the bell rope, came up for hearing this morning. He was found guilty and fined $20.

Jacob Davis of Boston, for peddling in Quincy, without a license paid a fine of $5.

Isaac Helperen of Boston, for peddling in Quincy, without a license, paid a fine of $10.

Patrick McAlteen of Quincy, for assault on George S. Murray, paid a fine of $5.

Monatiquot Championship.

There was a stiff southerly gale Wednesday afternoon for the first championship regatta of the Monatiquot Yacht Club sailed off Fort point. It was too strong, in fact, for the small craft. The Rocket and Egret were present at the starting point, but wisely kept out; the Bess in the same class was disabled and the Freak withdrew.

Only four boats went over the course, the Moondyne being alone in the first class and the Diadem in the second. The Helen won the leg in the third class, being several minutes ahead of the Dandelion.

The summary:

K. and L. of H. Picnic.

About sixty members and friends of Maple Lodge, K. & L. of H., participated in the union picnic of the order, at Downer Landing Monday. They had the exclusive use of the grounds, and the party numbered about 2000.

In the afternoon there was an interesting series of sports. In the ladies' progressive potato race, first prize won by Miss Lizzie Stansmore of Victor lodge, second by Miss Mary Elizabeth Furnald of Maple lodge.

William McLeod fell from a cherry tree on the estate of Dr. C. B. Bridgman, at Cohasset, Tuesday, breaking both bones of the right leg.

Base Ball.

The St. Johns were weak in the box Saturday and their opponents, the Mill Streams of Chelsea, kept them hunting the ball all the afternoon, making fourteen hits with a total of twenty, while the home nine obtained but three singles.

McMahon's catching was a feature of the game, while for the visitors Mahoney pitched a fine game, and Noonan led at the bat. The summary:

SCROFULA

is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. CARD.

The Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

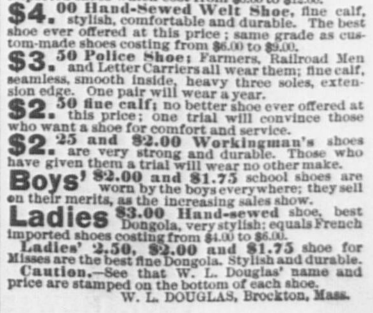
☞ TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE. ☜



WHY IS THE W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

The Adams Memorial.

A Washington correspondent writes to the Sunday Herald concerning the memorial erected by Henry Adams, to his late wife, as follows:

"The unique work of art by the sculptor St. Gaudens, which Mr. Henry Adams has caused to be erected in Rock Creek churchyard, as a memorial to his wife, Marion Adams, who died in 1885, has become the subject of some rather inconsiderate comments which have found their way into the newspapers. In this beautiful cemetery there are few works of art among the monuments that have been erected to the dead.

"The Adams memorial is a strikingly original conception, and attracts the attention of every visitor, not on account of its size, for it is not conspicuous in this respect, but for its novelty, simplicity, beautiful workmanship and the impressive artistic quality of the design. It reminds one of Alma Tadema's pictures.

"A splendid seat of the finest marble, polished to the highest degree, constructed to form three sides of an octagon, confronts a bronze figure, a little more than life size, representing a woman, enveloped in a thick drapery which leaves visible only the face and a naked right arm, the hand at the side of the face.

"This figure is seated upon a boulder of dark brown stone, and at its back is a wide square slab of polished marble, which rises a foot or two above the head.

"The face is the face of death. The eyelids are closed, and the features bear unmistakably the ghastliness of the grave. It is a rare and wonderful achievement in plastic art. Seen from a distance the heavily shrouded figure conveys the same impression. It is as if the dead were sitting there against the shining marble, never more to stir limb or feature. Such a representation of departed life could have been achieved only by the first of American sculptors.

"Mr. St. Gaudens was a personal friend of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, and he has evidently aimed to produce a wholly original and artistic monument over her grave. That Mr. St. Gaudens' work furnishes any excuse for discussing the belief held by the deceased or her husband in regard to the future life is a wholly impertinent suggestion. Nor can the memorial be objected to on any other ground. It is worthy in its high artistic quality and remarkable finish of the brilliant and distinguished author of "Democracy," the most intelligent and fastidious woman who has lived in Washington in this generation.

"It will bring much fame to the name of St. Gaudens, and draw many a stranger to one of the most beautiful burial places in the world. There is not a syllable or letter inscribed upon the marble or the bronze."

A Phenomenal Success.

"Niobe," the merry American fantastic comedy, by the author of Erminie, is now in the fourth week of its wonderful record-breaking run at the Boston Museum. Rarely in the history of local theatricals has a comedy achieved such an instantaneous triumph as in the case of "Niobe." The popular Boston Museum has been crowded at every performance, and those who cannot get in at one time try at another, and still again and again after repeated failures to gain a foothold. The historic old playhouse resounds with laughter and applause, in which ladies and children join quite as heartily as their lords of the sterner sex, and a merrier spot of a Wednesday or Saturday afternoon when the little ones are brought out in such numbers it is difficult to imagine.

Mr. Field is a very successful manager, not having had in twenty-seven years a season resulting unsatisfactory. But public taste was never more thoroughly gratified and the good judgment of this excellent manager more heartily endorsed than in the present production of "Niobe" at the Boston Museum.

Katie.

ALBERT LITCH.

And you say that your sweet name is Katie,
  You are twelve years of age, so you say,
And you mean to be truly a teacher,
  When the years have led up to the day;
And you want me to tell you a story,—
  Not of fairy or ghost it must be,
But something I've seen, or I've met with,
  Far away o'er the broad-rolling sea.
But what shall it be, little Katie?
  For I've heard the deep voice of the breeze
As it sung its weird songs in the rigging,
  Or played with the wild dancing seas
Shall it be of the stars in their glory,
  Little Katie? Or what shall it be?

Oh, come to me in your vacation,
  Sit down by my side and I'll tell
A tale of the lovely veiled ladies
  In Lima's wall'd city that dwell;
And of the brown beauties of Chili,
  Whose songs hold the ear like a spell.
I will tell of the beautiful dolphin,
  Bright, cruel, and swift in the race,
Before whom the flying-fish, leaping,
  Escapes through the air from the chase.
I will tell of the mermaid, that rising
  From her coral bed, hid in the deep,
Lifts her babe to the blue waves of ocean;
  With soft lullabies rocks it to sleep.

I will tell you a tale of the brookside,
  And the blue-eyed and shy meadow-flower;
Of the cottage-hearth, cheerfully glowing,
  Or some shadowy, sweet maple-bower.
Of the Southern Cross, lonely in splendor.
  Or the full-jewelled crown of the North,
Of the seven fair sisters lamenting
  For the eighth, who went wandering forth.
Of Mira, inconstant and changing.
  That plays in the neck of the whale;
Of the Pole-Star, the true, the unchanging,
  Whose faith to the Bear cannot fail.

I will tell of the great Dog, bright Sirius,
  Of his brother, Procyon the Slight;
Of the twin-brothers, Castor and Pollux,
  Who ride their white horses all night.
Would you hear of their father and mother,
  The lord of Olympus on high;
And Leda, the earth-born, the lovely,
  Transferred to the realms of the sky?
I will tell of the Clock, that, unerring,
  Gives the mariner time measure true;
Or the wandering stars in their beauty,
  Glowing red, silver-white, or soft blue.

Little Katie, the whole of vacation,
  To ask and to answer would fail;
For one land and one world for another
  Hath ever some marvellous tale,
Some wondrously beautiful story
  With its charm and its spell to be won,
And the listener never grows weary,
  And the story can never be done.

But, Katie, keep on with your studies;
  Let each one unlock like a key
Some richly-filled store-house of fancy,
  Or treasure of fact, as may be.
Let the accurate Latin conduct you
  To the beauty and Grace of the Greek,
To the melodies of the Italian,
  And rythmns the French people speak.
Let your reading bring fulness of knowledge,
  And writing, exactness of thought.
Till your words would do credit to wisdom,
  If they printed before you were brought.
And the one book, dear Katie, the sacred,
  The old book, the holy, the true.
Read with diligence morning and evening,
  Let it ever be studied by you;
When you, too, in turn, as a teacher,
  Shall lead the young mind as you're led,
The light of the heavenly glory
  Shall illumine the way that you tread.

Household Receipts.

EGG SAUCE FOR DESSERTS. Three eggs, one cupful of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon extract. Beat the whites to a very stiff froth, then with a silver spoon gently and slowly stir into them the cupful of sugar and the flavoring, and last stir in the yolks, having previously beaten them very light. The directions should be followed exactly and the sauce not allowed to stand after making or the result will not be satisfactory. It is particularly nice over boiled or steamed rice.

SNOW PUDDING. Take three sour apples, pare and core and steam until soft; beat them with a silver spoon and set away to cool, then add the white of one egg and a cup of powdered sugar; beat this one hour. Sauce—Yolk of one egg, one cup milk, one-half cup of sugar; let it boil up, then remove from the fire. Flavor with vanilla. Serve cold.

WHIPPED CREAM PIES. One pint of thick cream is sufficient for two full pies. The cream should be twenty-four hours old and there should not be a drop of milk in it. Stand on ice at least an hour before whipping; beat with an egg whip or new patent beater. Do not sweeten until partially whipped; two and a half tablespoons of sugar and a few drops of vanilla will be found sufficient. Have the shells baked and cold, fill with the cream and ornament with slices of bright jelly. Send to table very soon after preparing.

Always dissolve gelatine in an equal measure of cold water; if put into hot water at first a strong tase is developed. It will dissolve in fifteen minutes, but may stand two hours without injury. Pure gelatine, if properly cooked, has no taste. It has very little nutriment, but yet is useful as a food element. In summer more gelatine is needed for the same results than in winter.

In using an egg beater do not hold it in one place but move it around in the bowl.

LIVING IN A TOMB. James Purvey and Mrs. Kate Wall were found asleep in a tomb in the old Presbyterian cemetery in Patterson, N. J. It seems that they had made this tomb their place of abode for some time and had constructed bunks out of boards torn from the sides of some of the coffins.

London has been looking up the records, and finds that the winter of 1890-1 was the coldest, and accompanied with the most snow, of any winter since that of 1790. It has been quite a change for her, as there have been many days when the skies were actually clear and the sun shone.

Anecdotes.

Wife—"I declare, Fred, I am almost ashamed to go out with this hat on. It isn't at all the style."

Fred—"Is this Bridget's day out?"

Wife—"No."

Fred—"Then why don't you borrow hers?"

An up town teacher asked a girl how many bones there were in her body, and the glib girl nearly swallowed her chewing gum in her haste to answer 208.

"Wrong! There are only 207," said the teacher.

"Yes'm," was the triumphant response; "but I swallowed a fish-bone to-day."

Teacher—"Tommy Slimson, have you any good excuse for being late?"

Tommy—"Yes, ma'am."

Teacher—"What is it?"

Tommy—"Waffles."

Dr. Thwing's New Book.

Dr. Thwing writes to us from Brooklyn that he is spending his summer at home, enjoying a restful quiet in his study and in Brooklyn Library, such as cannot be had in travel or in summer boarding-houses. He has just finished at Peterson, N. J., a brief engagement with the First Presbyterian church, and says "Outdoor Life in the Orient," a companion volume to my "Outdoor Life in Europe," is finished and in the hands of its publishers, Hurst & Co., N. Y. "Ex Orients," a study of Asiatic Thought and Life, is nearly all electrotyped and will appear in early autumn. Its aim is to show the material condition which form the anatomy of national life; the characteristics of the Oriental; the signs of a Rejuvenescence of the East and some divine and human factors of success in such a resuscitation.

The value of Oriental studies to the preacher, teacher and physician who go as pioneers of Western civilization cannot be overestimated. We are rapidly extending the material domination of the Anglo-Saxon race. Its moral supremacy should keep pace with its material conquests. But 250 will be printed on large paper as the first edition for subscribers, one dollar each, for libraries. I belong to fifty-eight different societies, many of which expect of me gifts of books I write. The next book after this is one on India, like that on China and Japan, noticed above, which will make three of the Outdoor series. The "Ex Orients" is for students and missionary candidates.

Delightful Resorts.

Our readers who are desirous of finding pleasant places to spend the summer should bear in mind that the Chicago & North-Western Railway furnishes every facility for a rapid, safe and comfortable journey from Chicago to Waukesha, Madison, Lake Geneva, Neenah, Marquette, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Lake Minnetonka, Yellowstone National Park and the mountain resorts of Colorado and the far West. Fast vestibuled trains, equipped with reclinning chair cars, parlor cars, palace, sleeping and dinning cars, afford patrons of the North-Western every luxury incident to travel by a first class railway. Excursion tickets at reduced rates and descriptive pamphlets can be obtained upon application to any ticket agent or by addressing W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

GROVE MEETINGS. The fourteenth annual meeting of the Unitarians will be held at the Wiers, N. H., commencing July 25, and continuing to August 3. Weirs is well known as a summer resort and a general Mecca for summer assemblies. The beauties of the region are familiar to a large number of tourists. This religious gatherings from year to year have given a peculiar force to the traditional meaning of the name, Winnipesaukee—"The Smile of the Great Spirit." We would be glad to have the place become associated in the minds of liberal people in New England, not only in natural beauty, but with what is best and highest in religious idea, purpose and hope. The programme issued presents a list of service of marked interest.

HIS IDEAS MIXED. Willie was very fond of raisins, but in his childish vocabulary the fruit was known as "reasons.' Sitting demurely in church one Sunday he was quite delighted to hear the clergyman say in the course of his sermon: "I will give you my reasons later." When at the close of the sermon the contribution plate was being passed he was sure the promised treat was forthcoming, and it was a much perplexed and disappointed little boy who said after the service, "Mr. S—— said he would give us some reasons, but when they passed the plate there wasn't a reason on it!" —New York Tribune.

BROKE HIS SILENCE. About fifteen years ago an inmate of the Beverly almshouse refused to eat, and nearly starved himself to death. He was finally induced to eat, but refused to speak and has kept his vow of silence all these years until July 4 when he answered the matron, "no." Since then he has found it impossible to talk enough and seems much pleased.

LUCKY. While on a steamer following the Yale-Harvard boat race at New London recently, a young woman of New Haven dropped her diamond engagement ring worth $200 into the water. Her lover marked the place by shore ranges, employed divers, and the other day the jewel was recovered.

A QUEER WANT. The following advertisement recently appeared in a German newspaper: "Wanted by a lady of quality, for adequate remuneration, a few well behaved and respectably dressed children to amuse a cat in delicate health two or three hours a day."—New York Tribune.

☞ Probably the smallest salary paid in the world is that paid to the village watchman of Springstile, in Hessen. The amount of his daily income is 4 pfennings, or less than 1 cent in our money. This is the same amount that was paid to the village watchman in the last century. However, the "fortunate" man receives an additional allowance of 30 cents a month for clothing, etc., and is entitled to free board and lodging from the inhabitants of the village.

☞ An important decision has been rendered by the supreme court, to the effect that an executor must notify the assessors when he has divided an estate if he doesn't want to pay taxes on the whole. In the case in question the executor was taxed on $23,500.

☞ Karolina Petterson, a widow of Vadstena, Sweden, carried the mail between the latter place and Hof for twenty-two years, and has now retired at the age of sixty. During that time she walked on foot over forty thousand miles.

☞ The first German court of justice has held a session in Heligoland. The calendar was a blank. The clerk registered the fact that the court met and adjourned and all was over.

☞ In one of London's fashionable churches the preacher made an appeal to the effect that a certain baronet was, through no fault of his own, in debt to the amount of £60, and had no means of paying. Consequently the congregation were called upon to provide the amount required.

☞ Lightning followed a line of gilt down the wall paper in a Methodist church at Belpere, Penn., and burned off only the flashy figures.

A Raynham farmer sent in one day 3500 boxes of strawberries to market. He employs fifty pickers during the berry season, and some of them earn more than $2 a day.

An advertisement lately appeared in a Connecticut paper headed "Iron bedsteads and bedding."

A Charming Spot.

A correspondent of the Weymouth Gazette has a readable article in the July 10th issue. We must take exception to the name "Old Braintree Quarry," for it was never known as such and is in Quincy, not Braintree. The place is best approached from Quincy Neck, but is also accessible from Franklin street.

"There is a charming spot for an afternoon's revery and recreation within easy walking distance of Washington square. It is little known. Perhaps it is a half hourss jaunt from the square. But the whole distance is so full of charming meadow-views, woods and hills that all thought of distance is forgotten.

"It can be reached by a walk up Quincy avenue as far as the ancient railway above the Pine Grove. Then the railway itself, disjointed and grass-grown, may be followed directly to the quarry, or better, the rustic lane just to the right of the rails leads through a perfumed maze of vines and bushes.

"The old quarry is now a charming lake, shut in by granite cliffs, and having entrance only at one point. How long it has been deserted by men I do not know, but there is one good soul,—kindly Nature,—who has never deserted it. She has delighted herself by festooning the high granite walls with clustering vines, and her dainty fingers have given lichens and grasses and overhanging trees in touches of primitive beauty.

There is a Fascination

in the absolute silence and solitude of the place. But there is a deeper fascination in those startling voices that answer when one whispers or laughs. The lake and rocks seem alive with hidden companions. Laughter and song are repeated in wierd and mystic tones. Sentences of three or four words are flung back in your face.

"There is always a witchery in an echo, and this one is startling in its faithfulness. There is only a single repetition, but it is so remarkable that the place seems worthy of a distinctive name. Why not call it Echo Pond?

"On the height of the cliff at the right of the entrance there is a natural battlement, where visitors may stand upright and lean on the wall of rock in front and look over into the lake. It might be called The Battlement. It reminds one of the Queen's Outlook overlooking the place of tourney at old Sterling castle in Scotland. And from The Battlement of one may look down on a vast amphitheatre—a coliseum of Rome with an arena of water instead of sand—and conjure up what a weird scene this would make on a dark night for a combat of water sprites, with will'o-the-wisps to light the combat, and the echo to reverberate the cries of the contestants and the plaudits of the uncanny company of beholders, or to be more prosaic, on a dim moonlight night with boat lighted with colored lanterns gliding on the lake, and the mystic laughter of human voices echoing and re-echoing in the spectral amphitheatre.

"Some noted visitors who recently visited Echo Pond, (if we may so call it) were especially pleased with it. The novelist, William Dean Howells, who visited it some some weeks ago was charmed with its unique attractions, and the poet and journalist Russell Powell Jacoby who made two jaunts there with me last week was so delighted with it that he wrote and handed me this sonnet:

The Echo in the Old Quarry.

Prisoned and palaced in these granite walls,
  There dwells a Voice. Where men with toil and strain
  Once cleft the hill's foundations, nature's reign
Resumed, a deeper desolation falls.
The generous springs have made the plundered halls
  A placid lake. Some scattered stones remain
  And rustling rails. A brush-grown, narrow lane
Leads to the fastness of the Voice that calls.
In faithful answer from its solitude
  To every sound that breaks the stillness there—
The birds' glad notes, the frogs' complaining rude,
  Shrill insect voices, and the music rare
Of human speech and song; while mysteries brood
  About the elusive Spirit of the air.

Only a Short Distance Above

Echo Pond on the summit of the hill is the observatory (the property of Mr. Amos. Stetson) from which can be had the most magnificent panorama of South Shore scenery that is possible in this vicinity. The gilded dome of the Boston State House, the hotels of Nantasket, and the beautiful ridges of the Blue Hills are some of the attractive points of the landscape. The observatory however is in poor repair and partly closed. No better benefaction could be rendered to the people of this vicinity than the opening of this Observatory for the public use.

"Its use by the community at large would be a constant education in beauty for eye and heart, and the people of the South Shore would more than ever fall in love with their beautiful land of hills and meadows, rivers and seashore.

Teachings of Science.

It is also demonstrated by the thermometers that the production of heat in the body is diminished rather than increased, though by its narcotic effect the sense of coldness may be overcome. We determine also by chemical test, that alcohol neutralizes the gastric juice when present in any considerable quantity and diminishes its action in the digestion of food. It has also been determined by the lifting of weights before and after alcohol has been taken, that it diminishes and does not increase muscular power; but we have no such positive mechanical and chemical tests to determine its action upon thought and feeling, upon reason and impulse, upon the intellectual and moral operations of the brain.

Of its effects in this respect we must judge from our experience and our observations upon functional manifestations, which are not susceptible of the same precise measurements; and here conclusions are less capable of physical, chemical, and mathematical demonstration. But these experiences and observations are sufficient to prove to those who carefully observe and correctly infer, that alcohol as a beverage, however guarded the indulgence, is useless, injurious and dangerous; that its apparent beneficial effects are deceptive while its injurious effects are positive.

Nothing outside of physics, chemistry, and mathematics, it appears to me, is more certain, and nothing in its bearing upon our individual, domestic, social and national life, is more important. If the views which have been expressed are correct, they should be disseminated, emphasized, and impressed, especially among and upon the young on whom the conditions of the future depend.

The influence of physical, chemical and psychical laws upon intellectual, moral and social states is with every year becoming better understood and more fully appreciated; and if this effort, the work of some occasional hours snatched from other engrossing labors and cares, shall have the effect to increase the knowledge of such conditions and laws, and improve the practice in relation to them, its object will have been accomplished, and its author gratified.

Hints for Young Ladies.

Do be natural; a poor diamond is better than a good imitation.

Do be reticent; the world at large has no interest in your private affairs.

Do try to be sensible; it is not a particular sign of superiority to talk like a fool.

Do observe; the faculty of observation, well cultivated, makes practical men and women.

Do avoid causes of irritation in your family circle; reflect that home is the place in which to be agreeable.

Do, sometimes at least, allow your mother to know better than you do; she was educated before you were born.

Do be ready in time for church; if you do not respect yourself sufficiently to be punctual, respect the feelings of other people.

Do be truthful; do avoid exaggeration; if you mean a mile say a mile, not a mile and a half; if you mean one, say one, and not a dozen.

Do be contented; "martyrs" are detestable; a cheerful, happy spirit is infectious, you can carry it about with you like a sunny atmosphere.

Do try to be accurate, not only for your own sake, but for the sake of your sex; the incapacity of the female mind for accuracy is a standard argument against the equality of the sexes.

Do avoid whispering, it is as bad as giggling; both are to be condemned; there is no excuse for either one of them. If you have anything to say, say it; if you have not, do hold your tongue altogether; silence is golden.

Do cultivate the habit of listening to others; it will make you an invaluable member of society, to say nothing of the advantages it will be to you when you marry; every man likes to talk about himself; a good listener makes a delightful wife.—Fashion Bazar.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood-purifier.

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap Rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR Bitters.

The Dose is small—only a tea spoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied.

Get it of your Druggist.

DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

My Rose.

JUNE.

My beautiful rose!
You called me this morning in freshness of beauty;
I caught your sweet voice, from the window-sill leaning,
"Oh yes, I would I might bloom through the winter;
All summer I'm lovely but wanting in will-power
I must perish and fade in the gloom of November.
This year I will strive against cruel old nature:
I dress fine, and live through the storm and the thunder
Of summer; I know I have strength in myself
To brave cold old nature, and live through the winter,
And offer each day my fresh buds and sweet blossoms."

SEPTEMBER.

The summer is past; the warm days all over;
My beautiful rose, thou art fairer than ever!
More lovely, more fragrant, and richer of blossom!
"Oh yes! I have strength in myself; I shall blossom
All winter, so strong have I grown through the summer,
I throw my buds open, and laugh at the frost breath."

DECEMBER.

Where art thou, my rose, my darling, my beauty?
"I covered my buds in their warm, mossy couches,
The cold rains fell harmless, but ah! the chill snow-storms,
They covered my head—the ice-weight pressed heavy;
My dear little buds in their beds sleep all frozen,
Your poor loving rose is lying exhausted!
No more in soft June will she call at your window
Sweet breathing, blooming and rosy with blushing.
Oh, foolish to think by my strength and my beauty
I could live and could blossom in cold death of winter."

Dear blossoms, dear buds, war not against nature!
Vain is that striving; trust the power that made you;
The Maker will guard and rightly will guide you,
But leave it with Him to apportion the seasons.

Oh, my beautiful rose, that died in December!

—Albert Litch, in Transcript.

Miscellany.

A MIDNIGHT SPELL.

The low range of sand hills over which Browning Carter was walking was softly lit by the full summer moon. From his position the young man could overlook the level green country at his right, and the quiet sea at his left.

It was evident, however, that he saw neither. In his eyes was the far away look of expectation, and, as he moved along in buoyant ecstacy he was quite unconscious of the slipping sand and tangled dune grass.

Presently he came to a break in the hills, a sort of gulley which the sea had once cut. Here the coarse dune grass had reluctantly given place to a finer species, and, in the centre of the hollow stood a solitary tree. Its twisted, storm-whipped arms looked gaunt and appealing in the flood of moonlight.

At sight of the tree the young man made a low exclamation and quickened his already swift pace. As he approached, he scanned closely the scantily leaved branches. It was not till quite near them that he was certain of their species.

He heaved a sigh of deep satisfaction.

"An oak! I thought so."

There was a strange excitement in his manner, and his hand trembled as he took out his watch.

"A quarter of twelve. Ten minutes to wait. The incantation takes but five."

Rather impatiently the young man sat down at the foot of the old oak, and took from his pocket a small, calf-bound volume, very old and very musty.

He had recently found it among a lot of old books which had been left him by his great-uncle, a man of much mystical learning, who, in earlier times, would doubtless have suffered under the accusation of witchcraft.

Carter, at the time of his uncle's death, had rather wondered at the odd bequest. But the elder Carter had evidently seen in the nervous, sensitive temperament of the young man that which would make him a fit disciple of theosophy.

The package of books, however, remained untouched until one afternoon, Carter, from sheer laziness, was seized with a desire to examine the box. Rather to his own astonishment, he found himself attracted by the mystical medley which he met; and presently went to work to study conscientiously that which had found so great a place in his uncle's life.

In such reading he had spent the last six months, until his somewhat poetical character became more than ever impractical, and he longed to grasp the occult powers of which he read. In this mood he first opened the little calf-bound book.

An introduction in English announced that it was a collection of incantations from different tongues, whereby the spirits of the dead, and even of the living might be controlled. The book was in manuscript, and, oddly enough, these incantations were written in English characters, although the words were all strange.

Tonight Browning Carter had come, under the mystical shadow of the oak, that he might try the power of the spell which was to show him the spiritual forms of the woman he should love.

With much painstaking he had learned to repeat the words, which meant nothing to him. It had also given him some trouble to master the musical intonations on whose vibrations so much depended.

When his watch pointed to five minutes to twelve he rose. A quiver of excitement ran over him. He took up his position some twenty feet away from the tree. Keeping time to the lovely rythmic chant he began to move slowly around the tree in gradually decreasing circles.

The stillness was the tremulous one of a summer night; save for the weird chanting there was not a distinguishable sound. Even the soft lapping of the sea was unheard in the little hollow.

Slowly Carter turned around the tree, each time coming nearer to the rugged trunk, until he was so close to it that he brushed it as he went around. In the distance a village clock slowly struck twelve. The chant grew softer and slower, and, at the last stroke ceased.

Carter leaned dizzily against the old tree.

For the first time, looking between dunes he noticed the sea. Suddenly an odd, numb sensation crept over him.

Out on the quiet moonlight water a figure was moving. Slender and white-robed, it seemed to be walking upon the water. Slowly it advanced, with an unnaturally steady motion.

Browning Carter leaned heavily against the supporting oak. Nearer and nearer came the slender, white figure, and the young man could see that it was a woman's and that over its shoulder hung long, dark hair. She moved slowly across the white sand of the beach and entered the little hollow.

For a moment she paused, while the heart of the watcher beat wildly. Closer then the figure came, and as it came he saw that the dark hair framed an intense white face and dark, wide-open eyes. When but a few feet away, she turned her head, and the young man felt a wave of sadness roll over him. On the white face was a look of intense anguish.

Then the figure moved on, past the gaunt oak and out of the little hollow. Suddenly she disappeared, and Carter, with quivering limbs, sank to the ground. He would have followed her; but the twenty-four hours' fast, with which he had prepared himself for his experience, told on him, and he was unable to move.

After some time his strength came back, and he rose and walked to where the figure had vanished. He saw only a sudden fall of the ground, and beyond, a cottage built by some summer resident. All the world seemed sleeping.

A few days later Carter was snatched from his dreamy life by a party of young fellows who had come down from the city, bent on making the most of their vacation. Their gayety grated on the nerves of the mystic, who had been somewhat unmanned by his midnight experience. Courtesy, however, forced him to lend himself to all their plans and to enter into all their boating, sailing and fishing parties.

On one of these he was presented to a Miss Tremaine. Whether she were pretty or not Carter could not tell; for she wore a veil, thick enough to conceal her features. But she had a low pleasant voice, and a wonderfully easy, unaffected manner.

To Carter's remark that she had been in none of the other sailing parties, she answered that her health had not permitted it.

He hoped it had been a merely passing indisposition.

"Yes; only a cold."

The young man noticed a tinge of constraint in Miss Tremaine's answer, and that she immediately left the subject.

The party had started out in the afternoon, for its members wished to sail home by moonlight. The supper on board was a merry one, and Carter was surprised at the heartiness with which he joined in the general gayety.

"It really is better for me," he decided mentally, "to see more of people."

As the moon rose the party grew quieter; even the songs became less rolicking. Suddenly the gay little damsel to whom Carter was talking saw his face change, while he stopped in the middle of his sentence.

"Why what is it ?" she asked.

But Carter did not hear her. He was looking across the boat to where sat Miss Tremaine. She had taken off her thick veil, and the face on which the moon shone was the face of his vision.

Unconscious of everything else, Carter rose abruptly and left his little companion.

Miss Tremaine was sitting rather apart from the others. As Carter approached she smiled up at him and moved a little, in mute offering of the seat beside her. As if in a dream, the young man took it. It did not occur to him to talk; he merely looked at the white face which he had seen under such strange circumstances.

Presently he became aware that Miss Tremaine had been talking to him, and that she was waiting for an answer. But what could he say? He had heard nothing.

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered. Miss Tremaine laughed easily.

"You have not heard one word I said."

The merry laugh broke the spell that lay over him.

"Excuse me; but you will think me very rude, but your face reminded me of one I had seen before, and I was watching it."

"So I perceived."

Seeing the young man's evident confusion, she laughed again, and good naturedly helped him out of difficulties.

"I wonder if you have as much trouble as I, in locating people. If you do, I am sorry for you."

But, during the whole of the conversation, which lasted until the landing, Carter was conscious of an odd sensation of unreality.

After this the meetings of the two were frequent. They found much in common to discuss, and they also found that long walks together on the hard sand of the beach were very favorable to an interchange of experiences.

One afternoon late in October, the two were standing together at the entrance to the oak-tree hollow.

"Have you noticed," asked Miss Tremaine, pointing on the sea, "that there's a sand-bar, which runs out quite a long distance? At low tide one can walk way out on it. I used to have such horrid dreams about it when I first came down."

"What were they?" asked Carter, with a sudden hoarseness in his voice.

"I don't like to remember them or talk about them; only I seemed to be always walking out on that bar, and the water would seem to come up, up, and it would be so cold, so cold. It isn't much to tell, but you know how it is in dreams; there was always such a horrid sensation about it."

"And, do you know, I became very much frightened about myself. I had the dream so often. And I think, I know, that once or twice I must have walked in my sleep and gone out there in reality. Just think how horrible!"

"What did you do about it?" her companion asked, mechanically.

"I spoke to the doctor; and he gave me something quieting. I suppose I was a little unstrung by my brother's death. Why, Mr. Carter! What is the matter?"

For the young man's face was white. A moment he paused, looking at her with his grey eye large from disappointment. Then impulsively he began and told her all of his discovery of the little book; of his midnight incantation, and what he had considered its result. He recalled their subsequent meeting, and told how he had felt when she unveiled her face and he had seen the one whom he believed to be the destined companion of his life. Toward the end his voice faltered.

"I believed so firmly that we were meant for each other that I felt sure that some time you must love me. But now that I know it was all a mistake; that it was not your spirit, I——."

With a sob he turned away his head.

Almost immediately a soft hand was slipped into his.

"But it was not all a mistake," said Eunice Tremaine.—Drake's Magazine.

Senses Go to Sleep in Order.

According to the best writers on the subject, it has been ascertained that, in beginning to sleep, the senses do not unitedly fall into a state of slumber, but drop off one after the other. The sight ceases, in consequence of the protection of the eyelids, to receive impressions first, while all the other senses preserve their sensibility entire. The sense of taste is the next which loses its susceptibility to impressions, and then the sense of smelling. The hearing is next in order, and last of all comes the sense of touch. Furthermore, the senses are thought to sleep with different degrees of profoundness. The sense of touch sleeps the most lightly and is the most easily awakened; the next easiest is the hearing; the next is the sight; and the taste and smelling awake the last. Another remarkable circumstance deserves notice; certain muscles and parts of the body begin to sleep before others. Sleep commences at the extremeties, beginning with the feet and legs, and creeping toward the center of nervous action. The necessity of keeping the feet warm and perfectly still, as a preliminary of sleep, is well known. From these explanations it will not appear surprising that, with one or more of the senses, and perhaps also, one or more parts of the body, imperfectly asleep, there should be at the same time an imperfect kind of mental action, which produces the phenomenon of dreaming.—Herald of Health.

Making Perfumery.

The perfumer's art is not a difficult one. When the delicate flowers, such as the rose, jasmine, tuberose and cassia, can be raised in abundance out of doors, flower perfumery for home use can easily be made. Secure as many sheets of glass as possible, and spread them over with layers of pure beef or mutton fat, cut about a quarter of an inch thick. Shed the leaves of the roses or flowers of any kind over the fat, and then put one glass layer upon the other. The flowers should be fresh, and in the height of their bloom and sweetness. Repeat this operation until a whole stack of the layers of fat, rose leaves and glass panes is made. Then stow them away in some close box, and let them remain for a short time. The fats will soon absorb all of the perfumery in the flowers, and hold it for a long time.

The layers of fat are then taken out, and cut up into small pieces to be soaked in pure alcohol. The alcohol has the power of separating the essence from the coarse material, and of uniting itself to it. The fat pieces are then taken out, and the perfumery strained for immediate use. The essence of rose, violets, jasmine and other flowers may thus be made by any girl, and where there is a garden attached to the home sufficient perfumery can be made every summer to last the whole season.

Clam Chowder.

I am frequently asked, "What is clam chowder?" and I have replied that more than thirty years ago I heard the poet Longfellow urge a French lady to eat some clam chowder because it was French. The lady looked up in astonishment and uttered a most significant "Comment donc!" Unto this Longfellow replied that the French originally settled on the borders of New England, and Mother Necessity soon taught them how to stew clams and fish in layers with bacon, sea biscuit, (crackers) and other ingredients in a kettle (chaudiere). Now, from the French the Indians learned the Roman Catholic religion and a little of the French language and a great deal of the dish which the newcomers had invented. The Indians were not apt in the pronunciation or in the significance of French and when they heard the Gaul speak of the chaudiere the Indian supposed it referred to the food, and his nearest approach to the pronunciation was chawder—the name which early English fishermen and settlers learned from the Indian, and which the Anglo-Saxon in the New World further corrupted into chowder.—Correspondence American Register.

Hard on the Cook.

Sometimes a hotel man will encounter a refinement of sarcasm that pierces even his blunted sensibilities. A public man who was in the city not long ago is noted for his information and good taste in gastronomic matters. The landlord was smiling an affable greeting when the guest emerged from the dining room, but the latter merely inquired whether he could have a messenger boy summoned.

"Certainly," was the reply.

"All right, and when he comes tell him to go over to the Blank hotel and get me a porterhouse steak."—Washington Post.

Found Correct.

The sixty experts in coin and bill counting, who were set at work two months ago to determine whether ex-United States Treasurer Huston turned over to United States Treasurer Nebeker as much "cash on hand" as the account books and the vouchers called for, have ended their labors. The report of the experts is that there has been a "full and fair accounting" between the old and new treasurer. The cash in the treasury is found correct "to a cent." The total amount counted was $614,511,582.32.

In Season.

The early settlers of the west were not men to yield tamely to injustice or to be easily discouraged by obstacles. An incident related in the "History of Macomb County," Michigan, affords a good illustration of their spirit. Jacob Crawford had located in Ray township, and shortly afterward a land speculator appeared at his house and made no secret of his intention to secure the very land to which Mr. Crawford thought he held a prior claim.

"'First come, first served,' you know, is the rule at the land office," was the man's reply to Mr. Crawford's objection.

The stranger spent the night at Mr. Crawford's cabin. After he had retired the pioneer said to his wife, "I've got to go to the land office at Detroit and get ahead o' that fellar."

"You can't do it," his wife answered despondently. "He'll start in the morning, an' he's got a smart pony, an' all you've got is your oxen."

"But I'll start to-night; an I'll beat him—on foot, too."

He set out at once, and made good progress, until, just south of Mt. Clemens, he sprained his ankle. But he was not to be conquered by such an accident; he cut two saplings with his sheath knife, and using these as crutches proceeded on his way.

The next forenoon, when within six miles of Detroit, near a tavern, he heard a horseman coming. He stepped aside and concealed himself in the bushes until the horse and rider, who proved to be the land speculator, passed. To his satisfaction he noticed the man ride up to the tavern and dismount from his pony.

Mr. Crawford passed around the house unnoticed and pushed rapidly on to Detroit. He reached the land office, made his claim, paid over his money, received his certificate and was in the act of leaving when the speculator entered.

"You here!" he demanded, in surprise.

"Yes, I'm here," the settler returned dryly. "It's 'first come, first served,' you know, at the land office, an' I reckon I'm all right."

The Company Didn't Object.

An elderly lady, evidently a good old soul, entered a tram car the other day with her "leedle dawg."

"Do you object to my dog?" she asked one of the passengers.

"Not at all, provided he does not bite," was the reply.

"And you?" she asked, turning to another.

"Not at all, madame."

The other passengers being ceremoniously appealed to, raised no objections, provided Ponto behaved himself, and everything was settled quite amicably, when in came the zealous conductor for the fares.

"You can't have a dog in the car with you, ma'am. The company don't allow it."

The word "company" was delivered with an emphasis that was unmistakable; but the old lady, mindful of her little canvass, triumphantly replied:

"Oh! the company don't object in the least; I've asked them all!"

And all unconscious of her little joke, she smiled benignantly on her fellow passengers.—London Tit Bits.

Picnics.

Almost any boy or girl can tell you what a picnic is like; but I wonder how many know why it is so called, or that the custom is said to date only from 1802, not a hundred years ago.

Then as now, when such an entertainment was being arranged for, it was customary that those who intended to be present should supply the eatables and drinkables. Originally, the plan was to draw up a list of what was necessary, which is an excellent one to follow; for often, when there has been no previous agreement, it is discovered, when too late, that there is too much of one kind of food and not enough of another.

The list was passed round; and each person picked out the article of food or drink he or she was willing to furnish, and the name of the article was then nicked off the list. So it was from these two words, picked and nicked, that this form of out of door entertainment first became known as a "pick-and-nick," and then as a picnic, the old-fashioned name for the basket parties of to-day.—Exchange.

Two Men's Wages.

He was a young man who had been a few years married. In answer to a question about pin money he said: "I get my wages every Saturday night. I carry the money and give every cent of it to my wife. If I want any I ask her for it. She buys what we want and she puts in the bank all we can spare. It is as much her interest as it is mine to save all we can. If she is fit to be my wife and bring up the children she is fit to be trusted with the money, and I never ask her what she does with it."

Another man who receives monthly wages, said: "When I am paid I hand over to my wife as much money as she earned before we were married, and that was $4 a week."

There is peace in both houses. There is no need of comment.—Woman's Journal.

Ice-Cream Paralyzes the Nerves.

Why is it that upon taking an imprudently large mouthful of ice-cream one is apt to feel a sensation of violent pain in the temple? says a writer in the Washington Star. The ice-cream, when such a big mouthful of it is incautiously swallowed, produces a chilling effect on the nerves of the larynx, or "voice box," and of the pharynx in the throat. The sensation shoots back to the centre of those nerves in the brain; but there it finds a side connection with the great facial nerve that starts from in front of the ear and extends its branches over the side of the face.

One branch of this facial nerve, extending across the temple, is a nerve of sensation, while the other branches are nerves of motion, governing chiefly the play of the mouth. The pain from the chill is side-tracked along the nerve branch that traverses the temple, and the feeling is likely to be quite agonizing in that locality for a moment or so, very likely involving the eyeball sympathetically. This feeling of a sensation in one nerve when another nerve is attacked is "called reflex action."

Run Down by Electric Car.

The first fatal accident on the Quincy & Boston Electric Street Railway occurred at 12.25 P. M., Thursday. It was on the down trip from West Quincy, the car which left West Quincy at 12.20. The spot at the West street crossing on Copeland street, West street being entirely hid by trees and bushes.

The victim was Charles Francis Reinhalter, the nine-year-old son of Mr. John B. Reinhalter of West Quincy. A companion and driver of the team, Charles J. LeClair, was badly shaken up but probably not seriously injured.

The motorman was Walter F. Pratt, and the conductor Mr. Ellis.

The wagon was a bad wreck. The wheels were sprung, the springs broken, the iron of the front axle bent at right angles, and otherwise damaged. It is owned by D. Emonds, the grocer.

The Reinhalter boy's head was mangled in a horrible manner, the skull being fractured and the scalp being torn from the inner corner of his right eye across the top of his head, the huge mass of flesh being left hanging over the left side of his face which was covered with blood.

Whether any other injuries were received cannot be told until the medical examiner makes his examination.

The Injured Boy.

Charles J. LeClair, the lad who was driving, says they were coming down the West-street hill into Copeland street. That he heard no bell and the first thing he knew the electric car bound to Quincy struck them.

The next moment LeClair found himself in the middle of the street. He was not much hurt, and got up and walked to the fence.

The car was about to start up when attention was called to the fact that there was a boy beneath the car.

The Reinhalter boy, aged eight last December, was then pulled out. He lived about ten minutes, when the body was taken to Hall's undertaking rooms.

The LeClair boy is 15 years old. When the PATRIOT reporter saw him at 2 o'clock he was in bed at his father's residence at the corner of Copeland and Miller streets. He was not badly hurt unless it was his back which pained him considerable. He had scratches on his left arm and leg.

Superintendent Weeks

Was at Houghs Neck at the time of the accident, having taken the 12.15 car. He returned on the 1.45 car and hastened to the scene. He informs the PATRIOT that the LeClair boy told him he did not know whether the bell was rung or not. The car was not capable of making over six miles an hour, as one of the motors was disabled and cut out.

When asked if the cars in general were not trying to make too quick time, he said the time was no quicker than when run less often. That when the cars were run half hourly, the trip was made in twenty minutes as now but then the car laid idle ten minutes at each end while now it started right back. He considered Mr. Pratt a careful motorman, having watched him on various occasions, and in this he was corroborated by Conductor Ellis.

Motorman Pratt

Was completely unnerved by the terrible accident, and was obliged to lay off the remainder of the day, which led to a rumor that he was discharged. When interviewed he said, he did not discover the team until the car was almost at the fatal corner, when it was too late to stop in time. He was positive the bell was rung as the car approached the crossing, as he has always regarded it as a dangerous spot on the down trip, because a person or team on the street would be completely hidden from view. This corner and the Furnace avenue corner were two bad places. The car was on time and was not being run at a high rate of speed. Did not know how many passengers were aboard.

Conductor Ellis

Of the ill-fated car gives the following version of the accident; We were running slow as we had only one motor; there was only two passengers in the car, and I had just commenced to take fares and had got about half way through the car when I felt the car stop, and we struck the team. The Le Clair boy limped across the street, his clothes being somewhat torn. I went up to him and asked him if he was hurt; he said no, only scratched. He further said he was a little late, and was hurrying and did not see the car nor hear it, as the wagon made considerable noise. I asked him if there was anyone with him, and he said no; then some one said there was a boy under the car. I looked and saw him about midway of the car. I immediately got some timber and took him out. It is always customary to sound the gong, and have no reason to believe it was not sounded on this occasion. A man on the rear of the car gets so accustomed to hearing the gong that he does not notice when it is rung, but he believed it was rung here as usual.

Witnessed the Accident.

L. Warshaw a dry goods dealer, who gave his residence as 15 Joy Place, Somerville, was an eye witnes to the accident, and gives the following story:

It was about 12.25 o'clock. I stood on the opposite side of the street leaning against the fence and saw the wagon drive down from West Quincy across the track. Just as the wagon was about half way across, the car came along. It did not sound any bell, and before I knew it the car struck the wagon and all was confusion.

When the car came to a stop the older boy was laying between the two side wheels nearest the street, he rolled over and dragged himself to the fence, he seemed dazed and could not tell whether he was hurt or not. The conductor came over and spoke to him, asking if he was hurt. He said no, and asked for the Reinhalter boy. This was the first they knew there was another boy. A search was made and it was found he was wedged under the car in such a manner that he could not be removed without lifting the car.

A man was sent for a jack, but before he got back a timber was secured and the car raised enough to pull him out. His face was cut in a horrible manner, one side being completely torn off. He was placed on a stretcher and given in charge of the undertaker.

Minor Mention.

If the Le Clair boy's story is true that there was no one with him in the wagon at the time of the accident, the question arises as to where the Reinhalter boy was and the only theory advanced is that he must have been hanging on behind and the force of the collision threw him under the car.

The Quincy and Boston street railway are insured against accident in a New York Company.

The horse was not much injured, one of his legs, however, being cut so as to bleed.

The Grocers Association has voted unanimously to take Thursday, July 30, as Grocers' Day. Every member of the association will close his store all day which will also give a holiday to the clerks. The association will participate in an excursion, but to what place has not as yet been decided.

Messrs. George Saville, George Jones, C. F. Pettengill and W. Austin Winslow left the Point Saturday night last in the yacht Whim, for a week's trip. Their first stopping place was to be Marblehead, and from there they cruised along the coast of Maine, feeding fishes and catching a few of the finny tribe.

When Clapp Bros. store was opened Monday, it was found that a large pane of glass had been smashed out of a rear window, and the presence of blood showed that the intruder had evidently cut himself. Robbery was the probable cause, but they did not find what they wanted, as the proprietor misses neither cash or goods.

A race for cash prizes was sailed by the Hull Yacht club July 17. There were several close contests. Commodore Shaw of the Quincy club is happy, not so much at winning first prize in his class, but at downing Secretary Faxon's boat, the Rocket, by nearly two minutes. Other first prizes were won by the Hawk, Posy, Swordfish, True Blue, Egeria and Composite.

Dr. George F. Brooks' many Quincy friends will be much pleased to learn that his medical practice in Quincy is rapidly increasing, and he is fast winning the confidence and good will of our Quincy people. The doctor besides being an excellent physician and surgeon, is a very fine church organist and sweet tenor singer, which adds much to his popularity with our citizens.

Anything on the sewerage problem is now of interest to this city. A plan has already been adopted and legislative permission secured, but by many it is regarded as a very expensive system for Quincy. Not a few argue that we should not provide now for "all time." That within a generation wonderful progress will be made in the manner of treating sewage, and that it will not then be the thing to pollute rivers and sea coast. If Quincy should adopt the gravitation system proposed a few years ago at a cost of less than $100,000 it would save enough in interest to construct the improved system long before any obnoxious pollution occurred in the Weymouth Fore river.

Rain! It was needed.

Mr. G. V. Bowditch starts Monday for a trip on Cape Cod. He will visit the several fire departments there and being a veteran he will receive a royal welcome.

A good sized fleet of small boats hovered around the old man-of-war Brooklyn as she was slowly consumed by fire Wednesday. The heavy oak timbering and planking of the old vessel made a very hot but slow fire. Although the fire was started at 5 o'clock in the morning, but little impression had been made at 11 o'clock. Uncle Sam used to put good material into his wooden vessels, and Butler & Co. and the other junk dealers who formed the syndicate which bought her will probably net several thousand dollars from the sale of the old copper and iron which they will get out of her.

A party of young misses of Atlantic enjoyed an outing at Hatch's Buttercup cottage Tuesday.

Poor Railroad Accommodations.

Superintendent Allen, of the Old Colony railroad, has refused to grant the petition of the 400 residents of this city and Quincy, for better transportation service between the two places. The petition was sent to him about two weeks ago. In his reply Mr. Allen states that the long distance trains could not very well stop at Quincy.

WEST QUINCY.

Miss Nellie Slattery is visiting her cousin, P. J. Cray, at West Quincy.

Mrs. Hiram W. Campbell is in Maine.

A. P. Anerdin, employed by Thompson Bros., had his hand bruised Tuesday by a piece of granite falling upon it. Dr. Dion attended him.

Miss Mary Linton of Copeland street, is visiting her friend, Miss Mamie Jones at Sandwich.

Miss Julia Keef, of Weston, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Alphonso Pontas, at West Quincy.

The West Quincy Methodists went on their annual picnic Friday, at Lovell's grove. The electric cars took them thither.

The choir, altar boys and teachers of the St. John's and St. Mary's churches, held an outing at Nantasket Tueday. Electric cars took the excursionists to the Quincy Adams station where a through train was stopped.

The game announced for Saturday between the St. Marys and Beacons was not played.

Buckley street has been put in very fair condition of late and should pass muster to become a city way.

A large number of West Quincy citizens met in Donaher's hall Wednesday evening and organized a society to be known as the "West Quincy Improvement Society," with the following officers:

President,—T. L. Williams.
Vice President,—James White.
Secretary,—S. B. Little.
Treasurer,—D. H. Fitzgerald.

It was voted that the board of officers, with Mr. P. J. Donaher, be appointed a committee to draw up suitable by-laws to govern the society which will be acted upon at their next meeting.

An interesting discussion on the merits of the society followed, the speakers all realizing the need and advantages of new industries, it being desirable that they should be of the kind that would give employment to mixed help.

Later on a committee will be appointed to look after such matters.

The meeting adjourned to Wednesday evening, July 29th, at 8 o'clock, in Donaher's hall.

MILTON.

The will of Helen W. Ware was approved at Hyde Park Wednesday, and Arthur L. Ware appointed executor; bond, $50,000.

Bicycle Accident.

There came near being a serious bicycle accident Thursday evening on the road to Houghs Neck. Engineer Packard was driving from the beach in his protective wagon and had reached a point near the site of the old Willow House, when he saw a number of bicyclists coming toward him and he turned out as far as he could to let them pass.

One of the riders was a young lady whose bicycle turned as she reached his wagon, throwing her and the machine directly under the wagon between the wheels. Mr. Packard put on brakes and succeeded in stopping just as the wheel of his wagon struck the bicycle. The young lady was taken out uninjured, but the bicycle was smashed.

A Painful Accident.

Wednesday afternoon as Mr. Joseph Hayden was working in John E. Drake's boot factory, he accidentally drove a tack into his hand with such force as to bury it completely out of sight in the flesh. He went at once to the Massachusetts General Hospital, but the surgeons there were unable to extract the missing piece of steel, and as a consequence Mr. Hayden still retains it, much to his discomfiture. On Saturday the surgeons will make another attempt to extract it.

IT IS an outrage on a suffering people the way the brook nuisance continues unabated. It has been before the city, and the town government before it, but is kicked about from one department to another, or the money spent in getting plans and nothing accomplished.

WOLLASTON.

Miss K. A. Raycroft and Miss D. C. Higgins are now comfortably settled at "The Avonmore," Toronto. They speak in a letter to a friend of many pleasant excursions on Lake Ontario, and to Niagara. They will take the trip to Montreal by the way of Thousand Islands on the return.

Commissioner Ewell is having sidewalks built on North and Arnold streets.

The new street which has been built through the land John R. Graham and John E. Drake opposite Sumner street, has been named Edison street.

The cellar for a new house for Mr. Fred Drake has been started at the corner of Washington and Edison streets.

Mr. John R. Graham and son John, left Wednesday, on a visit to his farm in Kentucky.

A Slight Fire.

Thursday morning at 10.45 smoke was seen issuing from one of the piers at the Point bridge, and upon further investigation it was found to be burning briskly. Drawtender Hayden rushed to the spot, and succeeded, after considerable hard work, in extinguishing it with pails of water. Mr. Hayden estimates the damage at $20. Cause not known.

For the Patriot.

The Public Fountain.

The Granite Manufactnrers' Association sent $100 to the Public Fountain, and subscriptions are also acknowledged from Thomas Whicher, William F. Loud and Thomas Carey. It is time Quincy people began to realize that they are behind the times in many things. As the city is severely taxed, let the people devote a small share of their money in helping to make the squares, streets, sidewalks and grounds more attractive. This is what the Q. V. I. S. started for.

Open Regatta Today.

The annual invitation race of the Dorchester Yacht Club will be held today, this afternoon, off the clubhouse, Dorchester, at 1.30 P. M. The regatta will be open to all local yachts, 28 feet and under, sailing length.

ORIGINAL. No. 3
Hominy Gems.
BY MRS. D. A. LINCOLN,
Author Boston Cook Book.

Mix 2 table-sp. fine, uncooked hominy, ½ tea sp. salt, 1 table-sp. butter, and ½ cup boiling water. Place this over the tea kettle until the hominy absorbs all the water. Pour 1 cup boiling milk on 1 scant cup fine yellow corn meal; add 2 table-sp. sugar and the hominy. Let it cool slightly, then add the yolks of 2 eggs beaten to a light froth, then the whites beaten stiff. Stir in 1 level tea sp. Cleveland's baking powder and bake at once in hot buttered gem pans, about 20 minutes. A scant cup of cold boiled hominy may be used instead of the fresh hominy. It should be sifted through a squash strainer, to free it from lumps.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

CITY COUNCIL.

Seventeen members answered to the roll call at the regular meeting of the City Council Monday evening, but this number was soon augmented by three, making the only absentees Councilmen Drake, Little and Morton. It was a very unimportant meeting; not that there was any lack of business, or that sufficient time was not given, but never was there such quibbling and bickering over minor matters.

Brook Appropriation.

A communication from the Mayor desired a transfer of the $800 appropriated for the purpose of removing obstructions in the brook from the Commisioner of Public Works to the Board of Health. The charter, he said, did not confer any authority upon the Commissioner to perform the work that is necessary, while the Statutes gave the Board of Health the necessary legal authority.

Railroad Police.

The nomination by the Mayor of C. F. Wilde as railroad police, was confirmed.

Houghs Neck Protection.

A communication from the Mayor recommended that a fire alarm box be located at Houghs Neck, and that $250 be transferred from the appropriation for the enforcement of the liquor laws to meet the expense. The communication was placed on file with the intention of introducing an order later, but it was choked off by the motion to adjourn.

The Snow Account.

The Mayor requested that $65 be transferred from the appropriation for street lines and grades to the snow account, that some bills might be audited. Referred to Finance Committee.

Schoolhouse Plans.

A communication of the School Committee, approving of the plans for the new brick schoolhouse in Ward Three, was received and placed on file.

State Aid.

The application of Amelia Walsh for State Aid was referred to the Committee on State Aid.

Buckley Street.

Councilman Hammond presented the petition of Edwin S. Sandberg that Buckley Street be accepted. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Report on Licenses.

The Committee on Licenses reported adversely on the petition of William Corcoran for a common victualler's license. Accepted.

Favorably on the petition of Peter Donlin for a pool table license. Granted.

Electric Freight Hearing.

The Committee on streets reported in favor of giving a hearing August 17, on the petition for a location for the Quincy Electric Freight railway.

The order was amended to read Sept. 7, that the Council might take a vacation during August.

Councilman Pratt enquired of the Committee if it had obtained any opinions of the City Solicitor.

Councilman Jones replied that it had, and read the same. The Council could grant the location or not as it saw fit.

Councilman Pratt,—Is a public hearing obligatory?

Councilman Jones,—Yes.

The amended order was adopted.

Rodman Street.

The Committee on Streets reported favorably on the petition to lay out Rodman street, and offered an order for a public hearing Aug. 17.

This was amended to Sept. 7, and then a half hour was spent in fixing the hour. The order said 8.50, and amendments were offered making it 8.15, 7.55, at close of electric freight hearing, and finally settled on 7.50.

Tent Show or Circus.

Application for a tent show was received from Harper Bros.

Councilman Sherman offered an order granting the license for $15 and police protection.

Councilman Pratt and Warner objected to the low price, which was in violation of the ordinance; and the former moved to make it $50.

Councilman Fallon believed $25 should be enough.

The license was granted for a fee of $50.

Tracks on Saville Street.

Chairman Jones of the Street Committee made a statement relative to the removal of the street railway tracks on Saville street. The Committee had a report ready but the Commissioner of Public Works had requested him to withhold it, as the railway company had promised to pave and put in satisfactory condition. Councilman Jones asked further time.

Commissioner Ewell said the railway tracks throughout the city were in a bad condition and not passable. He was using his best efforts to have this remedied, and hoped the Council would back him up.

The tracks on Saville street had been covered with gravel, but should be paved.

Councilman Bryant said the street railways had abused their grant, and it was an outrage the condition they were in.

Councilman Holden believed the company did not intend to use the tracks, and only kept them there to prevent the Manet company from laying tracks. The tracks should be ordered up as they were unsafe.

Councilman Bryant moved that the chairman be requested to report, and after considerable quibbling the vote was passed, 12 to 4.

President Thompson requested Chairman Jones to report.

Councilman Jones moved that the Committee on Streets be allowed to meet for ten minutes.

This provoked considerable talk and it got pretty hot, and the Council, on motion of Councilman Sherman, adjourned at 9.40 for one week.

THE EXTENSION of the fire alarm to Houghs Neck means more than the first cost, $250. It will make the demand for a circuit repeater more imperative, while at present all seems to be running smoothly with the fire alarm. Then one box will not be sufficient. Houghs Neck, we believe should have an independent fire protection, with telephone connection with the central station to summon assistance in case of a threatened conflagration. The cost would be less, and there is no doubt but arrangements can be made with the Telephone Company to establish a telephone there. A public telephone would be more than self sustaining and it is what the cottagers desire.

Accidents.

Early Monday afternoon some twenty-five boys wearing white hats and accompanied by two drums were parading on Quincy avenue advertising Doble's currants and followed by a hundred or more other youngsters who were attracted by the drums. James R. Qualey of Braintree, driving by when his horse became excited requiring all his strength to hold him, and when nearly past the crowd one of the reins broke, causing the horse to turn round suddenly, throwing Mr. Qualey violently to the ground. The horse then ran, smashing the buggy. Mr. Qualey was carried to Dr. Doble's office where it was found he was severely bruised, but fortunately no bones were broken.

Dr. Garey's horse was also frightened and ran a short distance, being stopped before any damage was done.

Monday afternoon William Michael, of School street, while at work in the stone sheds at South Quincy, accidently caught his hand between two blocks of granite crushing it in a shocking manner. He was taken to the office of Dr. McLennan where his wound was dressed.

Mr. Nightingale, of Granite street, employed as a blacksmith, had an artery in his arm cut by a flying piece of steel. Dr. Doble removed the steel and dressed the wound.

George Tuckerman was thrown from his buckboard while on Hancock street "in the Hollow," Monday afternoon.

K. of H. Installation.

The installation of officers of Merry Mount Lodge, K. of H., took place at their hall Friday evening of last week. Grand Dictator Richardson and the full board being present. The installation ceremony of grand officers was performed in an impressive manner by the grand officers, in the absence of the deputy grand dictator. After the installation Grand Reporter Pratt presented the treasurer, A. Keating, with a past dictator's certificate from the Grand Lodge, in recognition of thirteen consecutive years service as treasurer of Merry Mount Lodge. Mr. Keating received it with a very fitting response. A similar presentation to W. W. Penniman was made by Past Grand Dictator C. A. Foster for ten consecutive years' service as reporter, to which Mr. Penniman responded. At the close ice cream, cake and coffee was served.

A Pleasant Outing.

On Saturday the Quincy Euchre club enjoyed its annual outing, visiting Winthrop and dining at the Great Head house. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. A. Field, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Crane, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Federhen, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Tisdale, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Durgin, Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Whiton, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lincoln. The menu was very tastefully got up, and was highly relished.

Hibernians Entertained.

The directors of the A. O. H. Insurance Fund and other prominent Hibernians were the guests of members of Division 6, A. O. H., of Weymouth, at Lovell's Grove, Sunday, and partook of a clam bake. The guests were: President John M. Hayes of Abington; Vice-President James T. Murphy of Marlboro, P. F. Connor of Clinton, W. B. Mahoney of Westfield, Charles H. O'Donnell, directors of the Insurance Fund; President Edward Shea; Vice Presidents T. F. Roche of Division 1 of Brockton; Captain Mackinn of Hibernian Guards, Brockton; County Delegate W. J. Codyo Franklin; State Delegate John J. McKeever of Weymouth, ex-President John J. Byron of Division 5 of Quincy.

The entertainers were John M. Carey, T. F. Lynch, M. H. Donavan, H. M. Ford, John F. Dwyer and T. F. Corridan.

THEY SAY.

It was hot at the Council meeting Monday eveni ng.

That it was not so much the weather.

That the heat burned the fuse.

That this ended an evening of boys' play.

That it was a mean trick to spring the motion to adjourn.

That the motion passed because it was not debatable.

That it was a close vote.

That several were sorry they voted yea.

That it allowed one man to carry his point.

That that man was prepared to make a report.

That he took a notion not to.

That he declared he wouldn't.

That by the rules the committee was expected to report.

That the Council voted to request the report.

That the president did so request.

That the member wished the committee to take a recess and further consider it.

That there was strong objection to this.

That it was at this time that the Council adjourned.

That the new schoolhouse plans should have been considered.

That the Finance Committee might have reported, and the order passed.

That the matter should not be unduly rushed.

That another Willard job should not be saddled upon the city.

Wanted Lodgings.

Wednesday afternoon two daughters of Arabia were engaged in selling religious goods and knic-knacks through the Point district. Finding the shades of night coming on they espied the unfinished barn of Mr. George Phillips on Chubbuck street, and proceeded to take up their lodgings for the night in it. After considerable remonstrance on the part of the owner they were induced to leave it. Mr. Kittredge was the next to receive a call and here also they were unsuccessful. Nothing daunted they applied once more at the residence of Mr. Ring, on Washington street, but he leaving no extra room they were forced to depart, and when last seen they were "plodding their weary way" towards the heart of the Granite City.

Somerville's Valuation.

Amount raised for taxes in 1891 at $14 per $1,000	515,807.00

HOUGHS NECK.

The fire of last week and protection from fire in the future, is still the principal topic at Houghs Neck. While the residents are pleased at the prospects of a fire alarm box being located here, yet they are not satisfied and would much rather have a telephone. It was only Tuesday that a young lady had to pay a dollar for having a telegraph despatch delivered which would have been saved had there been a telephone station here.

The general impression seems to be that the old Granite should be located here, and the people will not be satisfied until they get it.

That a company to man it could be easil obtained, is certain, and already a number of names have been mentioned for the office as foreman. May the City Coucil soon do something is the wish of one and all.

J. L. Harvey reports that the two cottages and stable owned by Mrs. Packard, destroyed by fire, were insured for $1200.

District Court, Quincy.

William Anderson for being a tramp at Quincy was given 24 hours by Justice Flint to get a job and if he did not succeed to go up for two years.

Mary Murphy, of Quincy, for assault on Mary Cocheran, paid a fine of $5. Chickens were the cause.

Catherine Cocheran, of Quincy, for assault on Mary A. Donovan was discharged, but not without a solemn warning from Justice Flint that if they ever brought a case of this kind into court again he would impose a heavy penalty.

Charles A. Duggan of Quincy, was arraigned for assault on Thomas Brady, on the morning of July 4. The Government's case as presented was that Duggan came across the street and went into Brady's house; words took place; then Duggan and Brady came to the door; Brady had the gun in his hands. Duggan struck him and took the gun away.

Duggan testified he was at the boat house and came home and learned that his half brother, Thomas Gilligan, had been shot by Brady. He went over to Brady's and went into the shed where he found Brady with a gun in his hand. Duggan asked Brady what he wanted to shoot the little fellow for; to which Brady replied "Get out or I will shoot you." Duggan then grabbed the gun and a tussle ensued until the middle of the yard was reached. Did not willfully and knowingly strike him.

Brady was then called to testify and said Duggan came in and struck him twice in the house and again in the yard where he was knocked down. Defendant fined $10.

John J. Mullen, James Boyle and Daniel Mahoney of Holbrook were arraigned for assault on Samuel B. Hobart. The case against James Boyle and Daniel Mahoney was placed on file on payment of costs. John J. Mullen was fined $25.

William Anderson, the tramp whom Justice Flint gave twenty-four hours to get a job, showed up again Tuesday morning, having failed to get a job. The court then sent him to the State farm at Bridgewater for two years.

James Sullivan, William Dellano, and Samuel D. Drinkwater, all of Milton, were arraigned for breaking and entering the places of Frank E. Cutler and William H. Kennedy, of Milton, and the larceny therefrom of goods to the value of $18. James Sullivan was held in $1,000, and William Dellano and Samuel D. Drinkwater were held in $500 each for the Grand Jury.

Franklin Porter, of Randolph, was arraigned for keeping a liquor nuisance, and continued for hearing to July 25.

Eben Whitman, of South Weymouth, was arraigned for knowingly receiving pigeons stolen from George A. Miles, of East Weymouth. The defendant was discharged on payment of costs.

George E. Nash, of East Weymouth, for illegally keeping intoxicating liquors, paid a fine of $50.

George E. Nash, of East Weymouth, for keeping a pool room without a license, paid a fine of $33.

Soloman Wassecug, for peddling without a license, paid a fine of $10.

John O'Keefe, Jr., of Randolph, for assault on his father, John O'Keefe, was fined $7, in default committed.

Arthur H. Foley, a granite polisher, was arrested this morning for obtaining goods and money on false pretences.

Foley who is employed by Miller & Luce, presented a due bill for $32.50 signed by the above firm dated May 22 and payable June 15, to Fred J. Pierce a fruit dealer on Granite street, and obtained the goods and money. When the bill became due the forgery was discovered and all efforts to settle the matter having failed Foley was arrested and arraigned, when the case was continued to August 13.

William F. Cowing, of East Weymouth, for the larceny of a number of pigeons from George A. Miles, paid a fine of $10.

Obituary.

The Rev. Eben Muse, a former pastor of the Presbyterian church in this city, died at the manse on Quincy street, Thursday morning, after a long and painful illness, in the 53d year of his age. He had been a severe sufferer but knew his fate and was perfectly resigned to it and bore his sufferings with christian fortitude.

During his pastorate of the Presbyterian society in this city which began about 1885 and continued up to a few months ago, he was eminently successful in establishing a strong church, particularly in numbers. The edifice and also the manse were built during his pastorate, and largely through his personal efforts were cleared of debt.

The only city office held by the deceased was that of School Committee man, being elected in Ward Three in 1888, the first city election, receiving 251 votes to 195 for his opponent. He was placed over the John Hancock school. Mr. Muse might have been reelected in 1889, but failing health caused him to decline a renomination, and he was succeeded by Mr. Emery L. Crane, the present incumbent.

Mr. Muse was in the rebellion, serving in Company E., 9th Penn., Vet., Reserves. He was a member of Paul Revere Post of this city, and filled the office of chaplain. He could always be depended upon to amuse social gatherings of the Post with stories and entertaining remarks.

The writer regrets that he cannot at this time recall incidents of his eventful life, for his career has been a remarkable one. He was an ardent republican, and in this connection he boasted of the fact that he had voted for President in six different states in twenty-five years, viz:—Kentucky, Mississippi, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Massachusetts.

Rev. Mr. Muse was also successful on the platform, especially in his lecture on "the War, from the Standpoint of a private soldier and Southern Unionist." It was highly commended by his audiences and the press. His delineation of the odd characters and humorous incidents of the army as well as his anecdotes of Southern life, told in genuine Southern dialect were well appreciated by the comrades. His touching and eloquent story of the sterling loyalty of the East Tennesseeans in spite of every kind of persecution, introduced a subject which has received little attention from the historian. The whole address was intensely patriotic and delivered with the speaker's well known earnestness and force, receiving frequent applause.

Struck it Rich.

It is not generally known probably that McDonnell & Sons of this city are extensive farmers, but recently through trade they secured a dairy farm of 500 acres in Springville, N. Y. About two hundred tons of hay are annually cut from it, and sixty-five cattle are kept. Some weeks ago they started to dig a well on their farm in search of oil, and the following dispatch shows a rich find:

SPRINGVILLE, July 18, [special]—A very heavy flow of gas was found in the well being put down on the McDonnell farm here yesterday. The gas was ignited and burned a solid stream twenty feet high. A cap was put on to extinguish the fire and digging was resumed. There is no stock for sale.

Boring will be continued with good prospect of finding oil also.

Comedy Company.

A good summer audience gathered at Faxon hall Wednesday evening to witness the production of Byron's comedy, "Partners for Life," by the H. M. Pitt Comedy Company. The fact that Miss Elinore Carroll (Miss E. C. Coffey) of this city was to take a leading part was doubtless the drawing card, and the young lady did not disappoint her friends.

The part of Tom Gilroy was taken very cleverly by Mr. H. M. Pitt.

Mr. John W. Rose of this city took an amusing part, that of Muggles, the confidential servant of Mr. Mervyn.

In the cast were also Mr. G. F. Farren, Mr. Carl Scranton, Mr. Elmer W. Rae, Mr. Francis Hallett, Mr. C. F. Bates, Miss Eva Turner, Miss Emily Bramhall and Miss Emma Ballard.

Owls 8; North Weymouths 7.

One of the best exhibitions of ball ever given in this city was witnessed by a large crowd on the Washington street grounds on Saturday, the contesting clubs being the Owls of this city and the North Weymouths. The spectators were appreciative throughout but their enthusiasm knew no bounds when the Owls succeeded in defeating their opponents by a score of 8 to 7. The feature of the game was the excellent battery work of Connors and Burrell of the Owls. The Owls point with pride to the fact that they are the only club that has defeated the famous North Weymouths this season.

Assault.

Sunday morning about 2 o'clock, five Italians who were under the influence of liquor approached the Quincy Adams station and began to put up the gates which were down. James Vinson, the gateman, ordered them to let them alone. This apparantly angered them and they attacked him. He rushed into the gatehouse, when several stones came through the window. Vinson then armed himself with a club, rushed out and made for the crowd, who seeing he meant business, dispersed.

Reported Drowned.

It was reported Sunday evening about town that Ebenezer Crane had been drowned, but it now turns out to be a fake. It seems that Crane in company with Jas. Coburn went out boating Sunday and landed at Paddocks island. Coburn later took the boat and started for the shore leaving Crane on the island. He had gone but a short distance when he lost his oars and was drifting about helpless when he was picked up by a passing boat, to the occupants of which he told on reaching the shore that Crane had fallen overboard and was drowned.

Saturday's Regattas.

The first and second classes of the Hull Yacht club had a regatta Saturday. The Albatross had no rival in the first. In the second the order by corrected time was Harbinger, Hawk, Mignon, Pilgrim, Erin and White Fawn.

The Rocket was first in her class in the Hull Corinthian race. Other cup winners were the Egeria, Composite and Billow.

The first boats in their classes in the South Boston race, were the Myrth, Quissett, Swordfish, Arvilda, Mabel and Trifle.

At Rufe's Hummock.

Nine young ladies, Misses Grace W. Emery, Carrie M. Shunk, Rosetta L. Key, Amy L. Key, Imogene M. Perry, Edith V. Perry, Emma A. Wheeler, Lona T. MacKay, and Mabel M. MacKay are spending two pleasant weeks at Dr. Rice's cottage, Bohemian Lodge, Rufe's Hummock, Faxon's beach, Wollaston. Their friends wish them much happiness and rest.

Miss Hattie Snell of Holbrook, has been a guest for a few days at Bohemian Lodge.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE. One of the items of revenue of the Brooklyn bridge is a yearly rental of $13,000 from telegragh and telephone companies, for allowing their cables to lie on the iron stringers.

☞ Every railroad running passenger cars in Massachusetts must have them heated by steam from the engine before the winter season of 1892-3. The days of the dangerous car stoves are about over and the deadly grade crossing must go, too.

Lost and Found.

A reporter from this office started in in search of the Old Granite Monday afternoon and after a two hours' hunt found her in Badger Bros.' old machine shop on Crescent street.

Acting upon word received from Chief Ripley that she was at the Poor Farm or at Carey's barn, West Quincy, the Poor Farm was communicated with by telephone when it was learned from Supt. Jacobs that she was not there. West Quincy was next visited and the barns of all the Carey's inspected, but she was not there and had not been.

Councilman Powers who used to run with the machine was found and he had an idea where she was. Mr. Badger was called upon and the key obtained, and the old shop visited, and sure enough there she was safe and sound.

An inspection of the tub found her in much better condition than expected. Some of the paint was knocked off, and her brakes somewhat bent, but otherwise she appeared all right.

The brakes were tried and found to work easy; the suction hose looked rather rusty, but was still good, and the wheels were just as good as when new. Councilman Powers thought an outlay of from $50 to $75 would put her in good working order. Of course this would not paint her in fancy colors, but a good, neat and serviceable color.

When she went out of commission the price set on her was $300. She has been used a number of times since then to pump out wells and has always worked all right, and with the outlay as stated above she would yet do excellent service in case of fire.

Houghs Neck people are set upon having a hand tub, and as it would be less expensive than a useless fire alarm box why not let them have it. They are already looking to considerable pleasure from monthly or weekly trials.

Engineer Packard hopes Houghs Neck will get the old Granite and proposes that the "Most Popular Man" go down and initiate the cottagers in the mysteries of the complex machine.

If the Granite engine cannot be made serviceable for Houghs Neck, perhaps the famous Torrent 2 of Hingham can be secured. It has just gone out of commission, a hose wagon having taken its place. It has done good service at many fires and is still serviceable. It has been stored in a barn in that town.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Visitation and Installation.

Wollaston Lodge, No. 926, Knights of Honor, was visited, July 20, by the Grand Dictator of Massachusetts for the purpose of installing its officers for the term ending Dec. 31. The Grand Dictator was accompanied by the following suite:

G. V. D.—Charles F. Pinney as P. G. P.
G. A. D.—F. N. Churchill as G. V. D.
G. R.—E. Granville Pratt.
G. G.—E. W. Bailey.
G. T.—U. S. Burnham.
G. C.—G. A. Watts.
Acting G. A. D.—W. F. Murray.

The hall was crowded by members of the lodge and visiting brothers from Newton, Quincy and elsewhere.

After the duties of the evening were performed, a collation was served under the direction of Brothers Marshall and Colgan and was followed by addresses by the grand officers, George E. Richardson, C. F. Pinney, E. W. Bailey, G. A. Watts and E. G. Pratt, who spoke eloquently and earnestly of the good of the order. Brothers Keating and Bass of Merry Mount Lodge and Brother C. R. Sherman also made remarks, the addresses being interspersed with music by Bros. Colgan and Stevens.

This gathering can hardly fail of producing good results in the near future, for not more than one in three of those in the vicinity, who are eligible, belong to the lodge. Appications for membership will be gladly received by either of the following board of officers:

Past Dictator—E. J. Cummings.
Dictator—W. B. Orcutt.
Vice Dictator—W. J. Thompson.
Assistant Dictator—A. P. Gardner.
Reporter—W. J. Battison.
Financial Reporter—C. W. Tucker.
Treasurer—A. G. Olney.
Chaplain—C. A. Stevens.
Guide—W. H. Bowker.
Guardian—T. F. Mitchell.
Sentinel—L. Jackson.
Trustees—W. H. Brasee, Charles T. Baker, James C. Bates.

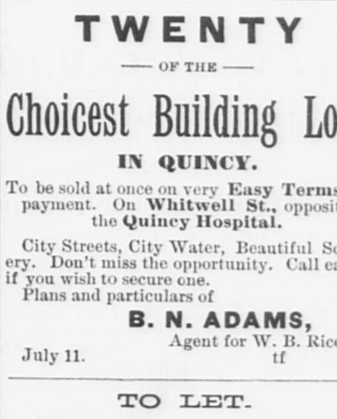
Hall beat Packard,	9—4
Harlow beat Rogers,	9—2
Harlow beat Hall,	9—4



The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A Singular Case.

A boy eight years old, living in New York, has a head so large that he cannot carry it naturally. In his large head there is contained more knowledge than is usual to boys of his age. Yet he has never seen the interior of a schoolroom. He weighs fifty pounds, and at least one-third of this weight is that of his head.

The case is diagnosed as hydrocephalus, or water in the head.

The presence of this element has resulted in the shrinkage of the boy's brain, and also the bones forming the back part of the skull.

The doctor's say the trouble may have had it origin at birth, or it may have come on gradually for years. Its future growth is also a matter of uncertainty. At the rate at which the boy's head has been increasing of late it will reach the size of a very large pumpkin in a few years' time. But the doctors say it is possible that the boy's head has now attained its full growth.

Comfort Before Beauty.

"The people down around Cape Cod are queer characters," remarked the woman of fashion to a Chigago Post reporter. "I went down to South Yarmouth one day last summer to buy some thread which I happened to need very badly. There was only one clerk in the little shop, and he was busy with a customer. So I had to wait, and of course I could not help overhearing the conversation. The customer was an old woman, and she was inspecting some buttons preparatory to a purchase. She found it hard to decide, and at last asked me to give my opinion upon three or four different kinds. I told her I thought a certain cloth button was the prettiest.

"Waal," she replied, "it be pretty, but for raal comfort in the summer time give me a thin bone button."

Delightful Resorts.

Our readers who are desirous of finding pleasant places to spend the summer should bear in mind that the Chicago & North-Western Railway furnishes every facility for a rapid, safe and comfortable journey from Chicago to Waukesha, Madison, Lake Geneva, Neenah, Marquette, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Lake Minnetonka, Yellowstone National Park and the mountain resorts of Colorado and the far West. Fast vestibuled trains, equipped with reclinning chair cars, parlor cars, palace, sleeping and dinning cars, afford patrons of the North-Western every luxury incident to travel by a first class railway. Excursion tickets at reduced rates and descriptive pamphlets can be obtained upon application to any ticket agent or by addressing W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

Letters on Anthropology.

This brochure contains the names of seventy-eight American, English, German and French authors; medical, legal, clerical and scientific students of anthropology, who have in 131 papers covered the principal questions in this fruitful department of inquiry, which were read before the Academy of Anthropology. Dr. E. C. Mann of Brooklyn is president. The founder, Dr. E. P. Thwing, and president the first four years, is the only active member who was present at the organization.

There are about 100 resident and nearly 200 corresponding and honorary members. Sixteen foreign countries are represented and some of the most valuable papers came from those who are now resident. A few classes were held at the start but latterly the Academy has furnished free lectures semi-monthly at Cooper Union. A handbook on anthropology, a memorial of Professor Armor and the Involuntary Life, are among the publications of the body. The field of its influence is widening every year.

Endurance.

How much the heart may bear, and yet not break;
How much the flesh may suffer, yet not die!
I question much if any pain or ache
Of soul or body brings our end more nigh;
Death chooses his own time: till that is sworn,
All evils may be borne.

We shrink and shudder at the surgeon's knife,
Each nerve recoiling from the cruel steel
Whose edge seems searching for the quivering life,
Yet to our sense the bitter pangs reveal
That till, although the trembling flesh be torn,
This also can be borne.

We see a sorrow rising in our way,
And try to flee from the approaching ill;
We seek some small escape, we weep and pray;
But when the blow falls, then our hearts are still;
Not that the pain is of its sharpness shorn,
But that it can be borne.

We wind our life about another's life,
We hold it closer, dearer than our own;
Anon it faints and falls in deadly strife,
Leaving us stunned, and stricken, and alone;
But ah! we do not die with those we mourn;
This also can be borne.

Behold! we live through all things—famine, thirst,
Bereavement, pain; all grief and misery,
All woe and sorrow; life inflicts worst
On soul and body, but we cannot die,
Though we be sick, and tired, and faint, and worn,
Lo! all things can be borne.

Household Receipts.

BANANA-CREAM PUDDING. Melt one cup of sugar in one pint of hot milk. Mix two tablespoons corn starch with cold milk, stir it into the boiling milk, and cook fifteen minutes. Add two tablespoons of butter. Beat the whites of three eggs stiff, stir into the thickened milk and cook again for five minutes. Turn into a deep dish to cool. When ready to serve, cover the cream with bananas sliced. Mix a few grains of salt with half a cup of powdered sugar. Sprinkle this over the bananas. Serve with cream and jelly sauce, made of one-fourth cup of apple or strawberry jelly, beaten into one cup of thick cream.

MUTTON CHOPS WITH LEMON. Wash the chops, wipe them dry, grease the bars of your gridiron, and broil them over hot coals. When they are done lay them on a dish and season them with pepper and salt, and baste them with butter; peel and slice lemons, lay a slice on each chop and send them to the table. This is the French method of serving them.

RAISED CAKE. Two full cups of bread dough, one cup of butter, two eggs (leaving out one white), one-half level teaspoonful of soda, a little nutmeg, cinnamon, cloves and raisins, also currants and citron if you like. All the fruit must be chopped fine. Put all the ingredients into your mixing bowl and work together thoroughly with a knife or the hand. Pour into a well buttered cake pan and leave it in a warm place to rise nearly two hours. Bake a little less than an hour. Frost with the white of egg left out.

FRIED TOMATOES. Cut ripe or green tomatoes in two or three pieces, mix a handful of Indian meal with some pepper and salt, dip the tomatoes into it and fry in butter, with care not to scorch. Lay the slices upon a hot dish, make a gravy of a cup of milk, two teaspoonfuls corn starch, little butter and salt and pour over them.

CLAM FRITTERS. Take raw clams, chopped fine, and make a batter with the juice, and equal quantity of sweet milk, four eggs to each pint of the mixture and flour to make a stiff batter. Fry in boiling lard.

ENGAGED. At one of the recent exhibitions in Concert hall, Bridgewater, on a seat a short distance from the front was a placard to denote that certain seats were reserved for the evening. As the concert progressed and the seats became filled, a well-known spinster of forty-five or thereabouts came in and took the placarded seat. During the evening she used the card as a fan, not noticing that it bore in large black letters the word "engaged."

A GRAND ORGAN. The large organ for the Rev. Mr. Talmage's new tabernacle at Brooklyn contains four manuals of five octaves each, and a pedal of two and one-half octaves, 66 pipe stops (or 110 stops with pedals, couplers, etc.,) including one of 32 feet, 11 of 16 feet, and 32 of 8 feet. The total number of pipes is 4448. Among the more novel effects are a Chinese gong, a chime of bells and three drums (long roll, bass drum and drum check).

AUSTRALIAN BALLOT. Massachusetts was the first State to adopt the use of the Australian ballot in 1888, in 1889 nine other States fell into line; since then twenty more States have joined, and now comes Michigan, leaving but fourteen States to adopt this system of balloting.

ROCKPORT. The Rockport assessors have completed their valuation of taxable property, and report $1,831,918 of real estate and $230,130 of personal estate, with $72,720 of non-resident bank stock, a total of $2,134,768. The number of polls is 896, and the rate of taxation will be $15.70 per $1000. The valuation shows a net loss of $1,386, there being a decrease of $4,856 in real estate and an increase of $3,200 in personal property.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

Anecdotes.

"Why do you call Jones 'colonel'? He was never in the war."

"No; but his substitute was."

Dentist—"Do you want to take laughing gas?"

"Visitor—"Not till after de toof is out, boss—reckon I'll feel mo' like laughin' den!"

Doctor—"Well, how do you feel today?"
Patient—"I feel as if I had been dead a week."
Doctor—"Hot, eh?"

Teacher—"What are the names of the seven days of the week?"
Boy—"Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday."
Teacher—"That's only six days. You have missed one. When does your mother go to church?"
Boy—"When pa buys her a new hat."

"What is wisdom?" asked a teacher of a class of small girls. A bright-eyed little creature arose and answered,—
"Information of the brain."

For the Patriot.

Fashions at Saratoga.

PIAZZA COSTUMES.

In piazza costumes, a leading feature is that of one color above another, as for example a dress lately worn by a member of the Hilton family, which was of pale green crape over pink taffeta silk. One of Peter Cooper's granddaughters appeared at dinner lately, in pale gray chiffon over blue silk and among other contrasts may be mentioned pink over yellow, tan or yellow over pink or green or blue above gray, but every day, new ideas come up and anything seems allowable, provided the colors in themselves are fashionable. Changeable taffeta silk is in much favor for linings, because throwing two colors and the semi-transparent dress above, matches one of them.

EXTREMELY COOL

outfits result from the wearing of independent waists of China silk made without linings. Young people wear in addition to black, such colors as dark or pale blue, crimson, pink, pale yellow, tan or gray in solid shades or varied by dots, stripes or figures, chiefly the first named, but even an elderly lady if not too portly, may indulge in the comfort of a black or dark colored China silk waist. Almost all have been bought ready made in shops and a minority have thin cheese cloth linings which render them much more durable than the unlined, without adding perceptibly to the warmth. The observation just made in regard to elderly ladies must however be taken with some allowance regarding Saratoga matrons, since not a few indulge in every gayety of color or fabric with free exhibitions of arms and necks regardless of avoirdupois or the contrary extreme, provided always that sufficient jewelry is worn in atonement. But only a few wear wigs or resort to dyes and precious gems sparkle in the midst of gray coiffures. A new way of dressing the hair is called the Recamier and shows the hair coming to a point in front and from thence, some strands cut in irregular lengths, are drawn lightly over the temples. This is suitable to various ages and it can be added that in general full dress, arrangements of the hair are high, with a long tortoise shell or jewelled pin run through.

STYLES IN MAKING.

Notwithstanding the great popularity of full waists belted in, many India or China silk dresses are made with short basques or princesse and it is almost needless to add that the entire class of rich materials are made close fitting, to say nothing of the very stylish wools which find place even at this resort. Among the first named, a princesse dress of pale gray and pink brocade finished with white point lace, forwarded from New York, by Lord & Taylor to a leader of fashion, has been the envy of many a rival.

NOTES.

For afternoon drives, the same elegant traveling cloaks of taffeta silk which were worn in drawing room cars during the journey, do duty to protect handsome dresses.

Gowns for afternoon or evening are made with V neck back and front and a stylish ruching consists of a double chiffon plaiting which attached on either side to a ribbon band, encircles the neck, meets in front and extends to the waist as a jabot. Short, full chiffon ruches are also very much worn where the dress is V shape only in front or a change is given by a lace chemisette with broad collar to match.

White canvas shoes with white or black patent leather tips and bands with white Lisle or pale cream colored Balbriggan hosiery and white undressed kid or wash leather mousquetaire gloves, are a fashionable combination. LUCY CARTER.

PLYMOUTH. The Old Colony Memorial says that the committee of the Pilgrim society who have been instructed to make certain improvements of the grounds about the National monument in Plymouth have decided to place a substantial curbing in octagonal form about the monument at a convenient distance from the base, thus making a raised walk on which people can move about in viewing the tablets, without being incommoded by carriages. Outside of the octagon will be a circular road forty feet wide, which will permit visitors to make a near circuit of the monument while seated in carriages. This, and the approaches, will be hardened with shells, and when in condition will form a complete portion of the grounds. No grading of any extent can be done this year owing to limited funds.

THE CENTURY. Poultney Bigelow, who was a schoolmate of the German Emperor, will contribute an article to the Midsummer (August) Number of The Century on the first three years of the Emperor's reign—the third anniversary of his ascent to the throne having taken place on the 15th of June. Mr. Bigelow believes that "since Frederick the Great no King of Prussia has understood his business like this emperor," and in this article he gives what he considers the secret of the power of William II. with his people, and incidentally contributes many facts regarding his life.

This number of The Century will be especially rich in illustrated articles and complete stories, and the illustrations of Mr. Bigelow's paper will include a number of views of the palaces at Berlin and Potsdam and engraved portraits of the Emperor and Empress will form a double frontispiece.

☞ A vase, which it has taken four years to complete, has just been sent to London from the Minton china manufactory. It was made by M. Tolon, is valued at £1500, and is considered the handsomest thing of the kind that has ever been made. Venus, Bacchus and a group of cupids are represented in the design.

Magazine Advertising.

The largest single advertisement which ever appeared in any one issue of the Century was that of the Waterbury Watch Co. in July, 1882; it occupied eight pages, for which the watch company paid $1,660. The same space now would cost $2,000. Theo. B. Starr, the jeweler, had a half page in every issue for over ten years, for which he has paid an aggregate of upwards of $12,000. Proctor & Gamble have paid $500 each insertion for over a year; while Ladd & Coffin pay the same price for the opposite page.

At page rates the advertising in the Century for December, '90, foots up $36,600. The average would show a yearly income of over $395,000 from advertising. Harper's for December, '90, shows at page rates $31,450 worth and for March, '91, $25,637.50. If this is a fair monthly average, Harper's yearly receipts from advertising reach over $342,000. The same rule applied to Scribner's will show about $15,000 a month, or $180,000 a year.

General Sherman's Story.

General William Tecumseh Sherman told good stories.

"When I was with the army in Georgia a slave owner one Christmas missed a fat turkey. He suspected a fine looking colored man, and had him brought before him.

"'You have stolen my turkey and eaten it,' said the irate master.

"'I'se not going to say I didn't when you says I did, massa.'

"'I ought to do something to you. What have you to say why I should not punish you?'

"'Well, massa, you han't los' anything particular. You see, you have a little less turkey and a good deal more nigger.'

"And the master had to acknowledge the philosophy of the slave and let him go unpunished."—Chicago Times.

☞ One of the greatest obstacles to the settlement of vast regions in Africa has been the tsetse fly. Although harmless to man, all civilized animals die from its bite in two or three days. A man of Natal has discovered a remedy for the poison in which he has such confidence that he has contracted to carry the Portuguese military stores through the tabooed districts on bullocks.

☞ The new town of Bourne has increased in valuation $83,650 since last year and the rate of taxation is $10 per $1,000. Grover Cleveland pays a tax of $127.50 Joe Jefferson $223.25, Rev. C. A. Bartol, Boston, $325.50, James Norcroso, $453.50.

The United States postoffice department is trying to kill all the investment companies in the country. A Lynn woman has received a note from that department, stating that money orders drawn to the order of such companies would not be paid.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

The Drunkard's Will.

I leave to society a ruined character, a wretched example and a memory that will soon rot.

I leave to my parents during the rest of their lives, as much sorrow as humanity in a feeble and declining state can sustain.

I leave to my brothers and sisters as much mortification and injury as I could bring on them.

I leave my wife a broken heart and a life of wretchedness and shame, through which to weep over my premature death.

I give and bequeath to each of my children, poverty, ignorance, and low character, and the remembrance that their father was a monster.—Temperance Cause.

For the Patriot.

Intemperance.

Intemperance notwithstanding the efforts of individuals and societies to restrain and suppress it, is still the colossal evil of our times. Its results fall with crushing weight upon many households blighting their hopes and prospects. The dictates of humanity and patriotism alike demand that it should be overpowered even at the sacrifice of some individual rights as the lesser evil. The convivial customs of society that perpetuate the pernicious use of wines and other liquors as beverages is the prolific source of this great curse. These examples are especially alluring to the young who are close imitators of those in fashionable circles.

The increasing consumption of some brands of wine far exceeds the vineyard productions, and chemical compositions are resorted to to make up the deficiency, which are perhaps equally palateable. Cervantes relates that in his time, three hundred years ago, that a connoisseur could detect by the flavor the least foreign substance in a cask of wine, and describe what it was a bit of iron or leather. Probably our imbibers are not so fastidious in their tastes. There can no longer be a scarcity of liquors of any kinds or quantities they being so easily artificially made; the foreign being only more artistically produced. These detetery liquids are widely disseminated, engendering numerous distressful diseases.

The prohibitory laws of the neighboring States has tended to concentrate the liquor traffic in New England's metropolis to the great advantage of its dispensers, which attracts an ever increasing thirsty crowd from every direction.

The luxurious and dissolute habits that are so prominent at the present time, are traceable chiefly to the families of manufacturers, who for the last thirty years have been greatly enriched by national legislation. Living in the possession of rich abundance and exempt from efforts of industry, and are therefore with attainments, they devote themselves to a life of indulgence and enjoyment. They take upon themselves to act as guards of society, and parade on public occasions; contaminators of the public morals, they can only be restrained by the contempt and disgust of public opinion. De Tocqueville the close observer of social and political tendencies, predicted sixty years ago, "that the next door through which an aristocracy would make its appearance, would be from that of the manufacturers." If the van-guard has already arrived, it must be greatly ahead of the main body.

Legislation in this State has contributed very slightly towards the suppression of intemperance. Whatever may be the intentions of constituents, representatives after being elected consider themselves in the line of political advancement, and cherish aspirations for popular favor, and like the mariner trim their sails to catch every favoring breeze, and their vote upon a measure depends upon many contingencies, they shrink from a decided time of action.

Another uncertainty in legislative action is the influence of the lobby an excrescence of fungus growth eutirely unknown to the laws, composed of agents selected by special interests, who have obtruded themselves between the people and their representatives. Insiduous and unscrupulous a law that is not in accordance with special interests is permitted to pass, or thwarted and destroyed by amendments. It was from such legislation that the city of Boston itself only escaped from becoming an appendage to a corporation by an executive veto. We almost daily see how partisan motives influence the minds of men; and we are beginning to realize that special interests with combined wealth have undermined republican governmental polity. Upon what then can the common interest depend for protection? Y.

SULPHUR BITTERS
The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.
It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,
SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap Rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR Bitters.
The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your Druggist.
DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE
If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

The Real Mother-in-Law.

Who was it taught my wife to bake
A loaf of bread or fancy cake,
And appetizing dishes make?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when my wife was ill,
Bestowed upon her care and skill,
And saved to me a nurse's bill?
My mother-in-law.

Who then my little ones prepared
Each morn for school, who for them cared,
And all their little sorrows shared?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when their prayers were said,
So snugly tucked them into bed,
And, till they slept, beside them stayed?
My mother-in-law.

Who of my clothing then took care,
Who overlooked my underwear,
And kept each garment in repair?
My mother-in-law.

Who oft to me her aid has lent
To buy the coal and pay the rent?
Who'd gladly see me President?
My mother-in-law.

A loving grandmother is she,
A generous friend she's been to me,
Forever honored let her be,
My mother-in-law.

How Beauty Saved Them.

"Look! mamma, look! a snow-white kitty, and see the pretty blue ribbon around his neck! How can we get there?"

The speaker, a dark-eyed little girl of eight years, was standing on tiptoe and pointing eagerly across a thick, tangled mass of rock and mountain undergrowth which formed an impassable barrier between them a small clear space on the side of the mountain, on which, either dead or dying from exhaustion and fright, lay stretched a tiny white kitten. The dog, whose bark and sudden rush through the thicket had first attracted the attention of mother and child, was nowhere to be seen. A circuitous tramp and much scrambling over sharp rocks and through ragged hedges of mountain-berry brought them at last to the spot where the kitten still lay, apparently lifeless.

"O mamma, what a beauty! not a bit of black on him!" cried the child, as she dropped on her knees and caressed with daintiest touch the sleek, shining fur of the little hunted creature lying so motionless in the rich, warm light of the glowing August afternoon. "He isn't dead, either," she continued, glancing up. "Can't I take him home and keep him?"

"But, Grace, you have three kittens already; and I really think those quite enough for one little girl to care for," answered her mother. "Still, the kitten is evidently a pet, and must not be left here to suffer. So we will take him down to the house and feed him and tomorrow look for the owner."

The child acquiesced silently; but a wistful look in her round, rosy face, as she tenderely lifted the little burden in her arms, said as plainly as words could have done, "Oh, how I hope we can't find the owner!"

Little did mother or child think, as the tiny, trembling wayfarer was borne carefully down the mountain side to the old farm-house, fed on warm milk, and tucked away in a snug corner to recover from his fright, that before six months had passed away he would have repaid them a thousand-fold for all their kindness and care.

But, before going farther, perhaps my young readers will be interested to know that the incidents of the story which I am about to relate really happened more than half a century ago in a remote section of our own dear New England.

Mr. Allen, Gracie's father, was a wealthy farmer and lumber-dealer, owning tracts of timbered country miles in extent along our northern frontier. His home, a spacious and substantial farm-house, was situated in a sheltered, isolated spot on the side of a mountain. The nearest village, although in full view, was more than a mile away; but, notwithstanding its loneliness, the location, owing to its sunny exposure and extensive prospect, was one of the grandest and loveliest imaginable. Have you ever stood on a mountain top and gazed down over rocky ravine and gurgling streamlet and stunted shrubbery upon the ample and inspiring picture at your feet?—the winding sparkling rivers, the scattered villages, the cosy, vine-hidden farm-houses, each encircled with its wealth of luxuriant orchard foliage, and radiant fields bright with the promise of future plenty, while in the dim distance a line of hazy blue marked the seemingly harmonious union of ever-restless ocean and ever-restful sky? If so, you have an idea of the beauties of Gracie's mountain home.

Well, Gracie did as she wished: she kept the kitten, but not until she had made many fruitless inquiries in the village and at all the adjacent farm-houses. He was an unusually bright and playful kitten, and Gracie readily taught him many tricks,—to call at the door, to answer to his name, and to follow her like a dog. She named him "Beauty," and he became the pet of the household, and inseparable from his youthful mistress.

Some months later Grace received a visit from a young friend living on the opposite side of the mountain. Mrs. Haynes, the child's mother, had years before been left a widow with several small children, and been obliged to depend for advice and even more substantial aid upon the kindness of Mr. Allen and his wife. The older children were now grown up, and the family in comfortable circumstances; but those earlier years had never been forgotten, and a close intimacy existed between the families. The distance between the houses by the road which wound around the base of the mountain was a dozen miles or more. There was a pathway over the summit which lessened the distance more than one-half; but it was a blind, rough, and even dangerous course, winding around sharp curves and jagged, projecting rocks, and never attempted, even by those who knew it best, except in daylight, and never then in the winter season. Alice was a feeble child, and, although the same age as Gracie, much smaller, having been injured by a fall in her babyhood. On this occasion she spent several days with her young friend, becoming warmly attached to Beauty, busying herself for hours caressing his soft, sheeny, snow-white coat, never wearying of watching his saucy tricks, and exclaiming twenty times a day, "O Gracie! if I only had such a dear kitty to while away all the long, dreary winter days my lameness keeps me in the house!"

But the day for her departure came. Her brother Will came for her, bringing with him her pony; and they decided to return by the mountain path, as it was still pleasant, although late in the autumn. At the last minute, and when Alice was already mounted on her stanch Canadian pony, Gracie came rushing out of the house with a covered basket, which she placed in Alice's hands, and darted directly back to the house. Alice at first did not know what it all mean't; but a frightened "mew" from the basket soon enlightened her. "O Mrs. Allen, I couldn't," she protested, "I couldn't take him from Gracie."

But Mrs. Allen, now that matters had gone so far, thought best to insist, and Alice finally rode away with Beauty, but with eyes full of tears for Gracie's loss; and Mrs. Allen entered the house to find her little girl crying bitterly. "Gracie," she said, "you need not have parted with Beauty."

"But, mamma," sobbed the child, "poor Alice is lame, and cannot coast and skate as I do, and I thought Beauty would be such a comfort."

"Don't regret the gift, then," interposed her mother. "Beauty is in good hands, and not so far away but that you can see him often."

Shortly after this sorrowful leave-taking Mr. Allen concluded a bargain by which he sold two parties from a distant city a large tract of woodland in the vicinity of Mrs. Haynes' house, receiving therefor a large sum of money. It was late one raw, cold winter afternoon, and threatened a storm, when the business was finally settled; but Mr. Allen decided to start for home, although urged by Mrs. Haynes to remain over night. One of the younger sons of Mrs. Haynes accompanied him four or five miles on his homeward route. Just after leaving the old gentleman, and at one of the loneliest spots in the desolate mountain road, the lad noticed just ahead two strangers so closely engaged in conversation as to have been unaware of his approach. Strangers were rare in that locality; and the lad was wary, and decided to ascertain, if possible, their business in that dreary place at so late an hour. So, dropping behind the bushes that skirted the roadside, he worked his way cautiously along until within hearing distance, when, to his consternation, he discovered that they were burglars planning the robbery of Mr. Allen's house that very night.

"Confound the luck!" the younger was saying. "If we'd known of it a few hours sooner, we might have overhauled old money-bags on the way. He can't have much the start of us."

"Just as well as 'tis," answered the other. "He's sort of king in this locality; owns all the land hereabout, and, if he hadn't turned up at just such a time tonight, the village would have turned out to a man and been on our track long before we'd have had time to have gained cover. As it is, we shall have till morning."

"Shall you"—began the first.

"Yes, if there's any alarm," doggedly interrupted the other, glancing suspiciously along the road, as he did so, as if a vague presentiment of impending failure in his projected villainy flashed suddenly over him. "But ther'll be no need; the house is a mile from any other, and all the family away but the old fellow and his wife and a servant who sleeps in the attic and won't know a breath till morning. There is a shed window that will give us easy entrance; but come on! It's dark enough now for anything, and stormy enough, too, for that matter. We must be well clear of here with our booty by midnight."

The rain was now pouring in torrents, but the terrified boy did not dare to move till their voices died away in the distance. Then, springing to his feet, he sped like a dart toward home, bursting in upon the family completely breathless.

"Mother," he said, as soon as he could speak, "what time is it?"

"Eight o'clock; but what's the matter, Henry?"

"Two men are going to rob Mr. Allen's before midnight, and kill the folks if they can't get the money any other way," cried the boy.

In a few words Mrs. Haynes learned the particulars.

"Run, Will," she said, turning to an older lad, "and collect the neighbors as quickly as possible."

All the men in the vicinity responded at once. It was an anxious and excited crowd, for the old gentleman had been a friend in direst need to many another one of their number than Mrs. Haynes and her family. Not a moment was lost in inaction. While the men sought and harnessed the most available horses and provided lanterns, every possible means of averting the disaster was thoroughly discussed, but to no purpose. Every one was obliged to admit the utter impossibility, in the binding storm and intense darkness, of reaching Mr. Allen's till long after midnight. Their only course was to push on as quickly as possible in hopes that the villains might also be delayed by the same means. As the party was leaving the house, Mrs. Haynes, still unwilling to abandon all hope of seasonable relief to the doomed family, called to an Indian boy who chanced to be in the crowd.

"Jocky," she said, "its hardly five miles over the mountain, and you know every step of the way. I'll give you fifty dollars if you'll reach Mr. Allen's by 10 o'clock."

But the boy only shook his head and turned away. He knew well that any one who ventured on the mountain that night did so at the peril of his life.

Mrs. Haynes turned sadly away from the doorway, her lips as she did so framing the words, "Can't anything get over that mountain tonight?"

"Beauty, mamma! Can't beauty go?" cried Alice limping to her mother's side, her face aglow with childish enthusiasm. "He can see in the dark. You know we came home that way, and have had to keep him in the house ever since for fear he would find his way back."

Mrs. Haynes, without a word, moved to a desk in the room, on which lay pencil and paper. There was a hope, slight to be sure, but still a hope, in the child's suggestion. Hastily penning a note, she fastened it securely to a strong cord around the kitten's neck, and, for the first time since his return with Alice from her memorable visit, opened the door upon him. With one bound he was lost in the surrounding darkness.

Mr. Allen, well-nigh stranded by the violence of the storm, did not reach home until so late that his wife had become alarmed and sent for one of the farm hands with a view of instituting a search; but at this junction the welcome sound of his wheels was heard.

"Martin," he said, as soaking wet and benumbed with the cold he slowly alighted from the carriage, "don't attempt to go home tonight," to which the man assented.

Hardly had they finished their supper, Gracie meanwhile plying her father with questions innumberable about Alice and Beauty, when a cat's feeble cry was heard outside.

"Mamma, mamma," cried Gracie, springing to her feet, "that is Beauty's call. I should know it anywhere." And hurrying to the door she opened it to admit Beauty, to be sure, but cold, wet and shivering, his snow-white paws scratched and bleeding.

"What can it mean?" she said, lifting him fondly in her arms. "He must have followed father home; but see! there is a paper tied to his ribbon."

Mrs. Allen quickly detached the paper and read: "Two men intend to rob your house before midnight; they will enter by the shed window. A party is on its way to your assistance, but I fear will be too late. God grant that Beauty may save you."

Not a minute was lost. The man was despatched to the village for aid, and the family turned their attention to the doors and windows.

Assistance having arrived, the lights were extinguished and the shed window put in a condition to be readily opened from the outside, the men grouping themselves about it.

But it was not until after more than an hour of tedious waiting that the window was carefully raised and the party inside heard muttered in an undertone the words: "Just as I thought! Hundreds of dollars in the house, every one abed and asleep, and this window unfastened."

Both jumped in, a dozen men closed around them and they were soon on the way to a place of security. All this while no one had paid the least attention to Gracie and Beauty. Through the long, dark, terrible time the child had sat, mute and motionless as a statute, in a corner of the room, with the dear little bruised and bleeding bunch cuddled closely to her bosom. Just as the family were settling into quiet, a second tumult was heard; the party from around the mountain had arrived. Poor, excited Gracie sprang to her feet in alarm; but seeing Alice's brother Will gazing at her from the open doorway she tottered toward him, and still clinging to Beauty, sank at his feet, sobbing as she fell, "O Will, Beauty has saved us!"

Do I Look Like a Lady?

About thirty years ago a young girl in a western city was given charge of a Sunday school class of rough boys, usually known as "river rats," who had never been in any school house before. When she entered the room she found them lounging on the desks and benches, wearing their hats, puffing vile cigars, a defiant leer on every face. They greeted her with a loud laugh, and one of them exclaimed:

"Well, sis, you going to teach us?"

She stood silent until the laugh was over, and then said, quietly:

"Do I look like a lady?"

An astonished stare was the only reply which they gave.

"Because," she continued gently, "gentlemen, when a lady enters the room, take off their hats and throw away their cigars."

The lowest American secretly believes himself to be a gentleman, and in a moment every hat was off and the lads were ranged in orderly attention.

So remarkable was the success of this girl in managing and influencing men of the roughest sort that she made it the work of her life, says the Youth's Companion. She established clean and respectable boarding-houses for sailors and boatmen, and reading and coffee-rooms for laborers, and founded an Order of Honor, the members of which strove to live sober Christian lives themselves and to help their fellows to do the same.

To be a Good Neighbor.

To be a really good neighbor demands the possession of many excellent qualities—tact, temper, discernment and consideration for other people's feelings; and, if we possess it all, or some of these qualities, innumerable and never ending are the benefits we may confer on each other, and a great deal of pleasure will be the result. But because we are neighbors we need not necessarily be close friends. We may be friendly enough to enjoy the pleasure of doing them little kindnesses and receiving the same in return.

Being kindly disposed to all by no means implies that our house is to be open from morning till night to visitors. The typically good-natured person, who is at every one's beck and call, is likely to be greatly imposed upon and to please no one really; one must be able to say "No," and to decline being made use of by every one.—New York Ledger.

A Great Sponge.

There is on exhibition in New York an enormous sheep's wool sponge, which is said to be the largest one ever obtained. It measures ten feet in circumference and is two feet thick, being quite solid throughout. "It was fished up near the Bahama Islands by the crew of a vessel engaged in that trade, and judging by the stories of the fishermen, they had a tough time in getting their prize aboard. Being in a small dingey, when the hooks fastened themselves in the sponge, the men nearly upset their boat in the effort to haul the sponge to the surface. When it was finally secured, the iron prong of the hook had become straightened out under the resistance. When thoroughly soaked this monster sponge is said to hold ten pailfuls of water."

Curves to be Made Straight.

Some day railroads will have in them no dangerous and deadly curves. Over half the disastrous collisions and a large percentage of run-offs are caused by curves. Of course it will sometimes be found difficult to straighten out a curve and keep a legitimate grade; but if the laws required all railroads to go straight in all cuts and other dangerous places some plan would be devised by which this could be done.—Dallas (Tex.) News.

An Unblemished Name.

A young man does not always find it easy to get on in the world without education or family influence or personal friends or property or health; but he will find, in the long run, that it is far easier for him to make his way among men without any or all of these advantages than to make substantial progress in the world without the reputation of a good character, even though he has all other possessions. Character stands for something everywhere, in spite of its frequent slightings. Men who are themselves lacking a good character appreciate and value it in others. A band of robbers would want an honest treasurer. The young man whose word cannot be believed, whose honesty is not above suspicion, and whose personal life is not what it ought to be, is not the young man that the business world has open places for. He may have health and wealth and family position, and a host of friends, but if he is without character he is at a disadvantage in every position in life. When a young man who has lost a good name makes an honest effort to recover it, he finds that his way upward is a hard one—a great deal harder, in spite of all other helps, than it would have been had he made a right start without these helps. Friends are comparatively powerless in their efforts to win confidence for one who has proved himself unworthy of it on former occasions. Then it is that the young man is likely to realize as never before that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches" even of a worldly investment. Because it is so hard to get on without a good name, or to regain it when once surrendered, every young man who has that possession ought to count it above price and to have a care lest he lose it.—Canada Presbyterian.

Big Factories on the Neponset.

The big chocolate factories of Walter Baker & Co., (Hon. Henry L. Pierce), are already the largest in this country, if not in the world. The firm, to increase their facilities, have in the hands of Winslow & Wetherell, architects, plans for two large additional factories on either side of the Neponset river at Milton and Dorchester. They are to be constructed of brick in a hard red, six stories high, to be ornamented with the same material in an effective way. They will be connected by a stone bridge of a single span across the stream, imposingly massive, much after the design of the famous bridge at Lucerne. The Italian Rennaissance will prevail throughout, and the several structures, in addition to those already in use, will prove an ornament to the delightful neighborhood. The buildings will both be completed next spring.—Norfolk County Gazette.

Josiah Quincy's Grandfather.

In Boston they are telling this story about young Josiah Quincy, while a member of the Democratic Legislative "Steering Committee." He had left the State House for the City Hall, and was passing along a corridor of the latter edifice, when two city laborers observed him. "Who's that, Pat?" inquired one of them. "That? Why, that's Josiah Quincy." "And who's Josiah Quincy?" Mike, I never saw the likes o' you. Did ye never hear o' young Josiah Quincy? Why, he's—he's the grandson o' the statue out in the yard there."

A Big Fruit Farm.

The largest fruit farm in the United States nestles among the foothills of the Ozark Mountains, in Howell County, Missouri. It contains 2,600 acres of land, on which is a station, a store, a post-office and express office. Between 30,000 and 40,000 peach trees will be in bearing this year and from 5,000 to 10,000 apple trees. There are 40 acres in berries, 300 acres in apples, 300 in peaches and 20 acres in pears and cherries. From 50 to 100 acres are planted every spring.

Exports of Rum.

A ship laden with $60,000 of New England rum left Boston last week for the usual destination for such cargoes—the dark continent. From July 1, 1890, to the corresponding date in 1891 the exports of this sort from Boston to ports in Africa were 1,018,591 gallons, valued at $1,223,889. During the past year this trade has almost doubled in quantity and value. The number of gallons exported in the twelve months ending July 1, 1890, was 548,356 as against 1,018,591 the year just ended, and the value was only $656,216 as against $1,223,889 in the year just past.

Plantation of Roses.

Twelve acres of choice roses in full bloom is something few have ever seen, but at the plantation owned by Ellwanger & Barry, accorded to be the largest in America, all may witness this sight today. Many go to Rochester, N. Y., for the single purpose of visiting this place and seeing this grand sight. Among the roses in bloom are all colors and tints and the effect is charming. The roses are of the perpetual variety and was glorious all through July. This firm makes a specialty of roses, and has in addition to the hardy varieties many specially adapted for greenhouse culture.

Taxation in New York.

The taxation laws in New York are such that the tax rate for general purposes is very low indeed, in fact, the lowest for forty-six years. This has been brought about largely by laws providing for the raising of money for state expenditures by special taxes. The corporation tax law brings to the state $1,200,000 annually. The law taxing corporations for the privilege of organizing brings to the state $200,000 while the law for taxation of inheritances nets the state about $1,200,000.

The Oldest Epitaph.

The oldest epitaph in English, which is found in a churchyard in Oxfordshire, and dates from the year 1370, to modern readers would be unintelligible, not only from its antique typography, but from its obsolete language, the first two lines of which rnn as follows, and may be taken as a sample of the whole; "Man com & se how schal alle dede be; wen you comes bad & bare; noth hav ven we away fare; all ye werines yt ye for care." The modern reading would be: "Man, come and see how shall all dead be, when you come poor and bare: nothing have, when we away fare; All is weariness that we for care."—Cornhill Magazine.

Returned.

George W. and Miss Annie L. Prescott returned from a lengthy trip of some six thousand miles on Friday morning, somewhat tired, although in good health and spirits. They have visited the cities of Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Waukesha, Madison, St. Paul, Minneapolis and the wonderful Yellowstone Park.

In future numbers of this publication the readers may expect to hear in some measure what they have seen and enjoyed.

On Thursday they were in Buffalo, and had a pleasant ride about that city through the courtesy of Mr. Charles H. Rodgers, a native of Quincy, and a brother of Mrs. Henry T. Rodgers of this city. They were surprised to find so many elegant residences with beautiful lawns of an acre or more in the heart of the city. Many of the streets were very straight and attractive, with two rows of beautiful trees between the curbstone and the sidewalk. The city abounds in beautiful shade trees, and is a bustling growing place, which will soon surpass Boston in population.

Strike at Drake's.

John E. Drake's large shoe manufactory was closed on Tuesday, not for an excursion or holiday, but because of a labor trouble in the treers' department.

Mr. Paine the foreman told the reporter that he did not know the circumstances of the case, only that William Welch in the treers department was requested Tuesday morning to teach a boy to crease vamps, but refused, and was given his choice to do as requested or leave. He took the latter course, the other men in the department and some eight or ten, followed him.

Not wishing to accumulate work in other departments Mr. Drake gave orders to close the manufactory at noon, which was accordingly done, and many took an enforced holiday.

Mr. Drake on being interviewed by our reporter said he had nine treers at work for him six were piece hands and three were day men receiving $2.50 per day. Welch was one of the day men. Creasing the shoes was no part of the treers' work. I requested Welch to show the boy and he refused, and was given his choice to do so or leave my employ and he chose the latter course. The other men in the department followed him.

Mr. Drake further said he should keep his shop closed until he found out whether a man he hired by the day is supposed to do as he wants him to or not, if it takes a year. I would not ask him to do anything that would interfere with their order. This is outside of their work.

These day men have been at work for me thirteen years and never had any trouble with them before. We have no orders to deliver before October, and I was simply piling up goods to keep these men at work, and this could not have happened at any better time.

Wednesday evening Mr. John E. Drake received the following letter which terminated the strike at his manufactory which began on Tuesday:

OFFICE OF GENERAL SECRETARY, BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' INTERNATIONAL UNION.
BOSTON, July 29, 1891.

JOHN E. DRAKE, ESQ.,

DEAR SIR: The matter of the difficulty in your factory has been investigated and the conclusion reached that the strike of the men was wrong and an injustice to you. We cheerfully make this acknowledgement and will take means to prevent a repetition of the same in the future.

We are convinced that this whole matter arises from a mistaken idea of the laws of our organization and we sincerely hope that no discredit will attach to any of those engaged in the matter.

The people have been instructed to return to work tomorrow (Thursday) morning.

Respectfully yours,
H. J. SKEFFINGTON, G. S.

There is no dodging the issue in the above letter. It is a bitter pill for the strikers, who unwillingly acquiesce to the decision of their supreme officers.

Most of the treers have returned to work, but not Welch who caused the trouble and it is doubtful if he will although he may if he wishes within a limited time.

The firm took the opportunity to repair some machinery, and consequently the manufactory will not be running full blast this week.

Welch now says that he did not refuse to show the boy, that he did show him, but that he refused to stand over him all day.

The Centennial.

Gloucester has one very good idea in connection with its 250th anniversary celebration next year, and one which Quincy should adopt. A committee on invitation has been appointed and it has issued the following invitation to absent sons and daughters of old Cape Ann:

The Committee on Invitations, desirous of reaching all the absent Sons and Daughters of old Cape Ann, request from their friends the addresses of all such who reside away from the city, in order that none may be omitted in sending out the invitations.

Friends knowing the residence with post office addresses of any person born on the Cape (which includes the town of Rockport), now absent, are earnestly requested to send them at their earliest convenience to Edward Dolliver, Secretary Committee on Invitations, City Hall, Gloucester, Mass.

The Times says: "The several committees on celebration in 1892, appear to be getting to work with commendable zeal, which if followed up must result in something handsome at the proper time. J. F. Dyer Camp, 24, will hold a fair in October at City Hall, to raise money to defray expenses of the Mass. Div., which will be invited to take part in the parade."

The above straws show that Gloucester is active in the matter of her celebration, which should brace up Quincy. We should have something grand next year.

Excursion to Plymouth.

On Monday next, August 3d, the Old Colony Railroad will run an excursion by special train from Harrison Square, and stations to Scituate, including Quincy, Braintree, the Weymouths, Hingham and Cohasset, at reduced rates to Plymouth and return.

A day's outing at this historic, as well as beautiful old town, cannot fail to amply repay the trouble and expense of the journey, and the low rates afforded on this occasion certainly bring the excursion within reach of all.

OBITUARY. Mrs. John F. Parrot, whose death is chronicled in this isssue of the PATRIOT, was a very estimable lady and a large circle of friends mourn her departure. She was faithful in all her duties of life, and in her chosen vocation as nurse ministered to the wants of the sick and dying with ever watchful care and gentleness, winning the love and respect of all who claimed her acquaintance. In the associations where she was a member she was very active, and ever ready to do her duty and she will be greatly missed.

Thirteen Quincy deaths are reported in this issue, and all since Sunday morning. In the twenty-five July days previous to Sunday there were sixteen, making the July average nearly one a day.

Copies of the Journal of the American Medical Association of May 23 and 30 have been received, each containing thoughtful papers by J. W. Small, M. D., formerly of this city. The one on "The Treatment of the First Stages of Acute Lobar Pneumonia," and the other "The Therapeutic Action of Tonica Water."

People who accompany friends to Quincy depot, Sunday evenings, should be very careful to cross the tracks in time and not stand on the very edge of the platform when the train is coming in. Last Sunday several came near being caught, and had not one man in particular been pulled up on the platform by his friends he would have undoubtedly met a horrible death. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The drama given by Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R. of this city not having been a success, the Post will not attend the encampment at Detroit in a body. A few will however go with other Posts which leave today. Over 500 Massachusetts men will go including posts from Brockton, Dorchester, Rockland, Whitman, and some thirty others Posts.

The boot and shoe shop of John E. Drake was entered by burglars Sunday morning, and five pair of boots to the value of $12 are missing. The boots were all finished and ready to be packed up, but how the burglars obtained an entrance is a mystery as the shop officials state that all the doors and windows were fastened on Saturday evening and were found undisturbed Monday morning.

He was removed to the office of Dr. Dion where it was found that the rock had cut through all the muscles and vessels of the arm clean to the bone. The man was very weak from the loss of blood and it was with difficulty that the flow of blood was stopped and the wound dressed.

Base Ball.

Thursday was the grocery clerks day off from work and it was also their off day at ball.

A ball game was played in the morning on the Hall place grounds, the purse being $50. The clerks worked hard for the purse but their opponants the stone cutters were too much for them. The boys took it kindly however and at the finish cheers were exchanged and the foundation of a game for Labor day begun.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Mrs. George W. Penniman of Fall River is visiting in town.

George F. Curtis is seriously ill.

Miss Saran Barry, of Boston, and Miss Margaret Preston, of Braintree, are the guests of Miss Annie Cahill of South Quincy.

Stephen Pierce, clerk at Willard's drug store, who had a day off with the clerks Thursday over exerted himself in the sport and turned his ankle inside out, which will lay him off for a few days.

Miss M. E. Adams and Miss Mattie Kincaide left for Charlottetown, P. E. I., to spend a month's vacation.

Mr. John Mundy, R. Cole, Wm. Reardon and John Foley have returned from their cottage at Nantucket after two weeks' vacation.

The concert by the City band at South Quincy, Saturday evening, was listened to by a large and appreciative audience.

Mrs. George Cahill of Water street and Miss Mary Cahill of Franklin street, spent Thursday and Friday of last week with friends in Weymouth.

The local branch of the I. N. L. are arranging for their annual excursion.

Peter M. Clark sailed for Glascow, Scotland, today, on the "Servia" from New York.

George Ridgel of South Quincy, sailed Wednesday for Edinburgh, Scotland, on the Teutonic from New York.

Richard O'Brine, Thomas D. Doyle, Edmund McIntosh and J. L. Fergu are spending their vacation at Bluff Point, N. J.

A child belonging to Mr. John Brennan, was bitten severely Monday, by a dog belonging to a Mr. Hayes, on Quincy avenue.

"A Mechanic," who resides in South Quincy, writes to the editor, requesting that the PATRIOT espouse the cause of mechanics who live in that section of the city and work in Boston, in their efforts to secure lower fares on the Old Colony railroad for workingmen. He suggests that a meeting be called, as has been done in West Quincy and Braintree, and a committee appointed to see the management. The PATRIOT has already advocated just this thing in all sections of the city, since the Old Colony management has said that workingmen could have lower fares for the asking. The new rates for workingmen on special trains were to go into effect at West Quincy, August 1, and probably will, although we cannot state it for a fact. West Quincy workingmen will thereby save $14 per year. It would seem as if no further argument was necessary.

Narrow Escape.

Mr. Thomas Morrisey, the popular young clerk at Pratt & Curtis', who is rusticating at Newport, R. I., for the summer months, had a very narrow escape from drowning Sunday, while out in his yacht the "Toot." His boat was capsized quite a distance from the shore, but he was quickly rescued by Captain Ed. Demouth of the yacht "Camden."

QUINCY POINT.

The Owl Juniors went to North Weymouth Saturday morning and defeated the Stars of that village by a score of 8 to 7.

Miss Sarah A. Malone leaves on Saturday next for Winthrop beach where she will spend her vacation.

In consequence of the Hingham Stars having failed to show up on Saturday the Victors of Quincy Point played the Bigelows and were defeated by a score of 21 to 11. The feature of the game was the pitching of Harkins of the Bigelows, he striking out seventeen men.

An accident to the stone crusher Monday afternoon caused a suspension of the work on Washington street Tuesday.

George H. Brown & Co., real estate agents, have sold the Eldridge estate on North street, Quincy Point, to William Farquharson.

Mrs. Wm. H. Kowe and daughters of Gloucester are visiting her brother, Mr. B. F. Ingersoll of Washington street, Quincy Point.

Mr. R. P. Blackmur left Thursday for North Conway, N. H.

Mrs. L. H. Holbrook and Mrs. Edward F. Taylor of Kansas City, Kansas, are visiting Mrs. M. S. Kittredge.

Mr. William Dunn who resides on Washington street, sprained his thumb while playing ball at Quincy Point, Monday evening.

The family of the late Lawyer Eldridge move this week from the homestead at Quincy Neck, to the brick block on Chestnut street.

A yacht containing a lady and gentleman was seen to capsize off Fort Point, North Weymouth, on Tuesday. Both were rescued by a man in a row-boat.

Rev. and Mrs. George Hastings are visiting at Quincy Point. Mr. Hastings was a former pastor at the Corner church.

Commissioner Ewell has succeeded in locating Benedict hall. It is the old Baptist chapel on South street. Were not the Council lame in voting as they did, only one member knowing its location? Does it not also entail an unnecessary expense?

Mrs. Sarah B. Kingman, an estimable lady, a former resident of Quincy Point, died on Monday at her son's residence in Framingham of apoplexy. She enjoyed the esteem and respect of a large circle of friends and took great pleasure in the many good deeds which graced her life.

Shipping.

Arrived, July 24th, Schooner Ophir, Capt. C. H. Dodge from Gardner, Maine, with 108,000 feet lumber for B. Johnson.

July 26th, Schooner Julia Ann, Capt. Billings from Bangor, Maine, with 85,000 feet lumber for B. Johnson.

Bathing Accident.

People who go in bathing should be very careful unless they are exceptionally good swimmers, not to go beyond their depth as will be shown by the following incident which occurred at Quincy Point, on Wednesday. Three boys that were in bathing got into a skiff that was anchored on the shore, and proceeded to take a sail, that is, as far as the rope would allow. One of the boys thinking that the boat had parted its moorings and was drifting away, made a jump towards the shore, but he soon found that he was in very deep water. Although a pretty fair swimmer, he was evidently frightened for he immediately sank. His companions thinking that he was fooling paid no attention to him, but when they saw him sink for the second time in an exhausted condition, they went to his assistance and succeeded in rescuing him as he was going down for the third time. As we have said before, "a word to the wise is sufficient.

Damage by Dogs.

The County Treasurer has paid the following amounts for damages by dogs and fees for appraisers in dog damage cases for the year ending July 1, 1891. The total amount of the sums paid out to parties in Avon was $14.95; Braintree, $38.15; Brookline, $21.90; Cohasset, $234.70; Dedham, $79,45; Dover, $22.10; Foxboro, $16.90; Franklin, $5; Hyde Park, $32.80; Milton, $140.10; Medway, $94.40; Needham, $101.35; Norfolk, $121.90; Norwood, $17.70; Quincy, $180.70; Randolph, $80.10; Sharon, $24.30; Stoughton, $92.70; Wellesley, $24; Weymouth, $25.10, and Wrentham, $131.20. During the above mentioned period the dogs of Bellingham, Canton, Holbrook, Medfield, Millis and Walpole were good dogs and wrought no damage.

—The tax rate in Peabody this year is $15,60. The assessors report a valuation of $7.441,400, and 2865 polls.

ATLANTIC.

P. P. Coombs of Atlantic has gone to join his family who are in Maine.

Mrs. Lousia W. Rogers of Boston has been spending a few days in Atlantic with Mr. C. L. Coe.

J. E. Drew has built himself a handsome thirteen foot row boat which he will launch at Atlantic this week.

All who take the 8.20 train to Boston at Atlantic, are forced to stand, and it is getting rather monotonous.

Two more houses have been started on Botolph street, and a very nice one is to go up at once on Clive street, on lot adjoining Mr. C. F. Safford's.

A number of the patrons of the Old Colony from Atlantic met at the depot on Wednesday evening to discuss the subject of cheaper fares. A committee was finally appointed to draw up a petition which will be circulated and forwarded to the management.

Misses Annie Briggs, Amy Alden, Annie Hall, Marcia Wilder, and Sadie Melzard of Atlantic, Misses Alice Pratt of Cohasset, Edith Emery of Boston, Minnie Dewsnap of Wollaston, and Katie Locket of Newton spent a delightful day this week at the Buttercup cottage through the kindness of Mr. Frank Hatch.

Miss May Hill is visiting her brother Geo. W. Hill, Walker street.

Miss Grace D. Parker goes to Brooklyn, N. Y., next week to visit her sister.

Charles Hammond goes next week to Winter Harbor, Maine, to stay the balance of the summer.

Rednor Coombs has returned from a trip to Islesboro, Maine.

Mrs. Austin, Atlantic avenue, is visiting friends in Newton Falls.

Memorial church will be closed the first three weeks of August during the absence of the pastor.

Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Kendall start next week on their annual month's hunting and fishing outing in the Maine and Canada woods. The doctor is a member of the Megantic Club, which controls the exclusive hunting and fishing privileges of over 250 square miles of the best sporting country in America. The president of the Socal Club, who is now on his annual fishing trip, will not "be in it" with the vice-president when it comes to telling fish stories next winter.

The Globe says: "Edwin S. Small has just sold an estate at Atlantic station, North Quincy, to be laid out in lots for residences. The location, at the highest point of land and overlooking the open harbor, is very fine for those who enjoy sea views all the year."

A new house is being erected on Clive street for Mr. Adams.

Ellis Smith of Neponset, is building a new house on Botolph street.

Mrs.B. F. Thomas and daughter, Flossie, go to Maine this week on a visit.

The house of Herbert Coombs on Water street, Atlantic, was sold at auction Monday for $3150.

Miss Bedeaw, a teacher in the public schools at Boston Highlands, is boarding for the summer at Mrs. Wilson's Squantum street.

Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Yeoman left Tuesday for Fortune Rocks, Maine, where they will spend the most of their vacation. They will visit Montreal before returning home.

Grocers' Day.

The grocers had to take it right and left Thursday on their return from Scituate. For some time they were kept in the dark and did not know just what their assailants were driving at. They could not deny that they had played ball, that it was the crowning feature of the day, but how the stay-at-homes became so well posted, they did not understand until they were shown the DAILY LEDGER.

The telephone made a few mistakes in transmitting the score published then, and it is revised below:

Centers.	R.	South Quincys.	R.
Merrill,	3	Callahan,	3

Brewer,	1	Emonds,	0
Nash,	1	Prout,	0
Total,	19	Total,	11

Umpire,—Clark.

Prout was awarded first prize for best base running and Nash should have had the second prize.

Callahan was a "phenom," and as one remarked, a whole team in himself.

Merrill's out at third after his three bagger, made the boys smile.

Rogers can't get his hat on this morning.

Who saw the snake?

Bussell photographed the crowd.

Tom Pearce's sprained ankle was the most serious accident.

Lamb caught the first fish; it was a dead one.

All want to go again.

The defeated nine have challenged the winners to play on the Greenleaf street grounds some Wednesday afternoon in August.

There is some talk of making it a general holiday for all traders next year, but not unless it is called "Grocers' Day."

Other traders report it a very quiet day.

One lady said if the bells had rung she would have gone to church.

But the clerks have been overlooked.

What were they about?

They did not reach the Salem Willows we are told.

None got beyond the Point of Pines.

Their defeat in the morning by the stone cutters was a crusher.

The Doughnut Did It.

An amusing incident occurred in the Square Thursday which caused much laughter. The grocers were all seated on their tally-ho, Mr. John Nash having in charge a large horn upon which he was trying to play; just then George W. Taylor drove by when Mr. Nash pointed the horn at him and was about to blow when George with a quick aim threw a doughnut which entered the big end of the horn where it became tightly wedged, putting a stop for a few moments to the music. (?) The joke of it was Mr. Nash was not aware that the doughnut had become lodged in his horn and was trying his best to blow it, but without success.

The Bryant & Stratton Commercial School of Boston, which our readers will notice advertised in this week's issue, will re-open Tuesday, Sept. 1. This school needs no recommendation from us, as it present standing and reputation, gained during the last 29 years, places it at the head of all schools of a similar character. It can be patronized with full confidence that nothing that is possible to be done for its pupils will be left undone. po

Lynn Figures.

The Lynn assessors report the valuation of real estate to be $32,393,272; of personal estate, $44,764,672; number of polls, 4394. Total amount to be raised, $688,790. The rate of taxation, $14.60 on $1000.

A CARD. I wish most sincerely to thank the friends, neighbors, members of the order to which she belonged, and especially Dr. Hunting for the kindness and sympathy extended to Mrs. Catherine Parrott during her late illness.

MRS. L. A. PARROTT.

WOLLASTON.

Miss Winnifred F. Howard is at Winthrop.

Miss Sadie D. Badger formerly of Wollaston is making a short visit in this place.

The cottages at Rufe's Hummock, Wollaston beach, are in great demand this season.

"In brightest summer land," the new book issued by the Old Colony railroad, is from the pen of Mr. E. L. Robbins of Wollaston.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Gould and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seeley of Wollaston are spending a pleasant vacation at Ocean Bluff.

The members of Hose 2, Wollaston, extinguished a slight fire at 8 o'clock, Monday evening, in a house owned by G. Harvey Field, and occupied by Mrs. A. C. McAlery. Loss, $8.

Mrs. W. H. Pierce, Miss Mabel Pierce, Miss Mollie Ray and Richard Polson are at Castle Wollaston, South Wolfboro. N. H the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barker of North Cambridge, and Mrs. Henry Litchfield of Wollaston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Gould at their cottage at Ocean Bluff this week.

C. B. Huston is building a huge stack for Mellen Bray & Co., at Wollaston. The stack is seventeen feet in diameter at the base with a six foot core, and will be one hundred feet high of which nearly fifty feet is already completed.

The Ledger Man has Heard

That Wollaston is the coming ward.

That the forthcoming assessors report will show a large increase in real estate valuation.

That there are still a few good building lots on the market.

That Wollaston has a larger proportion of public spirited citizens in proportion to the population than any other ward in the city.

That they make things hum.

That one of them has twelve houses under construction.

That he has had Brook street improved at considerable expense.

That he has paid for it out of his own pocket.

That if the other wards had men of the Corthell type, the city's valuation and general appearance would increase amazingly in a few years.

That he has done more to improve Wollaston the last two or three years than any other of her public spirited citizens.

That if he has in contemplation a public improvement or extensive building operation, that the expense never stands in the way.

That Wollaston Park will also show a large increase in valuation.

The Story is Denied.

A reporter interviewed President Choate and General Manager Kendrick of the Old Colony railroad in relation to the report that President Choate had tendered his resignation and that Mr. Kendrick is to succeed him.

President Choate said it was sufficient answer for him to say that the first he ever heard of it was when he saw it in the newspapers.

Mr. Kendrick declared there was not the slightest foundation for the story.—Brockton Enterprise.

MILTON.

James Thomas of East Milton is spending his vacation in Maine.

Two men received severe internal injuries by the giving away of a staging at the Walter Baker Chocolate Co., at Milton Lower Mills, Thursday. Coleman Sullivan of 2 Baxter place, South Boston, and Peter McShean of Milton Lower Mills, were the names of the men injured.

Mr. Daniel Leary, an old resident of East Milton, is dangerously ill.

Messrs. Haslip, Burns and Mellaney are erecting houses in East Milton.

The stores in East Milton were closed Thursday, the proprietors having joined with the Quincy grocers in their annual excursion.

Miss Nellie Russell, of Newton Upper Falls, was the guest last Sunday of Misses Mary and Emma Sweeney of Bryant avenue.

Letters received from the family of Selectman Simpson from Greenfield, N. H., do not give much encouragement to the recovery of his son,who was injured by being thrown from a carriage.

The piggery, the erection of which Mr. John G. Drake had commenced, has been abandoned, as it aroused the wrath of the Miltonians, who even sought to secure an injunction.

Rev. Daniel Steele, D. D.,of Dorchester, will conduct the gospel meeting at Washington hall, East Milton, Sunday, at 3.30 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

Hospital Contributions.

The Ward Three committee of the Ladies' Hospital Aid Society which have been at work among the granite firms, wish to acknowledge the receipt of the following sums from the firms and their employes:

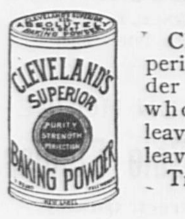
Luncheon Muffins.

BY MARIA PARLOA.

For one dozen muffins use one pint of flour, a generous half pint of milk, two teaspoonfuls of Cleveland's Baking Powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter and two eggs. Mix the dry ingredients together and rub through a sieve. Melt the butter. Beat the eggs till light and add the milk to them. Add this mixture to the dry ingredients; then stir in the melted butter. Beat the batter vigorously for a few seconds and then put in buttered muffin pans and bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.



Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is perfectly wholesome. It leavens most and leavens best. Try a can.

CITY COUNCIL.

All the members of the City Council were present at the adjourned meeting on Monday evening, and spent over two hours in the discussion of city affairs, and finally adjourned for six weeks, or until the first Monday in September. No communications were received from the Mayor, and the first business was the reception of petitions.

To Run Guy.

Prout Bros. petitioned to be allowed to run wire guy across Garfield street. An order granting the request was passed to a second reading.

Clive Street.

W. F. Cummings and others petitioned that Clive street in Ward Six be laid out as a city way 40 feet wide. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Tracks on Saville Street.

The Committee on Streets reported the unused tracks on Saville street to be dangerous, and that the Quincy & Boston Railway Company had forfeited its right to keep them there, and the committee reported an order for a hearing for interested parties to show why they should not be removed.

Chairman Jones said the report was drawn up in accordance with a vote of the committee, but the committee had changed its opinion. It desired to change its report in committee but a question was raised whether it could be legally done, and it had been brought into the Council.

Councilman Powers said he had voted to bring it into the Council with the understanding that it should be laid upon the table, and he moved to lay it on the table.

Councilman Holden said this action was taken that the railway company might put its tracks in safe condition satisfactory to the Commissioner of Public Works. Otherwise it could be taken up at any time.

Voted to lay on table.

The Brooks.

The Committee on Finance reported favorable on the order to transfer the appropriation for brooks from the care of the Commissioner of Public Works to the Board of Health. Accepted.

State Aid.

The Committee on State Aid favored an increase of $3 per month to John B. Hunt and the payment of $4 per month to his wife M. Elizabeth Hunt. Accepted.

Snow Account.

The Committee on Finance reported favorable on the order to transfer $65 from the appropriation for Street Lines to that for the Removal of Snow. Accepted.

Found Correct.

The Committee on Finance reported the July 1st statements of the Treasurer and Auditor to be correct. Placed on file.

South Quincy Schoolhouse.

The Finance Committee reported a substitute for the $35,000 order for the new brick schoolhouse, making the amount $31,500, as $3,500 had already been appropriated for the land, the same to be payable in nine notes.

Councilman Gray moved to lay the order on the table, claiming that action on it was illegal in its first stages, the approval of the plans by the School Committee not having been secured before the first reading. He claimed that the first reading of an order was as much a part of the passage as the final reading. The plans further had not been open for inspection.

Councilman Warner opposed laying on the table, believing it only an attempt to postpone and defeat the order. The School Committee had approved the plans and the order had not yet taken its final passage.

Councilman Newcomb was not opposed to new schoolhouse, but thought there might be something in the points raised by Councilman Gray. He wanted no more Willard business.

Councilman Jones said Councilman Gray might be right as to the legal standing. As to the plans, they were a duplicate of the John Hancock building with which the councilmen were familiar.

Councilman Bryant did not think the legal points well taken, claiming that an order was not passed until it took its final reading. Further, the Council could safely pass the order, as the Mayor would submit it to the City Solicitor before affixing his signature. The appropriation should not be delayed.

Councilman Moxon opposed laying on the table on the plea of illegality. If it was to see the plans he desired the fullest latitude.

Mayor Fairbanks said he had submitted the order to the City Solicitor who had given his opinion that it was a legal order.

The motion to lay on the table was lost, the order substituted and by vote of 18 to 4 passed to be ordained, viz:

YEAS—Councilmen Bryant, Drake, Duffield, Fallon, Hammond, Hayward, Jones, Little, Morton, Moxon, Newcomb, Pope, Powers, Pratt, Rinn, Sherman, Warner and Wilde—18.

NAYS—Councilmen Bass, Gray, Holden and Roberts—4.

Looking to Vacation.

Councilman Sherman had Rule 1 suspended requiring the Council to meet twice a month, and then upon his motion it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be to the first Monday in September.

Applying the Betterment Act.

Councilman Moxon offered an order that in the future all streets be laid out under the "betterment act."

The clerk read the sections by request, and upon motion of Councilman Moxon the order was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Houghs Neck Fire Alarm.

The order to transfer $250 from the appropriation for the enforcement of the liquor laws, and use it to establish a fire alarm box at Houghs Neck, came up for engrossment.

Councilman Holden, who is a summer resident at the Neck, opposed the order, believing there was a prospect of telephone service, which would be equally good for giving an alarm.

Chairman Bass of the Committee on Fire Department was not strenuous that a box should be located there, but there should be some means of giving an alarm.

Chief Engineer Ripley said he had an interview today with the Telephone Company, but the company would not extend the service there this season. There should be some way of giving an alarm, and a telephone would be good.

Councilman Fallon enquired if city had a right to run wire on Manet railway poles.

Chief Ripley thought it had but it would be dangerous putting it there. He preferred an independent line,

Councilman Fallon,—Could telephone wire be run on fire alarm poles.

Chief Ripley,—Yes, on rental.

Councilman Fallon then favored the location of the box asked.

Councilman Bryant asked if the addition would not seriously affect the present circuit?

Chief Ripley said the alarm would work so long as the line was whole. It would be six miles more line to take care of, and one break would render the whole circuit useless.

Councilman Bryant opposed the extension as it would jeopardize the whole city.

Councilman Fallon could not see why Quincy could not extend its wires as well as Boston did.

Councilman Pratt said the Engineers had annually recommended a circuit repeater, which was needed. When this was added it would be time to extend the fire alarm to Houghs Neck.

Councilman Sherman opposed robbing the appropriation for the enforcement of the liquor laws for the purpose.

Councilman Bryant moved to lay the order on the table and that the Committee on Fire Department give the matter further consideration, and see if there was not some other method.

Councilman Moxon did not believe in a separate system for Houghs Neck.

Councilman Jones believed there was another method, whereby alarm could be rung by pressing button. Then the location of the Granite engine in that section had been suggested.

Councilman Jones moved to recommit.

Councilman Bryant withdrew his motion.

Councilman Moxon opposed recommitment. If the alarm was not needed in winter, it could easily be cut out. Voted to recommit.

To Ask Proposals.

Upon motion of Councilman Moxon it was voted to advertise for proposals for building the new schoolhouse at South Quincy.

Question of Legality.

Councilman Gray offered a motion that the City Solicitor be requested to render his opinion to the City Council before the next regular meeting upon the following question:

Is it legal for the City Council to take any action upon an order authorizing the erection of a school house, or of any addition thereto, and appropriating money therefor, until plans for the same have been approved by the vote of the School Committee and such approval has been certified in writing to the Council by the chairman of said committee.

Mayor Fairbanks said the question was plainly answered in the negative by the City Charter.

Councilman Bryant thought it a useless order.

Councilman Moxon thought the City Charter was plain on that point.

Councilman Gray pressed his motion.

It was decided lost when first put to vote, but the vote was doubted, and a rising vote showed a tie. President Thompson voted in the affirmative and the motion was adopted.

Vote on Sewer Act.

The order for an election on the sewer act came up for engrossment.

Councilman Sherman had the date changed from Aug. 27 to Sept. 28.

Councilman Duffield had Benedict hall inserted in place of the Engine house in Ward Two for a polling place.

The order was then passed to be ordained under a suspension of the rules.

To Finish the Willard.

The order appropriating $8500 to complete the Willard schoolhouse and grading, was passed to be engrossed.

Councilman Powers moved a suspension of the rules that the order might take its final passage.

Councilman Pratt was opposed if for no other reason than to divide up the loan, so that should not come due next year.

Councilman Bryant favored suspension, believing the whole loan should be paid next year and got out of the way.

Councilman Powers said work must stop on Willard unless appropriation was made, and the school was needed Sept. 1.

Councilman Jones favored a suspension of the rules, and took the opportunity to criticise the unsafe exits in case of fire.

Councilman Gray favored short loans, and Councilman Moxon long loans.

The rule was suspended and Councilman Pratt offered an amendment to pay in four notes. Did not believe in making the tax rate excessive in 1892.

Councilman Bryant and Gray opposed.

Councilman Pratt said the city was down now to pay $20,800 on Willard next year.

Councilman Wilde favored amendment. Was opposed to one year loans.

The amendment prevailed and the order was passed to be ordained, 17 to 5, viz:

YEAS—Councilman Bass, Fallon, Hammond, Hayward, Jones, Little, Morton, Moxon, Newcomb, Pope, Powers, Pratt, Rinn, Roberts, Sherman, Warner and Wilde—17.

NAYS—Councilman Bryant, Drake, Duffield, Gray and Holden—5.

Adjourned at 10 P. M. until Sept 7.

They Say

That the Willard schoolhouse is approaching completion.

That there is no doubt but what it will be ready when the fall term opens.

That half the summer vacation is nearly gone.

That only five or six weeks remain.

That there should be a grand dedication.

That all monuments generally are dedicated.

That the building is called a monument to the first City Council.

That the School Committee come in for some of the—glory.

That when the first appropriation was under discussion we were told a sixteen room building would cost less than two-eights.

That this turns out to have been a misrepresentation.

That the Willard will cost over $100,000.

That the end is not yet.

That it may be considerably more.

That nobody knows.

That there is a prospect of getting a new eight room building of brick at South Quincy, land and all, for $35,000.

That three such buildings could have been built for what the Willard has cost.

That the new Willard is to have a flag.

That Mr. S. F. Willard, the druggist, a descendant of Solomon Willard, has offered to donate one.

That he is public spirited.

Everett's Ambition.

The town of Everett will probably ask for a city charter next year. Its growth has been remarkable, as the following figures will show:—In 1886 the population, according to the assessors, was 6,275. Up to the first of May of the present year the assessors registered 12,466 persons; a gain of nearly double in six years, and placing them beyond the necessary limit required for a city charter. The present valuation of Everett is nearly $9,000,000, an increase of $800,000 over last year, with a tax rate of $14.50 per thousand, and 3,600 polls. The town has nearly completed the sewering of all its principal streets, has electric lights, six school houses, a high school, 1847 scholars, and 41 teachers, with a church for nearly every religious denomination.

Tendered a Reception.

Wm. Davidson and wife who left on Phillip's excursion for San Francisco, Cal., July 7th, arrived there on the 14th, and report a very pleasant journey.

Thursday evening (July 16th) they were tendered a reception at the house of Mrs. Walker, formerly of Quincy. During the evening the couple were presented with an elegant bed lounge, the gift of Mr. Davidson's admiring friends; after which an elaborate supper was served, then dancing was in order until 3 o'clock in the morning.

Funeral of Rev. Eben Muse.

The funeral of Rev. Eben Muse, until a few months ago pastor of the Presbyterian church, was held from the church Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The large edifice was far too small to accommodate the friends of the deceased.

Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body, under command of Senior Vice Commander Franklin Curtis. Francis L. Souther Camp, S. of V., and the Woman's Relief Corps were also in attendance.

Rev. Edward Norton of the Evangelical Congregational church, officiated, and was assisted by Rev. John Ramsay, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rev. George Benedict of the Corner church at Quincy Point, and Deacon Robert Gilchrist of Boston.

A quartette consisting of Miss Gardner, Miss Pfaffmann, Dr. Sherman and Mr. Courtney rendered three hymns selected by the deceased, viz: "China," "Rest," and "Woodland."

The pulpit was draped in mourning, and among the floral offerings were a closed Bible with the word "Finis" on the cover, from Paul Revere Post; a pillow from the Relief Corps; a basket from lady members of the church; and boquets.

The interment was in the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, and the pall bearers: Mr. John Good and Mr. Alexander Hay, from the church members; Mr. John Christie and Mr. Robert Gilchrist of Boston, and Commander John D. Williams and Mr. James F. Merrill, representing Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.

District Court, Quincy.

Jeremiah Doran of Weymouth, for assault on Mrs. Annie Daley, was fined $5.

George Brown was arraigned for being a tramp at Quincy, the case was continued.

William O'Brien of Weymouth for illegal sale of intoxicating liquor was discharged.

Cornelious O'Keef, of Randolph, for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell, was fined $50, from which he appealed.

The continued case of Franklin Porter, of Randolph, for keeping a liquor nuisance came up Saturday, when he plead guilty and paid a fine of $50.

John McCue, of Milton, was arraigned for drunkenness. It appeared by evidence of the Probation Officer that he had been arrested a few weeks ago, when he signed a paper to the effect that he had not been arrested before within a year, when the fact was he had been arrested several times. The court then imposed a sentence of sixty days.

The continued case of Ernest W. Borden, of Braintree, for malicious mischief came up Saturday, when the court again continued the case to August 4.

Thomas Looney of Cohasset, for cruelty to a horse was fined $10.

Henry Mulder of Boston, for riding bicycle on the sidewalk in Quincy, paid a fine of $5.

Thomas F. Hasson of Weymouth, was arraigned for breaking and entering the shop of A. H. & F. H. Cook, and the larceny therefrom of shoes to the value of $6.75. Hasson was then held in $500, for his appearance next Thursday.

The liquors seized from George E. Nash, of Weymouth, were forfeited to the commonwealth.

The liquors seized from Patrick Haley, of Weymouth, were forfeited to the commonwealth.

The liquors seized from T. J. Sullivan, of Weymouth, were forfeited to the commonwealth.

John Sullivan of Quincy, a juvenile, was arraigned for stealing peaches from the orchard of H. H. Faxon, and was continued until next Thursday.

Dorchester Open Race.

There were some surprises in the open race of the Dorchester Yacht Club on Saturday. That neither the Rocket, the Mab nor the Bess could win a prize in this class had not been imagined by any yachtsmen, yet so it was, says the Herald. The Flora Lee took the lead at the start and held it to the finish, but was beaten by time allowance. She might, perhaps, have saved her time from the Freak and the Florrie, if it had not been for the squall off Cow pasture.

The summary of the fourth class:

Name and owner.	Actual time. h. m. s.	Corr'd time. h. m. s.
Freak, G. F. Maybury,	1 55 56	1 23 47

Mamie, H. T. Bowers,	withdrawn.

The White Fawn, Idler and Egeria were first in the other classes.

Their First Born.

Probably Mr. Robert W. Gray and his young wife of Brackett street are the happiest couple in Quincy. On Monday their happiness was increased by the advent of a tiny image of themselves in the shape of a little cherub of a daughter. Mr. Gray in his domestic felicity did not forget his working chums in the granite shop. On Tuesday he went to Messrs. McKenzie & Paterson's yard bringing with him a happy face and a liberal supply of choice cigars. These he distributed liberally to bachelor and benedict at banker and anvil. After congratulations from his fellow workers Mr. Gray retraced his steps homeward, bearing with him the best wishes for his happy partner and their little visitor

"In love's dear chain so strong and bright a link."

"She, who her lovely offspring eyes
With tender hopes and fears,
Oh, bless her with a mother's joys,
But spare a mother's tears!"

Dr. George F. Brooks, the celebrated and popular physician who is making so many very warm friends in Quincy and the surrounding towns, has cured several old chronic cases that have baffled the best medical skill heretofore. Dr. Brooks having studied at the noted medical schools of Vienna and Paris, as well as Harvard, is often consulted by other doctors in regard to difficult medical cases, as his many years' successful experience as specialist in all diseases of women has given him much skill, which the ordinary family practitioner of medicine is very glad to avail himself of, and our citizens are to be congratulated that his valued medical services can be so easily secured as he makes a daily visit to Quincy to see his patients and calls at Durgin's well-known drug store to secure the names and addresses of any new patients desiring his services, on whom he will call, and make one visit free of charge.

The editors would also be pleased to inform the Quincy public that Dr. Brooks was a medical student of the great French physician Dr. Brown-Sequard.

Almy's Double's.

What an army of villianous looking people there are walking about just now. Doubles of the murderers are seen in every town and hamlet, and if the officers do not capture the real culprits, they have no trouble in securing a full assortment of men who look like him. The old saying that there are no two men alike bids fair to be nullified. According to the reports there are scores, yes, hundreds alike, and the returns just beginning to come in. Identity is a thing easily mistaken, especially by people of lively imagination. —Lynn Item.

—It is estimated that the tax rate in Salem this year will be between $18 and $20.

HOUGHS NECK.

Quite a party of Quincy young ladies are at the Lincoln cottage. Among those there were noticed Misses Annie Nelson, Lillian Taylor, Mary Webb, Jessie Webb, Abbie Brackett, Nina Elliott, Pearl Elliott, Olive Sargeant, Hattie Sargeant, Clara Graham, Edith Gray, Grace Isaac, Annie Bailey, Belle Cannon, Fannie Cannon, Edith Waldron, with Mrs. Sargeant as chaperon.

Mr. West of Milton expects to get into his cottage this week.

Mr. John Cavanagh and family moved to their summer residence Monday.

Sunday was a grand beach day, and Houghs Neck, like all the watering places came in for its share of visitors, the largest number of people for any one day this season. The electric cars brought down some three thousand, while private teams and barges crowded the stables of Taber, Mears and Harvey. Bicyclers were continually passing, and a bird's eye view of Sea street from Littlefield's to Mear's presented a continuous stream of moving life. It was a gala day for Houghs Neck.

The chemical engine was discharged and recharged by Engineer Packard Monday evening.

Walter Brown, Edward Langley, Joseph Page and George Brackett, four young masters of Quincy, are camping on Winthrop street.

John M. Brady of Brockton is building a new cottage and stable on Bell street.

E. L. Perrin of Boston is at the Vogel cottage.

John O. Holden will occupy the Cedar Bluff cottage this week.

Mrs. Hanlon and family of Boston are at the Mt. Pleasant cottage.

Contractor Corliss is building a cottage near the Loretto for Fred Dixon of the Bostonians, who expects to occupy it about the middle of August.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rice of Boston are guests at the Moondyne cottage.

Mrs. Munroe Fitts of Boston Highlands, who is at the Loretto, has been dangerously sick.

Mrs. H. E. Guy of Brockton is at the Lookout cottage.

John G. Ray and family of Hyde Park are at the Montgomery cottage.

Mrs. E. F. Freeman of Dorchester is at the Rice cottage on Manet avenue.

Mrs. Emery of the Loretto has a large number of guests, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. Drummey of Boston; Misses Mamie Shugru, and Emma Edwards, Mt. Pleasant; Mrs. Sarah Willoby and son, Dorchester; Mr. Lawrence Fraser and son, Boston Highlands; Mrs. Melissa Kimball, Concord, N. H.; Miss Mary Shaw and Miss Katherine Scanlan, Providence, R. I.; Mr. M. Loyd, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Travis, Dorchester; Parker and Michael Connell, Boston.

Theodore Peabody and family of Milton, are at the No Name cottage.

Albert Ripley of Needham is at the James cottage on Manet avenue.

William T. Isaacs, Daniel Bills and E. S. Sampson, are the young men who are camping under the hill on Manet avenue, and have with them the yacht Mary Ann.

Thomas Mathews of West Quincy, is building an addition to his cottage on Manet avenue.

Arthur Doble of Quincy, Mr. French and Mr. Forrest of Holbrook, are at Doble's cottage.

It is rumored that the City band of Quincy, are to give a concert Saturday evening.

Flying horses which have lately been in Brockton have arrived and will be set up immediately.

The young ladies who are having an outing at the Lincoln cottage, held a gentlemen's night Thursday evening, and a very enjoyable evening it was. The cottage was very prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns and an interesting entertainment was given consisting of solos by Miss Isaac, duet by Misses Gray and Graham and reading by Miss Elliott; games were also played and one of Caterer Wales' suppers enjoyed.

Championship Regatta.

A cold drizzly rain and a light east wind greeted the Quincy yachtsmen at the second championship race, also for the Sanborn and Rice cups, Wednesday afternoon off the club house Houghs Neck.

The race in the first class was between the Posy, who made her first appearance with R. G. Hunt at the tiller, and the Erin. The Posy was the first to cross the line, but the Erin was close to her heels. They held these positions though the Posy finishing seven seconds in the lead of the Erin. The Moondyne was not in the race, she crossing the line some four minutes behind the leader. The White Fawn did not arrive until thirty minutes after the first class had started but she sailed over the course.

In the second class the Helen was the first to cross the line being followed by the Scamp. The Egeria was handicapped ten minutes and the Idler twenty minutes. The Idler however was in it, and in crossing the line the first time round, she had gained ten minutes of her lost time and at the finish was but five minutes behind the Scamp which won the race.

In the third class it was the Rocket's off day. The Flora Lee crossed the line first and was closely followed by the Mab, Rocket and Freak. When the flag boat was passed the first time round, the Flora Lee was still in the lead, with the Rocket thirty-three seconds later, the Freak one minute, three seconds behind the leader, and the little Mab two minutes, twelve seconds behind the leader.

As a result of the race the Posy secures a leg in championship and Sanborn cup in the first class. In the second class the Scamp takes a leg in the championship prize and Rice cup, and in the third class the Freak takes a leg in the championship prize and in the Sanborn cup.

The Erin, Helen and Rocket receive cash prizes of $5 each.

At the close of the race the Egeria entered a protest against the Helen for fouling the Scamp.

As a result of the races of the club held thus far this season, the Erin and Posy in the first class have a leg in the championship prize. The Madge and Scamp in the second class and the Rocket and Freak in the third class.

In the Sanborn cup in the first class, the White Fawn, Erin and Posy, each have a leg. In the third class the Rocket has two legs and the Freak one. In the Rice cup, which is for the second class only, the Madge and Scamp each have secured a leg.

In its August number the New England Magazine publishes the "Harvard Commencement Essays." The topics are,—"The Harvard Senior," by Henry R. Geldhill: "Edward Rowland Sill," by Chas W. Willard, and "A Remedy for American Philistinism," by Chas. Lewis Slattery. Mr. Slattery's paper is an especially interesting one, because of its frank dealing with one of the social problems of the time, and because it is also a strong plea for the preservation of the public school.

Boston Sewage in the Bay.

The Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health took an outing on Friday of last week, combining business with pleasure. There were about sixty in the party, who took the steamer J. Putnam Bradlee at Battery wharf. Moon island, the Graves and Galloupes island were visited, a chowder being served at the latter. Among those elected to membership at a business meeting was Mr. B. F. Thomas of the Quincy board.

A paper was read by F. P. Stearns, chief engineer of the State Board of Health on "the Boston main drainage works," and the following quotations are of interest to Quincy people:—Reference was made to the presence of garbage in the harbor and the foul odor noticed by residents on the shores of Quincy bay, in which two of the principal points of interest for the afternoon—the Moon island sewer and the dumping scow, were fully discussed.

He did not venture a positive opinion upon the subject, but seemed to think that the sewer was not responsible for the nuisance complained of, although he stated that never before so far down the harbor had he been able to detect traces of the sewage.

"The place at which the sewage is discharged has proved very satisfactory. The sewage being lighter than the salt water, rises to the surface, and at the end of a half hour after the discharge is begun covers an area a half mile in diameter, which can be plainly seen by its color, and because it contains grease enough to still the waves. At the end of another hour it has been so far diluted that no trace of it can be seen. After having disappeared from view it still flows outward for more than three hours, the currents continuing to increase in force. No deposits of sewage matter have been found anywhere except close to the outlet, in a cove which is sheltered from the current by the embankment covering the outlet sewers.

"The rapid disappearance of the sewage by dilution prevents it from being objectionable after being discharged, except in the vicinity of the outlet in summer, when the discharge is certainly disagreeable to yachtsmen passing through it. It is very rarely that any odor can be noticed at any dwellings except those owned by the city on Moon island."

The Herald says: A few members of the party discussed the odoriferous qualities of the Moon island sewer as affecting Quincy bay, and stated that traces of the sewage had been found on the shores of that place, and that at times, when the wind was right, the odor could be perceived by the residents in the vicinity, scientific statements as to the impossibility of such a happening notwithstanding.

Robbed of Sunlight.

With the growth of population in cities there is a corresponding increase in the value of real property. This increased value of real estate is naturally followed by high rents, and in order to realize the largest possible revenue from a limited number of square feet of ground, the owner feels justified in erecting a building that is fairly a sky-scraper. And this without the slightest regard for the rights of his next door neighbor or the general public. Such buildings effectually darken adjacent structures by shutting off a goodly portion of God-given sunlight. They also impede a free circulation of air.—Medical Journal.

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable Hood's kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for Sarsaparilla itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad no other Peculiar preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has To Itself developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. FOR LADIES

WHY IS THE

W. L. DOUGLAS

$3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

Notable Monuments.

One of the pleasantest drives from this city is to Forest Hills Cemetery. It lies through a picturesque country, including Milton Hills, and then the cemetery is a model one. To many Quincy people who are interested in monumental work it is doubly beautiful, and a visit in the summer will well repay one who undertakes it.

Formerly, the Herald says, Forest Hills, in contradistinction to Mt. Auburn, was not distinguished for artistic sarcophaguses or splendid monuments. But of late years this has been changed to some extent, and now there can be seen in sufficient number not to satiate, and in variety enough to please and hold the eye, many fine tombs and monuments of artistic design, and even original conception. On the southwesterly slope of Mt. Warren is the fine shaft of Westerly granite erected to the memory of that noble man, Marshal P. Wilder. Further down the slope is the tomb of Miss Susan Dimmock, who was lost on the steamer Schiller, on Scully rocks, May 28, 1875. She was surgeon and physician to the New England Hospital for women and children, and did a noble work in her day. It is not a little curious to reflect how men of the most diverse views and opinions lie here, almost side by side, resting quietly and peaceably. Here, for example, can be found the monument, surmounted by a bronze bust (an excellent likeness, by the way) erected to Karl Heinzen, who in life was a free-thinker, and in his native country a revolutionist of the most radical kind. Not far away, on Cornell path, is the monument erected to Ned Kendall, the famous cornet player.

A Plain Slate Stone

on Smilax path, marks the resting place of a man who was a power in his day—the best execrated and most blessed man in America—William Lloyd Garrison. He sleeps beside his faithful wife, Helen Eliza, who preceded him to the grave by about three years.

On Ageratum path, under a granite sarcophagus, erected by his society, lie the remains of Dr. Jacob Merrill Manning, so long the pastor of the Old South church in Boston. Near by a polished granite stone marks the resting place of Rev. James Freeman Clarke, author and pastor of the church of the Disciples in Boston. All around are graves and monuments of men of note, soldiers, scholars and successful business men in their time. On an eminence beyond, in a fine location, is Roxbury soldiers burial lot, with a soldiers' monument in it. The lot is railed in with granite. South of this lot, on Cypress avenue, is the granite sarcophagus below which rest the remains of ex-mayor of Boston, Samuel C. Cobb. On Larch avenue is the sarcophagus of Col. Charles O. Rogers of the Journal.

The Oliver Ditson monument, on Poplar avenue, is a marble statue of St. John

Of Fine Artistic Merit.

Near by is the beautiful red granite shaft erected to the memory of Col. William M. Rumrey of the 1st Massachusetts Cavalry. Below this, on Lake avenue, is the Partridge monument—representing an angel with uplifted head and finger pointing upward. On the junction of Forest and Lake avenues is the fine monument erected to the memory of Andrew Carney, founder of the Carney Hospital.

Opposite the Carney monument is the notable monument of O. H. Davenport, in the rear of which is the monument of that sterling man and patriot, Gen. William H. Schouler. Among the notable monuments—more notable, however, for what it commemorates—is that of the late Horace Seaver, well known as the editor of the Investigator for sixty years—a man who was as honest as he was fearless in the expression of his radical opinions.

Many fine monuments might still be noted, did space permit, among them some works of art, chiefly notable as such, others because they mark the graves of men who had done something in their day for the benefit of their fellowmen, among the latter a monument to John T. Hancock, inventor of the Hancock inspirator.

In front of an ivy-covered boulder, facing on Orange path, repose the remains of the gallant commander of the Kearsarge, Rear Admiral Winslow. On Lautana path a granite shaft marks the grave of Rear Admiral Henry Knox Thatcher.

PATENT MEDICINE MILLIONAIRE. Dr. H. T. Helmbold of New York, who has made a princely fortune by the sale of his patent medicine, buchu, has been taken to the insane asylum in Trenton, N. J., he being a raving maniac. This is the fourth time that his family have been compelled to place him under restraint. It is said that he has made $10,000,000 from the sale of patent medicines.

—The assessors' figures for Melrose show an increase in valuation of $1,401,640, making the total, $7,756,715. The tax rate is $14.29, against $13.70 last year.

The Summer Girl.

Swinging idly in the hammock,
  Playing tennis on the lawn,
Flirting on hotel piazzas,
  Dancing almost till the dawn,
Bathing in a dashing costume,
  Yachting in a fetching rig.
Now the summer girl is with us,
  Swift and saucy, trim and trig.

Well she knows her fascination,
  Knows that few men can resist.
Knows she likes a mild flirtation,
  Knows it's pleasant to be kissed;
Knows discretion is a virtue.
  Knows she can have lots of sport,
Knows exactly when its best to Cut an eager lover short.

She is dangerous to fool with.
  Her intoxicating charm
May bewilder her adorers
  Till they come to serious harm.
But she's exquisite to look at,
  And, of course, it is no sin
Just to watch the skillful schemer
  Take some other fellow in.

Household Receipts.

CARAWAY COOKIES. One-half cup butter, one cup sugar, one egg, two tablespoons caraway seeds, one cup cream, one-half teaspoon soda, flour to roll out. Mix rather soft. Roll thick, cut out, sift sugar over, and bake quickly.

RAISIN-LAYER CAKE. Three-fourths cup butter, two cups sugar, yolks of four eggs, one cup milk, three cups flour mixed with two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon lemon extract. Bake in four jelly-cake tins; fill with raisin cream, made of whites of four eggs beaten well, half-cup fine sugar, half-pound best raisins chopped fine, half-cup chopped currants.

HONITON SPONGE PUDDING. Take three eggs, their weight in the shell, in flour, butter and sugar, and grate the rind of one lemon. Beat the butter to a cream, and the eggs, yolks and whites separately, and then together; add the butter, and keep on the beating, then the sugar and flour, and beat the whole till light; put into a mould and boil one and one-half hours. Serve with any fruit sauce or with lemon sauce.

COFFEE JELLY. Soak half an ounce of gelatine in half a pint of cold water; dissolve it in half a pint of very strong coffee, sweetened to the taste. Extract of coffee can be used to flavor this jelly, and answers well.

POTATO SOUP. Four large potatoes, one onion. Boil in two quarts of water.

BANANA CAKE. Bake any light cake in shallow pans as for cream or jelly-cake. When ready to serve (not before) cover one cake with sliced bananas, sprinkle with powdered sugar and orange juice. Put on the other cake and cover in the same manner.

A good plan for keeping butter cool and sweet in summer is to fill a box with sand to within an inch or two of the top; sink the butter jars in the sand, then thoroughly wet the sand with cold water. Cover the box air-tight. The box may be kept in the kitchen.

For tender feet, take two quarts of cold water and add one tablespoonful of bay rum and two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. The feet should be soaked in this for ten minutes, throwing the water upward to the knees. Rub dry with a crash towel, and the tired feeling will be gone.

OUR TWO ORANGE STATES. In the United States oranges and lemons are produced only in California and Florida. The orange crop of the latter is practically out of the way before that of the former is ready for the market. The California orange is of slower growth than the Florida product and does not decay so soon. The orange season in California lasts five months, beginning January first, and it will be prolonged in future, as the people are planting Valencia oranges, which do not ripen till July. The lemon is more sensitive to frost than the orange, and it is produced with more difficulty in Florida than in southern California for the reason that the former State is more subject to frost.—Ex-Gov. L. A. Sheldon in the August Forum.

The eyes should always be wiped toward the nose, as it presses out the fine lines from the corners. Every woman has heard of the virtues of rainwater for the complexion, but it is hard to procure this in our Cochituate-supplied houses. A good substitute is to keep a pitcher of water for toilet use in which lemon, orange or cucumber peel is allowed to soak. Water so impregnated, it is said, imparts a healthy glow and really freshens the complexion, while it softens the skin.

AUGUST HARPER'S. Mark Twain will contribute to the August number of Harper's Magazine a short sketch entitled "Luck." In a prefatory note he says: "This is not a fancy sketch. I got it from a clergyman who was an instructor at Woolwich forty years ago, and who vouched for its truth." It would be interesting to know the real name of the hero whose indebtedness to luck is so graphically set forth in this brief story.

VARYING PRICE OF SILVER. The amount of silver offered for sale to the Treasury Department July 15th was 870,000 ounces, and the amount purchased 325,000 ounces as follows: 50,000 ounces at $1.0110; 25,000 ounces at $1.0125; 75,000 ounces at $1.0135; 120,000 ounces at $1.0375; 55,000 ounces at $1.0140.

Anecdotes.

Aunt Sally—"Goodness me! How can the President be so extravagant with the people's money?"

Uncle Peastraw—"What's the matter, mother?"

"Only think of keeping those pesky Indians on Government preserves."

"Is there any money in your business?"

"We paid 50 per cent. last year."

"Whew! How did you manage it?"

"Our creditors saw that was all they could get, and they took it."

Teacher—"What is the plural of child?"

Tommy—"Twins"

Mr. Gotham—"You are looking badly today."

Boston girl—"Yes. These new eyeglasses don't fit.

Landlady—"Did you know that butter was going up?"

Boarder—"Well, that does not affect you, Mrs. Cheese Paring. Oleomargarine is always going down in your house."

Sloyd or Vacation School.

The Transcript of Saturday says: "Dedham's new educational departure, the Sloyd or Vacation School, is going to be a big success. Already there are eighty-nine pupils enrolled, and new ones are entering each week. There are now six classes of from twelve to fifteen boys and girls in each. The affable superintendent of our public schools, who takes great pride and deep interest in the new school, and Mr. Morey of the Herald reportorial staff visited and inspected the school, which occupies two large and airy rooms in the old High school building on Highland street.

"One of the rooms is filled with desks, at which the pupils sit and sketch the plan of the work to be done. In the other room are a number of real and most convenient carpenter or wood workers' tables, each to do a fine piece of work. On the walls were other tools, while in a cabinet were the working models and plans. In this room were several young ladies and gentlemen, each at his or her table, and all busily at work trying to beat the model or pattern. Miss Lillian M. Elliott, the teacher, was here and there, inspecting, advising or approving of the work being done or in a finished state. Excellent order prevailed, and each pupil seemed to have only one thing that attracted his or her attention,—the work in hand.

"Dedham is the first town in Norfolk County to introduce and make a part of its public school system the educational Sloyd system. The system itself is but a few year old, and was originated in Naas, near Floda Station, Sweden, by a wealthy gentleman, Herr Abrahamson. The school, when first founded, was for children. Afterward it was made a normal school, and then one for manual training.

The Word Sloyd

is a pure, old Swedish word, and can be traced back to the Icelandic. Its meaning is "dexterous", or "skilful." It now has another meaning, "handiwork," as applied to work other than that executed by an artisan. The word has been adopted into the English, Danish, Norwegian, French, Spanish, Italian and German languages.

The Sloyd system tends to develop the mental and physical powers, and its material and practical aim is the acquisition of general dexterity of the hand. It also instils a taste for and love of work in general; inspires a respect for rough, honest, bodily labor; trains habits of order, neatness, exactness, and cleanliness; trains habits of attention, perseverance and industry; develops the physical powers, trains the eye in the sense of form; exercises the thinking powers, and not being purely mechanical.

Teaches Self-Reliance

and independence, as the work must be done by the pupil, and therefore must be in accordance with his powers; and, lastly, it trains the general dexterity of the hand in the use of material which admits of various manipulations and the use of various tools. A girl, with a Sloyd school training, never breaks a dish in washing, while a boy can make a useful household utensil or convenience. The girls, of course, can do the same.

Among the articles that a Sloyd school student learns to make from models are: Kindergarten pointers, parcel pins, flower sticks, pen and crayon holders, key labels, pen rests, flower pot stands, paper knives, tool handles, chopping trays, scoops, spoons. clothes-racks, foot-stools, boot-jacks, knife boxes, plate-racks, bread boards, lamp and watch stands, picture frames, book shelves, writing desks, etc.

POTATOES. The Taunton Gazette says: The potato train is now the successor of the strawberry train over the Old Colony, and picks up its freight principally on the island of Rhode Island and at Tiverton. Teams loaded with potatoes are busy all day going to and from the stations. The vegetables are generally shipped in barrels. The price for the Boston market remained at $3 a barrel only one day. Tuesday the price dropped to $2.75, and on that day 410 barrels were shipped from Newport, 575 from Coal Mines and 259 from Bristol Ferry. Wednesday the price dropped to $2.50, and the shipments were: Newport, 722; Middletown, 300; Coal Mines, 1250; Bristol Ferry, 600. This large shipment evidently glutted the market, for the price dropped to $2 Tuesday, and promises to be even less. Many farmers will not sell at this low figure. The potatoes are of excellent quality.

COPYRIGHT LAW. On the first day of July the Copyright bill which passed the last Congress and was signed by President Harrison, became a law, and now the authors of England, France, Germany, Switzerland and Belgium are entitled to the privileges of the new law, according to the President's proclamation. The effect of the law will be to promote the fortunes of authors both here and abroad, and to protect them from the unjust competition of cheap pirated editions of their own works.

In regard to the effect on our book printing establishments, the Secretary of the English Copyright League said that the publishing centre for the English speaking people will be shifted to America, which will probably prove true.

A GROUNDED WIRE. It is always best, says Electric Power, to avoid danger if possible, therefore, there is one rule which ought to be taught in every school in the United States, and that is—never lift a wire off the ground.

As long as it is on the ground it is harmless, no matter what pressure may be on it. The moment it leaves the ground it may be dangerous. If it is in the way of traffic you can safely pull it across the street with your foot, then put your foot on it and hold it on the ground and it cannot hurt you, but do not lift it. Never touch a wire tied on a pole. It may not be dangerous, but it is like the unloaded gun, it may kill you.

TO COOL A BEDROOM. If the sleeping-room is warm, it may be cooled for a time by wringing large pieces of cotton out of water and hanging them before the open windows, says the Ladies' Home Journal. Leave the door open, and as the air comes through the wet cotton it will be cooled.

This is a good device for cooling a sick-room; the cloths can then be wet again and again. Keep the gas turned low during the process of the undressing, and sleep without a light, unless it is a tiny night-lamp.

FAILURES. The business failures for the first six months of this year were about thirteen per cent. greater than during the same period in 1890 and the liabilities were forty per cent. larger. This is not a particularly good showing. There is, however, a promise of fine crops in the West and generally throughout the country, while short crops are reported in Europe. This will tend to help the condition very materially before winter sets in.

☞ A tramp house is being built just below the meeting house hill in Halifax. It is not very large but will probably hold all who come to use it. Halifax seems to be the place that tramps always head for, and they very often arrive at night. The town fathers thought it advisable to build comfortable quarters to put at their disposal rather than have the vagrants annoying people by crawling into barns and anywhere else they took a notion.

A cave has been discovered in the bottom of Lake Waccabue, Conn., by divers who were searching for the body of a man who was lost from his boat. The divers explored the cave for a depth of thirty feet without finding its end.

Old Colony Changes.

There is a rumor afloat, says the Taunton Gazette, that President Charles F. Choate, who has held that position for several years, has tendered his resignation, to take effect August 1, and that General Manager J. R. Kendrick is to be appointed to fill his place. Mr. Kendrick would make a good man for the position, as he is a practical railroad man and understands the road thoroughly. Mr. Choate was solicitor for the road before he was elected President. The reason for his resignation is that he is to lead a private life in the future.

Mr. I. N. Marshall, superintendent of the Northern and Providence Divisions, is to take Mr. Kendrick's place as General Manager, and Mr. E. G. Allen, Superintendent of the Central Division, goes over to the Northern and Providence Divisions, to take Mr. Marshall's position; George T. Taylor, train dispatcher of the Central Division, will superintend the Central Division in place of Mr. E. G. Allen.

It is also said that Mr. E. H. Bryant, road master of the Central Division, has sent in his resignation, to take effect on August 1, as he is unable to do the work of former years on account of poor health. Many new roads on the Central Division were built under his supervision, and the double track between Taunton and Boston was constructed under his charge. He and Mr. Hopkins got up a patent switch which the company has in use on all parts of the road which excels all other switches of this kind, it is said.

Disturbances on the Moon.

Prof. J. L. Ray of Ashland, Va., who has been studying the moon through a telescope, says there has recently been extraordinary volcanic action on the satellite. He says that on the night of June 22 tremendous energy over the whole surface presented itself. "I saw that what of late have been considered great gray plains are in reality great seas, or else a molten mass, as I saw immense sheets, seemingly of water, thrown through the lunarian atmosphere and finding a resting place at least a thousand miles from where they formerly were. I saw several great mountains sink—the whole moon sway to and fro and everything in the lunar heavens was in the wildest confusion. I gazed with intensest awe upon this awful spectacle for hours, until the confusion finally subsided and there seemed to be a dead calm as before. I feel fully confident that the moon was thrown several degrees out of her course, and she is also perceptibly nearer, perhaps 20,000 miles." No other astronomer appears to have noticed these disturbances.

License Means Drunkenness.

For more than 300 years license has had possession of the field. But no one can affirm it has repressed intemperance. This is the point—the very pivot—of the question between license and prohibition. License means liquor, and liquor means drunkenness. Drunkenness is seen everywhere. It meets you in the streets and highways, in railroad trains, and sad but true, too often under their wheels. You see it at clubs and dinners; at celebrations and public meetings. It is found in lock-ups, mayor's offices and court-rooms. No place is exempt from its curse. Who does not know that license, high or low, means to sell, and sales mean intoxication? Look at your morning papers—they are the diurnal records of vice, folly, crime, infamy, and injury resulting from the sales of liquor. Their location is the bar-room and the public house, where nightly orgies outrage decency, and deadly brawls end in bloodshed and murder. The license law can never rise above its own purpose and nature, viz., the sale of liquors; and sales means drinking, drinking means intoxication and intoxication runs into fighting, brawls, lewdness, and bloodshed; and these mean lockups, the workhouse, jail, penetentiary, poorhouse, and insane asylums. All these mean private woe and ruin, and public wrongs, expense, burdens, and taxation, running far above all that the highest price license can repay. Prohibition is the only remedy—the entire control of making and selling—confining liquor to those uses only which the arts, sciences, and medicines require.—Judge Agnew, in Temperance Cause.

Poetry.

Only a Box.

Only a box, secure and strong,
Rough and wooden, and six feet long,
Lying here in the drizzling rain,
Waiting to take the up bound train.

Only its owner, just inside,
Cold, and livid, and glassy eyed;
Little to him if the train be late,
Nothing has he to do but wait.

Only an open grave somewhere,
Ready to close when he gets there;
Turfs and grasses and flowrets sweet,
Ready to press him 'neath their feet.

Only a band of friends at home
Waiting to see the traveller come;
Naught he will tell of distant lands;
He cannot even press their hands.

He has no stories weird and bright,
He has no gifts for a child's delight;
He did not come with anything,
He had not even himself to bring.

Yet they will softly him await,
And he will move about in state;
They will give him when he appears
Sorrow and pity and tender tears.

Only a box, secure and strong,
Rough and wooden, and six feet long;
Angels guide that souless breast
Into a long and peaceful rest!

Miscellany.

MRS. HAWES' TWINS.

Mrs. Hawes had returned to her work of looking over old coats and trousers with a view to making them into rugs. She remarked to herself, and to the cat, that it "wa'n't no manner of use to waste her breath calling when folks didn't want to hear.

She stood tearing off a strip from an oldtime Sunday coat belonging to her husband, when the door opened quickly, and a girl about sixteen years old walked in with an air as if she had been running.

"Here I am, mother!" she said, "what is it you want?"

Mrs. Hawes glanced up.

"'Twas Marthy Jane I was calling," she said.

"I'm Marthy Jane. O mother, when will you know me?"

The girl threw back her head and laughed. Mrs. Hawes dropped the coat skirt, gazed a moment, and then laughed, too, but with vexed air.

"That comes of having twins to contend with," she remarked. "I thought by the way you broke into the room 'twas Jane Marthy. She's liable to come through a door as if she had been shot out of a gun. Where've you both been?"

"Down to the brook. The wind blew so we didn't hear you when you first called. Did you want anything particular?"

The girl tried to speak patiently, though she was longing to go back and resume making a swing between the two cider apple trees.

"Miss Lawler's jest been here," Mrs. Hawes announced.

"Oh, has she?"

Martha Jane clasped her hands as she put this question. Her face flushed and her eyes sparkled with interest. Her mother partially ripped a sleeve before she spoke again. Then she continued:

"She's decided to have the music party—muskari, she calls it—next Wednesday evening. That German Herr Rickerstruther or somethin' can come then—sooner'n she expected. She invited both you girls. She said it would be finer'n anything you've ever heard. Miss Dalrymple from Boston goin' to sing. I thought you like to know right off. That's why I called, though I knew you was havin' a good time at the brook."

Martha Jane turned and walked to the window. From there she asked?

"You said we both were invited?

"To be sure, I'm afraid you'll have a hard time decidin'," the mother answered, anxiously.

"There's nothing to decide," said Martha Jane. "It's Jenny's turn; I went to the church fair last month, you know."

She came from the window and stood before her mother. She flung out her hands with a quick gesture as she exclaimed, passionately.

"I do wish we had more than one dress! It does seem sometimes as if I couldn't bear it!"

"You don't wish so any more'n I do," said Mrs. Hawes. "You know jest how 'tis; we keep havin' doctor's bills to pay for my sick spells, 'n now it don't look's if we could ever afford for you each to have a nice dress. I s'spose we ought to be thankful you c'n have one, 'n so swap round 'bout goin' to places, bein' jest of a size, 'n as like's two peas anyway. I wish 'twas diff'runt, but I can't help it," she sighed as she ran her knife across the stitches.

Martha Jane was moving restlessly about the room.

"P'raps Jane Marthy'd give you her chance, suggested Mrs. Hawes, more to see what this daughter would say than for any other reason.

"I shouldn't wonder, was the response. "She's twice as good as I am, but she wants to hear that music as much as I do. She loves it just as well. No, it's her turn. She must go, and I must stay at home and envy her. It's horrid to be so poor!"

The girl tried to keep the tears that rushed to her eyes from falling on her cheeks. She saw her mother's lips tremble.

"I'll be good about it after a little," Martha Jane said, in an unsteady voice. "Only give me time to think it over and get the upper hand of myself."

She hurried out of the room, and up the steep stairs to the chamber under the roof which she shared with her sister. She sat down on the bed, crying out in a whisper.

"I rather hear Miss Dalrymple sing than anything else in the world."

Then justice compelled her to add.

"So would Jenny, and it's her turn."

In ten minutes she came down the stairs. She opened the door and tried to speak with brave cheerfulness;

"All right, mother! I don't mean to be a mean wretch this time."

She ran at the top of her speed down to the brook, where her sister was now trying the new swing, dreamily "letting the old cat die" in the soft, sweet air.

Mrs. Hawes left her work, and watched the young figure as it bounded along.

"They couldn't either of 'em be mean wretches to save their lives," she said aloud, with a kind of sorrowful pride.

But Martha Jane had not yet fully got "the upper hand of herself." When she told Jane Martha of the invitation, and said "It's your turn, you know," she felt rather bitter. It seemed to her that her sister's turn always came at the best things.

There was silence for a moment. Then Jenny said, as if speaking to herself.

"Only to think of hearing Miss Dalrymple sing!"

These twin girls were gifted not only with the musical temperament, but with rarely sweet singing voices. Not to be able to improve these gifts under competent instruction had been one of the great trials of their poverty.

Martha did not speak. She felt very hard and disagreeable. She recalled the resolves just made in the little chamber, but the recollection did not do her much good. She knew she was yielding to evil. She felt her eyes burn and snap.

The two girls sat in the broad seat of the swing, which barely moved. A red-shouldered blackbird came into one of the apple trees over them, and sang out his delicious melody.

At the first note Jenny turned toward her sister. She knew instantly all that Martha was feeling. She had a moment's fight with herself, then she said:

"You shall take my turn, and I'll have the next two turns at our gown. That'll be fair, won't it?"

Martha had spoken truth when she had said that Jenny was better than she was. She knew in her heart that she had often taken advantage of that self-sacrificing spirit, and she had had many a "crying fit" of remorse because she had done so. Now she was tempted again, and almost ready to yield.

She shrugged her shoulders violently. "No," she said, with emphasis, "it wouldn't be fair. You know as well as I do that this chance is worth all we may have in a year." She made a great effort, and added, "And I won't take your turn, so there?"

She kept bravely to her resolve all through the three days which followed. It was Jenny, the lucky one, who went about her work in a perturbed state of mind. She kept looking forlornly at her sister.

It was only on the morning of the Wednesday she appeared to cheer up somewhat. She had a private consultation with her mother, who constantly interrupted her with the exclamations, "The land's sake! it's just a crazy idea!" but she laughed as she uttered these interjections, and finally said, "Well p'raps there's no harm in it, but don't ask me to help you 'n' if you get into any trouble, but blame nobody but yourself."

"There's no trouble to get into," responded Jane Martha, confidently. "Nobody'll ever know anything about it, anyway. I'll go up to the village now and call at Mrs. Hardy's. I know she'll be willing.

It was not half an hour later when Mrs. Hardy, who lived just across the street from the tall verandered house which was Miss Lawler's home, opened her front door to find one of the Hawes twins waiting.

"Come in," she said cordially. "Of course I don't know which 'tis but your welcome all the same."

"It's Jane Martha," replied the girl, stepping into the cool hall.

When she was seated by the kitchen table, whereon Mrs. Hardy was rolling pie-crust, she hesitated and blushed a good deal before she really announced her errand. When she had done so, however, she went on easily enough, and laughed with the good-natured lady who listened to her.

"Mother finally told me I might," she said, "if you were entirely willing."

"Just as willing as I can be," was the answer. "There'll be a great time at the Lawler's tonight. Very select, too. Only musical people going. I suppose Miss Lawler thought you and Martha Jane was musical and so you are."

When at a quarter before eight that evening Jane Martha timidly went up the path leading to the great Lawler house, she saw through the windows how brilliant the rooms looked, and how lovely were the flowers in them. She felt very small, but still very eager.

Miss Lawler herself, a tall lady in thin, shimmering silk, was coming through the hall when the servant let in the twin. She smiled on the shrinking child, and Jane Martha collected her wits.

The first thing the lady said was what everybody said when Martha or Jane was met alone: "Which is it?" and when the girl had told her "I'm sorry you could not both come. I'll put you in a good place where you can see and hear."

Jane, in the pretty, light colored cashmere which belonged to her and her sister, was placed in a chair near the door, where she could see the piano and every one who played or sang. She looked at the open door and breathed a sigh of relief. Then she prepared to enjoy herself.

The German Herr, as she called him, played. She had not known that a piano could sound like that, but still she waited for the singer. She knew that the slender girl in white, who had at her throat a cluster of carnation pinks, must be the one.

Yes, it was she; and at last she sang. It was only in dreams that Jane had ever heard such tones, but she had dreamed of them often and now it had all come true. The notes penetrated and thrilled Jane's heart until she could bear no more. She had unconsciously pressed her hands to her bosom, and as the last high notes soared and soared in pure sweetness, Jane, still not knowing what she did, rose from her seat and leaned forward.

Miss Dalrymple, turning when her song was done, saw the figure and met the vivid glance of the eyes.

Hardly noticing the applause, she turned to her hostess and said, "That child can sing."

Miss Lawler looked at Jane, who was now shrinking back.

"Indeed she can. You shall hear her. She loves music so well, I think she will not even be afraid to sing now."

"Let me ask her."

The next moment Jane Martha felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked up adoringly into Miss Dalrymple's face, and that lady felt that she had never given more pleasure.

"Will you sing for me? she asked.

"Now?" whispered Jane.

"Presently. You shall stand close by me, and I will play for you. You shall sing what you please. Are you willing?"

"O, yes, for you!" answered the girl.

Miss Dalrymple smiled down upon her and took a small cold hand in her own.

So it happened that Jane's fresh, unsullied soprano voice, full of suggestions of power, was heard at Miss Lawler's musicale.

Miss Dalrymple listened in admiration. She rose from the piano and said, so that every one could hear, "I could not do nearly as well as that when I was the age of this child. It would be a shame if such a talent should be wasted."

Then there was a bustle of movement and compliment, and the "Herr" was going to play again.

Jane went back to her seat quite dazed by what she had done, and by what Miss Dalrymple had said. No one noticed her now, and she could listen undisturbed.

It was not until nearly an hour later, after cake and coffee and ices had been handed among the guests that Miss Dalrymple again remembered the girl. There she was in her corner. She was eating an ice. The lady walked toward her.

"I want you to sing once more," she said: "I have a plan in my mind. Perhaps I can give you a couple of hours a week for the next two months. I shall live here with my friends until winter."

The girl clasped her hands and began to tremble. She seemed bewildered.

"What, you are afraid this time, are you? It was really a treat to hear you before, or I would not ask you when so many are present."

"Yes, I am afraid," said the girl, "but since you wish me to try, I must."

Miss Dalrymple was sorry for the child when she had placed her by the piano again. The small face was white and the lips almost stiff.

"Take heart," whispered the lady.

"You did so well before. What shall it be?"

When at last the song was selected, Miss Dalrymple looked at her companion in surprise.

"Do you know in what key that is written?" she asked.

"Yes."

"But can you sing as low as that?"

"O, yes."

The other stood in amazement with the sheet of music in her hand.

"I don't understand it," she said.

The girl gazed pleadingly at her, but was silent.

In a blind way the accompaniment was begun; but when an untutored, but rich contralto voice commenced the song, there was a discord among the keys of the piano, and Miss Dalrymple wheeled round and stared at the girl beside her, who trembled so that she could scarcely stand.

There was entire silence among the people presnt.

"What does it mean?" cried Miss Dalrymple looking about her in wonderment.

"It cannot be that this child has two distinct singing voices, one very high and the other very low. She is a phenomenon."

Judge Lawler in the doorway, began to chuckle audibly. He had seen a slight figure steal out and soon return, and now he thought he understood.

The girl at whom everybody was looking, tried twice to speak before she could say a word. Then she burst out shrilly:

"O, if you please I am the twin!"

"That explains," cried the judge, and he began to roar with laughter. All the company joined in, and the "other twin" stood in the midst, blushing, and finally laughing, too.

"You are not the one who sang first?" she was asked.

"No ma'am. That was my sister Jenny. It was her turn with the dress—"

Martha Jane stammered, then was silent growing more painfully red than ever.

She had waited across the way at Mrs. Hardy's for her sister to leave the party. Then the two had changed frocks so that both should have a share of the music. This had been Jenny's little plot. In the hurry of changing she had not told that she had been obliged to sing.

"No matter about the dress, now," said Miss Dalrymple with ready tact. "Let us finish the song."

The distressed young face appealed to her deeply.

Afterward sitting by the child, she heard why the twins were obliged to "take turns in everything nice," as Martha Jane expressed it. "But," said the girl, "it did seem as if we could not both give up hearing you. It was Jenny who thought of the plan."

The next morning Miss Dalrymple returned to Boston. As she left the phaeton in which Miss Lawler had driven her to the station, she saw two young girls in plain gingham gowns and broad hats, hurrying down the road. They were the twins, and they brought two lavish bunches of roses, which they shyly offered.

It was Martha Jane who spoke for both. But all she was able to say was, "Miss Dalrymple, we could not help coming to see you off—and to thank you."

The singer kissed each young face as she took the flowers. She thought she had never received homage so sweet as that she saw in their eyes.

The train was coming. "I shall remember the lessons I am to give you," she said.—Youth's Companion.

Rather Mixed.

In an old parish church in Scotland the minister was very deaf. One Sunday the precentor had to give out the intimations in the following order: New hymn-books, baptisms, and other minor matters. But the precentor commenced with the baptism first, saying, "There will be a public baptism here next Sunday, and parents will give in their names during the week." The minister thinking he was intimating about the hymn-books, said: "And parents who have not got them will kindly come to the vestry after this service. Small ones, 1d; large ones, 2d; red-backed ones, 3d."

A Worthy Invention.

A Belfast, Maine, woman has invented a chair which she calls a book agent's chair. The back works with a ratchet arrangement that allows it to go back, making a reclining chair. When in position the back is upright, and unless one is familiar with it will pitch forward. One day last week a book agent called and attempted to seat himself in the chair. He was well on the forward edge and was pitched head forward to the floor. The man was laid out his full length and his samples were scattered in all directions. He arose, and hastily gathering his things, fled without a word.

—Brockton had thirty-three deaths in July, but two more than Quincy.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 1.

It was one of the happy events of our life to be present at the seventh annual convention of the National Editorial Association of the United States, held in St. Paul, Minnesota, July 14, 15, 16 and 17. Most of the delegates from Massachusetts, with their ladies, a party of perhaps forty, left Boston on Friday, July 10, in a Pullman palace car, a modern example of moving elegance no less than a paradigm of comfort and easy luxury, which, in traveling, is so truly the sole promoter of perfect pleasure in getting one's self to a far land. This car proceeded to Chicago via. Hoosac Tunnel route and Erie Railroad. The accommodations were all that could be desired, the party social, jovial and gay, the railroad officials gentlemanly and obliging, therefore to say the party thoroughly enjoyed the excursion gives but a suggestion of the reality.

The train left Boston at 3 o'clock and arrived in the beautiful town of Athol at about 5.40, where a pause was made for those desiring refreshments to procure them. Soon, too soon for some, "All aboard," sounded along the platform, and once more we were on the road, arriving at the world renowned tunnel about dark.

The farms of the Old Bay State were looking finely; the hay on many of them had been gathered, but the corn, potatoes and vegetables were thrifty and attractive. We passed through Troy and Albany in the darkness of night and so saw but little of those enterprising cities. Arriving at Binghampton our car was attached to a train from New York city, and we proceeded on our way to the large and rapidly growing metropolis of prairie fame, Chicago, where we arrived on Sunday morning.

Here the entire party was conveyed to the hotel known as the Auditorium, one of the largest and best on the continent. Facing, as it does, the waters of Lake Michigan, the scene presented to the eye of him who looks from its front windows is one of such magnitude as not easily to be forgotten. The large and elegant dining room contained ample space and had every facility for the accommodation of four hundred guests, or more, at one time. Unlike other hotel dining rooms, we found this one, much to our surprise, to be situated on the upper or ninth floor of the structure. In many respects, before leaving, we found this to be an excellent idea; the cooking being done in the rear of this apartment, all unpleasant odors from the kitchen ascended directly into the blue ether of space without coming in contact with the nostrils of the guests located on the various floors throughout the building.

After breakfast many of the delegates accepted an invitation to visit Libby prison, which held more than 40,000 Union prisoners during the war. It had been successfully taken down, and each board, beam, timber, and block of stone numbered and lettered, so that it was easily put together again in Chicago. It took 132 twenty-ton cars to carry it to that city. It is a massive building, three stories high, and measures 132 feet on the front by 110 feet on the side. It is now nearly filled with relics of the war, and it would take two or three long columns in this paper to enumerate the articles. It is worthy a voyage of many miles to see the rare and valuable collection that reminds one so forcibly of war's alarm, which, with its associations of prison life, has transformed this old tobacco factory into a museum of national importance. We would advise any of our readers who may go to Chicago, either on pleasure or business, to spend a few hours in this old war museum located on Wabash avenue.

After enjoying a lunch, rich in all those delicacies which are deemed pleasing to the most exacting palate, the delegates, with their ladies, were invited to participate in the gratifying amusement of riding, the objective point being the exhibition grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition on Jackson Park. The party occupied between one hundred and two hundred carriages, and in driving through the long, straight avenues of the prairie city might easily have been supposed to be some funeral cortege, had it not been for the appearance of many a smile on many a countenance which glanced from out myriad colored parasol and dress far too bright to bring forth aught so grewsome, even in our thoughts, as a narrow grave.

After a delightful ride of several hours duration, hours from whose passing entertainment we, (speaking collectively), derived a quality and quantity of good, solid pleasure that it was worth traveling a long distance to attain, we were driven again to the hotel. Here, from 5 to 7, was served a dinner unsurpassed in the elegance of its appointments, in the manner of its entree, and in the beautiful and tasty arrangement of its environment no less than itself, presenting a menu that was all that could be desired.

A very cordial invitation was extended to the company to visit the Press Club rooms on Clarke street, an invitation that many accepted. Arrived at the rooms we found our western brothers determined and resolute in their resolve to make the visiting editors enjoy themselves. Among the principal features of the evening, there was provided for the edification of our party, a fine musical entertainment, liberally interspersed with ice cream, cake and other sweets in great profusion.

Returning to the hotel at a seasonable hour, tea was in order. There were those in the party who, being well pleased with a long day's entertainment, owned up beat and went "up aloft" without the tea.

Old Colony Wants N. Y. & N. E.

We find this item of railroad interest floating around among our exchanges: The Old Colony has every reason in the world for acquiring the New York & New England, says the Boston Commercial Bulletin. The Old Colony is terribly cramped for room, in spite of the fact that it has diverted a large portion of its freight to the Providence division. We are told that 263 trains leave the Old Colony depot daily, only a few minutes elapsing in many instances between the departure of an express and a passenger train. From this circumstance alone, and there are many others equally as weighty, it can be seen why the Old Colony wants the New York & New England. The latter is more or less of a competitor of the former and is sure to become more so. New York & New England, moreover, has undoubtedly the finest terminal property in Boston, and to a road like the Old Colony it would be almost invaluable.—Norfolk County Gazette.

A Handsome Fountain.

The work of setting the beautiful granite fountain at the junction of Hancock and Washington streets, which was commenced about the first of July, still goes bravely on. It was quite a big job and could not be done so quickly as many supposed.

A well was first dug under where the fountain is placed, to the depth of about twenty-seven feet, so as to get a good supply of cold water. This was successful and there are some six or eight feet of water in the well, through which the pipe to furnish our citizens with drinking water is to be placed. This will keep the city water cool and more palatable to the taste during the warm months of the summer.

With good luck the fountain may be completed in about two weeks, then our citizens will have the pleasure of seeing a beautiful granite fountain that will be an honor and credit to the city.

Subscriptions have been received lately from E. H. Doane, George W. Morton and Timothy Reed; still more is needed and must be secured, we are informed, before the fountain can be dedicated.

A box to collect stray nickels has been placed on the lamp post near the stone trough, and it is hoped it will be filled every day. It will be taken down each night and the amount collected published. There were those who promised to "give at the last," and now the treasurer is waiting anxiously to see them.

Beautiful Property.

We never go past the attractive property on Hancock street, between Allyne and Bridge, but what we feet thankful that Quincy has a person of such rare good taste, and love of the beautiful, as the gentleman who lives at the corner of Hancock and Bridge streets. The lawn so green and beautiful, and the grounds and houses so attractive, that we are almost inclined to envy the occupants of these pleasant abodes.

It was not always so. Forty-five years ago, those who knew the little house that stood on the side of the hill, occupied by Mr. Ebenezer Field, and the open well by it, could now scarcely recognize a single inch of the ground, it has blossomed out so beautifully under the guiding hand of Mr. Stoddard.

The piece of land opposite, which has changed but little during the last half century, needs just such a man as Mr. Stoddard to make it attractive. It is certainly a very delightful part of the city, and some gentleman of means and good taste should be the owner thereof. For that which pleases him, cannot help making happy all passers by.

Burglaries.

More burglars were about Wednesday night, the place visited being the hardware store of Charles M. Jenness on Hancock street. Entrance was had by breaking a hole in the side window, when the catch was thrown and the window opened. Once inside, the show cases and show windows were ransacked and a large quantity of small goods taken, among which were three dozen pocket knives; one-half dozen Yale locks, a drafting set, bicycle wrenches, rules and other small articles.

About 12 o'clock Wednesday night Mr. Francis Veazie, who resides on Granite street, was aroused from his sleep by the barking of his dog. Looking out of the window he saw two men pass up the street through the yard. An hour later he saw them come down carrying between them a large bag which appeared to be heavy. Mr. Veazie thought he had lost some of his pears, but this morning upon examination none were missed and it is fair to suppose that some other places may have received a visit, possibly a stone shed.

A Presentation.

Francis L. Souther Camp 27, Sons of Veterans, held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, visiting comrades being present from Phill Kearny Camp 82, Boston, and James L. Bates Camp 36, Weymouth.

The regular business of the evening being finished good of order was reached, when Comrade James O'Donovan of Camp 36 took the floor and said:

"Capt. Bowker, sometime since, some of the members had mentioned that they had a comrade with them who was the means of starting the present camp and through his untiring efforts he had succeeded in building up one of the largest camps in the State, and as a mark of their esteem toward their present captain, they felt in duty bound to show some mark for his efforts and he had the honor and pleasure of presenting him in behalf of the comrades of Francis L. Souther Camp, with an elegant pipe, which one of the comrades had imported from Scotland, also a splendid box of fine Virginia tobacco from this season's crop, as these articles would not be complete without a cuspidor this also had been added which members and friends could see by calling at his residence on Washington street."

Capt. Bowker was completely taken by surprise but in a few moments recovered himself and feelingly responded.

The supper committee then took charge and escorted him to the banquet room where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. Speeches were then in order until a late hour and when all hands left for home, three cheers were given for Capt. Bowker and Camp 27.

Fatal Accident.

Carl Antonio Jacobson, an unmarried Swede about 20 years of age, met with an accident at South Quincy, Wednesday afternoon, from the effects of which he died about two hours later.

He was employed by Charles Wilson, loading pavers onto a car, but just how the accident happened is not known. It is supposed that he was on the track to pick up a paver and while there was jammed between cars which some of the other workmen were pushing, for the first thing they knew cries were heard and he was seen crawling up the stone wall. He was helped out and Dr. McLennan called, who removed him to the Hospital, where he died.

The cause of his death was due to the severing of an artery, which caused him to bleed to death. It is said the unfortunate man had been in this country but about six months.

Coddington Street.

A few years ago Coddington street, that portion across the meadows, was narrow, nasty, wet and unattractive; and when it was proposed to run the street cars through it much opposition was heard. But no one can say but the lower portion has been greatly improved. It has a good, hard roadbed, a dry sidewalk, and is clean and good. There is no doubt but what the upper portion needs widening, and at the junction with Washington street, the sooner the better; but as a whole it has been so much improved the past few years, that it is really noticeable.

REMOVED. A. H. Gilson, our skilful dentist, has moved his Boston office to the new Bradley building, opposite his former entrance on Temple place.

CITY BRIEFS.

August.

Dog day weather.

The vacation month.

Not a very dry month.

Many Quincy people are away.

Many benedicts are without a home.

Full sea in the afternoon for the next week.

The days have decreased an hour; the sun now sets before seven.

Dr. Everett preached at the First Parish church in Gloucester on Sunday.

Those new and handy local time tables are in great demand at the Quincy depot.

Mr. E. B. Pratt and family are at the Kearsarge House, North Conway, N. H.

Mrs. Joshua Fisher of Dedham is visiting her daughter in this city.

Ms. George Gay of Orange has been visiting with his uncle, John S. Gay.

The driveways over President's bridge have been replanked.

The City Hall is being wired for electric lights; twenty-four will be put in.

E. E. Hall has returned from his trip to Maine, much improved in health.

Ex-Councilman Morse has raised a beet which weighs over two pounds.

Miss Lillian Gay and Miss Maud Curtis are visiting at Foxborough.

Mrs. E. W. H. Bass returned Wednesday from a three weeks' sojourn at St. Stephens, Me.

Mr. C. W. Guy has moved his family from Hyde Park into his new house on the Greenleaf estate.

The Catholics of Quincy parish will hold their annual picnic at Lovell's Grove, August 19th.

N. H. Cotton and family who have been occupying the house of Rev. Mr. Cotton have gone to the mountains.

Miss Evelyn Weeks, accompanied by Mr. William James Oliver, started for her home in New Hampshire Monday morning.

George Nash, clerk at the Granite Clothing Co., has gone to New York on a week's vacation.

Mr. Franklin Hardwick and family of Spear street, are at the Hillsboro house, Mount Vernon, N. H., for a month.

Ask the station agent at the Quincy depot for one of those convenient little timetables with Quincy and Boston time.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred F. Green and Miss May McPhail are at Halifax, N. S., on a brief visit.

The Granite Manufacturers' Association will hold its annual meeting next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. L. Vose a daughter of Harvey French of this city, left Wednesday with a party for Europe.

The Record says there were 4000 people at Nantasket Sunday, 400 of whom came from Quincy.

Miss Lucy O'Connell, book-keeper at the Boston Branch grocery, is enjoying a much needed vacation.

The Rev. D. M. Wilson and family are spending the summer at Lamoine Beach, Maine, a place near Mt. Desert.

The third championship regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club will be sailed next Monday, at 2 P. M. High water at 2.34.

Six of the lots near the City Hospital offered for sale by B. N. Adams, have been sold.

Henry W. Tirrell, clerk at Winfield Bros. accompanied by his wife, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Gloucester.

The Rev. H. C. McDougal of Rockland, an able preacher of the Unitarian denomination, is to preach in First church Sunday morning.

Miss Kate Garrity, the polite and genial lady clerk at Hodges' new bakery store in Adams Building, was one of the party to the Isle of Shoals Thursday.

Bicycle riders travel about as fast as the electric cars. Two gentlemen kept their safeties spinning along Sea street, making as good time as the electrics on Tuesday evening.

Mr. John J. Keenan of this city is to superintend the display of the Boston Art Brass Company of Boston, at the World's fair in Chicago.

The Republican Ward and City Committee held its first meeting Tuesday evening in the Ward room, City Hall to organize for the fall campaign.

Five barge loads of people with a band passed through the Square Wednesday going toward Lovell's grove. The sign on one of the teams read: "Annual Picnic Burton Brewery."

Motorman Williams of the Manet Street Railroad received the cheers and thanks of his passengers Monday night, when he brought his car to a stop to save the life of a little puppy dog which was on the track.

Miss Georgie W. Flint, Mrs. Angie Healy and son, Miss Annie Goodridge and Miss Lillie Dunbar, left Monday for New London, N. H., where they will make a stop of three weeks.

William Westland, clerk at C. B. Tilton's, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation which he will spend with his horse and carriage, driving from place to place. Mr. and Mrs. James W. Young accompanies him.

A new Swedish Lutheran church was dedicated at Monte Rose Park, Pigeon Cove, on Sunday. Rev. Dr. Young of Quincy took part in the services. Mr. C. F. Carlson of this city accompanied him.

Mr. John Haley while at work at the stone yard of McKenzie & Paterson last Saturday, had two ribs fractured by a falling stone. He was taken to his home on Brackett street and attended by Dr. Gilbert.

Ten thousand single tickets per month for Boston are sold at the Quincy depot. Add to this the sales at the other end and the package and 100-ride tickets and the importance of the Quincy travel is apparent.

The gang of boys who broke into the Adams Academy and McConnell's fruit store Sunday also broke into the building at the Quincy tennis court and stole a number of balls which have been recovered.

A Boston branch team left alone in front of the store Tuesday attempted to enter the yard when a post blocked the passage of the carriage. The horse kicked himself free and run through the Square. A new harness will be necessary.

Mrs. Charles A. Winslow, Miss Annie R. Hector and Charles H. Winslow, left Tuesday for Vinalhaven, to enjoy a few days on the island with friends. They went by rail to New Bedford, and they take a steamer to the beautiful summer resort.

Mr. W. P. Martin of this city, who has been enjoying a pleasant vacation in Bowdoin, Maine, left a curiosity in the shape of potatoes at this office. The tuber grows on the vine instead of the root, and it is certainly a curiosity in potato growing. They were raised on the farm of F. S. Adams of Bowdoin, Maine.

Mr. John J. Keenan of this city has recently purchased two elegant houses in the city of Malden. They are situated on Mt. Vernon street in that city, and contain all the modern improvements such as electric lights, steam heat, etc. Mr. Keenan is to be congratulated as a real estate speculator for although a comparatively young man, real estate dealers agree that he has shown unusually good judgment in the above purchase.

The City Treasurer paid out $75,568.26 last month.

The crack yachts must look out for the Rocket. She has a new silk sail made by T. W. Lincoln, Quincy Point.

Two trades nines of Boston, the grocers and the newspaper men, play ball on the Greenleaf street grounds today.

Wilson has on exhibition at his market a mammoth cabbage which was raised on Arnold's farm at Quincy Point.

Mrs. Fred W. Tirrell and Mrs. Frank Patch are at North Woodstock, N. H. Messrs. Patch and Tirrell intend joining them soon.

The markets are filled with fruit of all kinds. In this immediate vicinity the apple crop is quite large, and the pear trees are loaded with choice fruit.

Miss Martha P. Valentine formerly a teacher at the Quincy High School, who has been in France and Germany for the past two years is visiting friends in Quincy this week.

Miss Lillian Jilbert, the obliging bookkeeper at J. W. Lombard's, leaves for Milford on her vacation next week. Miss Jilbert intends to travel the whole distance on her bicycle.

Twenty-nine Quincy people left Monday by the special train for an excursion to Plymouth. Among the number were Letter Carrier Gardner and wife, Hazel Ricker and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Winslow, Mrs. Whitman and party, Miss Cudworth, James Baxter, Fred Souther, E. B. Glover and E. E. Hayden.

There were but three entries in the first tournament in the August series of the Quincy Tennis club, on the Bigelow-street court Saturday. The result of those entering was as follows:

Hall beat Hultman,	9—4
Hall beat King,	9—5

Incident of the War.

The following dispatch from Detroit printed in the Boston Globe will be read with interest by the comrades and friends of Francis P. Loud of this city and it came to him as a surprise:

DETROIT, Aug. 5.—One of those incidents peculiar to gatherings of army men took place here today.

A young man, poorly clad, entered the Hotel Cadillac and, accosting Dr. Albion M. Dudley, past commander of Phil Sheridan Post, 34, of Salem, asked where he could find a Massachusetts veteran.

Dr. Dudley informed his questioner that he was one, upon which the young man, whose name is William Quigley, informed Dr. Dudley that while in the army with his father, Capt. Quigley of Company D, 27th Michigan infantry, in front of Petersburg in 1865, he found a silver watch which he wished to return to its owner, and handed an old silver watch to the doctor.

It is difficult to picture the surprise of Dr. Dudley, who was captain of Company K, 58th Massachusetts Infantry, when he examined the watch and found on the inner case the following inscription:

PRESENTED TO F. P. LOUD
BY THE MEMBERS OF THE 58TH MASS. REGIMENT BAND.

Capt. Dudley received the watch with great pleasure, for he not only knew the owner as an old comrade, but as Representative F. P. Loud of Brockton and leader of the band of his old regiment.

Capt. Dudley will upon his return give the watch to its owner.

The title of "Representative" is probably a mistake. Mr. Loud is a resident of Washington street, this city, is a letter carrier, and a past commander of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R.

He enlisted twice in the war, in 1861 and 1864, each time in the band. It was a few days prior to his second departure April 28, 1864, that the members of the band presented him with the watch above mentioned and also a revolver. He remembers the occasion distinctly. It was at the Readville camp ground, he being called out of bed one night for the purpose. The revolver he has now.

Mr. Loud don't know how he lost the watch. It was before Petersburg as stated, but the disappearance was mysterious, and he hopes to get more light on that point.

Mr. Loud is looking forward with pleasure to the return of Dr. Dudley. He does not expect the watch is very valuable, but he will prize it for its associations.

Growing Healthy.

The return of deaths in this city for the six months ending June 30, is 152 against 177 in 1890. In the July just passed, there were 30 deaths against 29 in the preceding year. In August 1890 there were 62 deaths, of which 21 were caused by the Old Colony disaster.

On a basis of 17,000 population the death rate for the first six months of 1891 was less than 18 per thousand.

The Coming City.

The assessors of Medford report the total valuation of town, $10,509,265. This is divided as follows: Real estate, land exclusive of buildings, $3,780,400; buildings, $4,744,700; total, $8,525,100; personal estate, $1,984,165. The total tax is $159,655.27.

Netted $1,000.

Notwithstanding the discouraging circumstances attending the Hospital fete June 17, it is safe to estimate net proceeds at a thousand dollars. This admirable result is due to the push and energy of the several committees.

The new Henry L. Pierce schoolhouse of eight rooms, which is being erected in Dorchester will cost with the land about $120,000. The lot contains more than an acre and a half. In addition to the four school rooms on each floor there is on the first floor a large vestibule, reception room and master's private room, and on the second floor a hall 75x85 feet. If Quincy can get its new eight room building, which will be nearly as attractive for $35,000 it is doing well.

POLITICAL. From present indications there is but little doubt, if any, but Mr. Crapo will be the Republican nominee for Governor. Being a very able man he will poll a very heavy vote.

—The rate of taxation this year in Danvers is $15.80; Peabody $15.60.

We have heard that the road to learning is a difficult one, but the Elevator at the new home of the Burdett Business College, cor. Washington and Kneeland streets, Boston, is the initial factor in the right direction. Their new Prospectus is a marvel of beauty, and worth sending for. We know of no better school.

WEST QUINCY.

Miss Mary Michael of Barry street, is visiting at Mason, N. H

Misses Addie and Minnie Cashman of Cross street are visiting at Scituate.

Miss Christena Craig of Springfield is visiting friends at West Quincy.

Miss Lucy Cassily of Marlboro is visiting Misses Lizzie and Mary Ring of West Quincy.

Misses Katie Havahan and Annie Lane of West Quincy, are on a three weeks' vacation to Milford.

A game of ball will be played on the Hall place grounds this afternoon between employes of the Nichols Granite Co., and the White Granite Co.

Engineer James White has moved into his new house on Miller street.

Some of the West Quincy boys who went to Houghs Neck Sunday for lobsters got left.

Messrs. Daniel J. and John O'Connell of Bates avenue, have returned from Kentucky.

Robert Kent of West Quincy has accepted a position as traveling agent for Joss Bros.

Elisha Clark, who has been visiting at West Quincy, returned to Farmington, Ill., this week.

Several from West Quincy attended the picnic Wednesday of Fr. T. J. Danahy's parish at West Medway.

Patrick Manix has commenced work on the foundation of two more new houses on Hall's hill off Rogers street.

The house on the Willard schoolhouse lot was moved Wednesday. While it was being moved across the track, Supt. Weeks had a car on hand to take passengers to and from the depot.

The theft of money from Clark's store at Brewers' corner has been traced to Alex. McLellan and some of it recovered by Constable Furnald. The case will be taken into court.

Badger Bros. have put upon the market the self oiling trolley wheel which they patented last September. It is endorsed and being adopted by all the leading electric railways.

Mrs. L. C. Badger is at Sunapee, N. H.

John McKinna, employed by A. W. Woodward as a blacksmith, was kicked Monday by a horse he was shoeing, breaking two ribs.

John, a young son of John Cashman, was driving on Robert street Monday night when his horse ran, throwing him out. He fortunately escaped with a general shaking up.

Mr. John Williams, of West Quincy, will conduct the Gospel meeting at Washington Hall, East Milton, Sunday, at 3.30 o'clock. All cordially invited.

MILTON.

Selectman Simpson, who returned from Greenland, N. H., Thursday, reports that his son Albert, who received a severe fall, has recovered consciousness and is much better.

A letter received from Howard Severance, who is in Montana, says his health is much better.

A new platform and fence have been added to the East Milton depot.

Kemp & Tisdale's store looks very inviting illuminated with electrics.

Miss Hayden, of Washington, is the guest of Miss Lottie Van Horne, who gave a donkey party Tuesday evening, in honor of her guest. Ice cream and refreshments were served. First prizes were awarded to Miss Nellie Sulis, of Weymouth, and Mr. J. B. Newcomb, Jr.

William Wellington, of Dorchester, is visiting his sister, Miss Abbie Wellington.

Miss A. L. Newcomb is visiting friends at Leominster, for a few weeks.

It is now said that Robert Sweeney will occupy the new building on Granite avenue as a boot and shoe store.

Charles Fish has sold out his stock of horses and carriages.

T. L. Pearce has added a fine black horse to his stable.

Eugene F. Gallagher, clerk at T. L. Pearce's store, takes his vacation next week.

A party of ladies and gentlemen on their way from Boston to Nantasket through Milton, Tuesday, were brought to a sudden stop on Adams street by one of the horses being taken with a fit. Benj. Butler of D. H. Fitzgerald's store, went to their rescue, and succeeded in bringing the horse out of its dilemma.

William Cross of this town was seriously injured by the kick of a horse in Boston Monday. It was a scalp wound, and he was treated at the Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. John A. Pratt of this city is in Newton, having been called there by the sickness of her sister Mary, who has been dangerously sick with typhoid pneumonia.

Monatiquot Yacht Club.

The Monatiquot Yacht Club sailed its second championship regatta on Thursday off Fort Point, in a fair easterly breeze.

The White Fawn was an easy winner in the first class, against such rivals as the Moondyne, Erin and Folly.

The Diadem sailed alone in the second class, and having previously won a leg, carries off the championship for 1891.

The Rocket appeared in a new silk sail, with the intention of easily doing up all the crack boats in the class, but Skipper Faxon should have left Tom Davenport ashore as the boat upsets every time he is in it. This occasion was no exception, the Rocket capsizing in rounding Halfrocks buoy. Capt. Bass in the Dandelion rescued the boys. The Atala was the first boat in the class but had to give the Freak nearly five minutes and lost the race by two seconds.

Cash prizes were awarded to the Folly and Atala.

In the first class the Moondyne and White Fawn have legs for the championship, and in the third class the Helen and Freak.

The summary:

Burke a Candidate.

It is understood upon good authority that Josiah Quincy is not to be a candidate for Representative this year as he has already been there four terms.

James F. Burke will receive the Democratic nomination and will without doubt be re-elected. Mr. Burke has served one term and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents, working hard for the interest of the city, especially the Water Supply bill which would have passed had the city's other representative done as much. Mr. Burke's action on that question will doubtless give him many Republican votes next November.

The Randolph Register says: Mr. Clift R. Crane, the head book-keeper for John Peach, the past three years, and now in the employ of Burt & Co., has been called to the Boston office, where all book-keeping in the future will be done. About Sept. 1st, Clift R. Crane will take possession of his own house in Quincy, and reside there with his family, as his business will be in Boston, instead of Avon. Mr. Crane has been living on Main street, for the past three years, and those who knew him best will be sorry to have him leave.

—A stable on the Bradley estate at Sharon was burned Tuesday night; loss $700.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Mary Colligan and Miss Annie O'Neil of South Quincy are at Beverly, the guests of Miss Annie McKenzie.

Miss Katie Hayes and Miss Katie Faircloth gave a lawn party Thursday evening, at the latter's residence on Mt. Pleasant.

Mrs. Hugh Mundy and Misses Sarah and Elizabeth Mundy left Friday to visit Mrs. Mundy's sister in North Easton, Penn., for a month.

Daniel Ford has gone to Saratoga, on business for Thomas & Miller.

Mrs. James Pollock, who has been visiting her parents in this city, returned to her home in New York Wednesday.

We are pleased to learn that Miss Euphrasia Hernan, who has been so seriously sick the past two months, is convalescing.

Matilda, the little daughter of John A. McDonnell, entertained a few of her young friends on Friday afternoon, it being her tenth birthday. The children had a very pleasant time. After playing croquet and other games, they were served with cake, lemonade and ice cream.

Mrs. John Roberts and Miss Sadie McPhee of South Quincy have gone to Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Hose Co., No. 1, have voted to give the J. Q. Adams Chemical No. 2, a return game of ball which will be played at South Quincy, Saturday, August 22.

On the same night that the Quincy Adams depot was entered the residence of Miss Mary Ann Cahill and Mrs. Riordan, at the corner of Franklin and Pearl streets was ransacked. The only article missing is a brooch.

Mr. Henry Edwards is at home from Montana on his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Rideout have gone to Cotuit.

The Quincy branch of the Irish National League voted Sunday to hold their annual outing Sunday at Nantasket.

The City band gave another of its open air concerts near W. H. Doble's store on Franklin street, Saturday evening, which was brought to a somewhat abrupt end by the shower.

Entered the Depot.

The South Quincy depot was entered at at an early hour Monday. Entrance was made by forcing two windows, one in the women's and one in the men's waiting room, but for some reason this appears to be as far as they got, for there were no marks of any nature whatever upon the ticket office door or windows.

There must have been four men concerned in the break, as James Vinson, the gateman, says a man came to his shanty about 1.30 o'clock Monday, and asked for a match, this obtained the man sat down and engaged him in conversation. At the same time two men were observed walking up and down the street scuffling their feet. During this time the fourth man was evidently forcing the windows. Vinson describes the man who was in conversation with him as being a young man of medium height, with a light mustache and goatee, and wore a white handkerchief about his neck. He said he had the toothache and that was why the handkerchief was around his face. The man left him about 4 o'clock.

H. H. Safford, the agent, who lives over the depot, heard nothing and did not discover that an attempt to enter the depot had been made until he went to work.

The two windows were evidently forced by a jimmy as the marks can be plainly seen on the sash.

ATLANTIC.

C. W. Hodgkins and family of Atlantic have moved to Reading.

Mrs. Curtin, Miss Ayer and Mr. Gay of Atlantic have gone on a trip to Saratoga, and are stopping at the Grand Union for a week or more.

Miss Hattie Main and Miss Jenette Billings of Atlantic, and Miss Pond and Miss Hartshorn of Webster are at the Wellesley cottage.

Albert Ives and family of Atlantic are visiting at New Haven, Conn.

"Miss Wollaston" has returned from a trip West. She was with a travelling show company.

Miss Maud Rice and Mr. C. F. Merrick have returned home from the summer school at Cottage City.

Cephas Drew, clerk at T. Gurney's, is away on his vacation. He is making a tour of Southern Massachusetts.

It was fortunate the firemen played ball last Saturday, as a large real estate sign has been built in the centre of the ball field.

Capt. C. B. Newton is not making very rapid strides to health. It is now eight weeks and he is not able to sit up an hour at a time.

An ice-cream party was held at the residence of Miss K. Cunningham, the clerk at E. Stocker's, Friday evening. The evening was passed by games and singing.

Edward Pope has gone to Nova Scotia.

The Putnam Nail Works have shut down for three weeks.

Cyrus Noble is building a barn on his estate on Glover place.

Mr. Willett of Boston is erecting a new house on Clive street.

Miss M. E. Hall, the faithful agent at the Atlantic depot, is away on her vacation this week, being at Auburn, Me. Miss Sadie Sumner is filling Miss Hall's position during her absence.

Councilman Stephen O. Moxon lost a valuable horse last week. The animal was in his stable and becoming frightened at some performing bears jumped out of a side door and so injured himself that he died shortly after.

Thomas F. Hurley, clerk at Timberlake & Small's grocery, has resigned his position to accept one with Golding & Co., Boston, learning to make composition rollers. His place has been filled by John Morris of the Neponset store.

—The Sharon Advocate says: "Capt. William Derry's buildings at Sharon plain were struck by lightning last Saturday afternoon. The barn was first struck. Mr. Nelson was milking the cow. Both man and cow were knocked over, from there the bolt passed into the house past Mrs. Derry and out of the window. The plastering was torn from the side of the room and scattered over Mrs. Derry but no one was seriously hurt." Mr. Derry is a native of Quincy, and has relatives and friends here who will be pleased to learn that the stroke did no serious damage.

WOLLASTON.

The summer bachelors of Wollaston are invited to assemble at the residence of A. G. Olney, next Wednesday evening, to console and sympathize with each other.

One day this week we stepped into the new store of Mr. Frank J. Perry on Newport avenue, and was pleased to find him so pleasantly located. He has a good stock of glass, tin and hard ware, and a fine workshop for his plumbing business.

Rev. E. A. Capen of Watertown (formerly of Wollaston) will preach at the Baptist church Sunday, Aug. 9th, at 10.45. Evening service at 7.30.

A large delegation from the Wollaston Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor visited Holbrook, Monday evening.

Mr. Charles R. Brown while riding horse back through Quincy was thrown and severely bruised about the face.

Mr. E. J. Cummings and Mr. J. Arthur Sparrow returned from their camping trip in the Middleboro woods.

There is a terrible stench on Hancock street near the Park, which probably arises from a barn located there. The Board of Health should investigate.

Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Colgan are at Buxton, Maine.

Ask station agent Wilde, Wollaston, for one of the new time tables.

The much talked of supper of Hose 2, to the fire department officials has been postponed until October.

Miss Mabel G. Nash of Wollaston, is making a short visit at Castine, Maine.

The residents of Rufes Hummock, Wollaston, are enjoying the Quincy water very much. The pipes were extended to that popular watering resort last week. Wollaston people most always get what they want.

Miss Maggie McAlerey, is sojourning for a few weeks in Canada.

Miss May Florence Ela has gone to Bath, Me., to rusticate for three weeks.

The L. B. Club met with its president, Miss Imogene Perry on Thursday evening. The club held a clam bake at Taylor's beach Friday afternoon at the invitation of Miss Emma Wheeler.

It was expected that Rev. Hugh Montgomery of Woburn would preach in the M. E. Church, Wollaston, next Sunday, but Rev. D. L. Thoburn, a nephew of Bishop Thoburn of India, will supply the pulpit instead; preaching both morning and evening.

QUINCY POINT.

Miss Lottie Stockman of Roxbury is the guest of Mrs. S. F. Newcomb at the Neck.

Master Lewis Maney, Howard avenue, Quincy Neck, celebrated his eighth birthday on Wednesday, by giving a garden party to a number of his little friends.

Mr. A. B. Smith of Omaha, Nebraska, formerly of this city, is grasping the hands of eastern friends once more. A. B. is looking in excellent health and his spirits are on a par with his health.

Washington street bids fair to be the finest in the city, when the rebuilding of the same is entirely completed. Everyone has something good to say of the improved condition of the road, which has been for so long a time completely worn out.

Mr. Wm. K. Woodbury recently purchased the ruins on Mr. Everett Newcomb's estate and has torn down and removed the same. The changed appearance of the place adds much to its value, and Mr. Woodbury is deserving of a vote of thanks from Neck residents who have had to view these charred buildings for the past four years.

Mrs. Wm. A. Hayden and daughter are spending a fortnight at Randolph and Stoughton.

Miss Bessie Carter started on Friday for a two weeks' vacation at Hallowell and Manchester, Maine.

Mortgagee's Sale.

BY Virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Caleb F. Billings to Curtis C. Howard, dated August 24th, 1876, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 483, folio 18, for breach of the conditions thereof and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, Sept. 1st, 1891, at 2 o'clock, P. M., all and singular, the premises described in said mortgage, to wit:

A certain piece or parcel of land, being the homestead lot of said Caleb F. Billings, and containing one-half acre, be the same more or less, with all the buildings thereon, situated in the northerly part of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, and numbered 37, "homestead lot," on a plan of building lots, made by L. Briggs & Co., Surveyors, dated June 10, 1872.

Said lot of land is bounded, as per said plan, northwesterly on Glover avenue, on said plan, there measuring about 431 feet; southwesterly on land of heirs of J. J. Glover, deceased; southeasterly on land as delineated on said plan, of Lemuel Billings; and northeasterly by Lot No. 38 on said plan.

Subject to three prior mortgages upon this with other land, to certain tax titles and whatever other incumbrances may exist.

$100 must be paid at the sale.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail prompIy attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Plum Roll

BY MRS. S. T. RORER,

Principal Philadelphia Cooking School.

Add one teaspoonful of Cleveland's baking powder and a half teaspoonful of salt to one pint of sifted flour. Sift again. Rub in one tablespoonful of butter, add sufficient milk to make a soft dough. Roll out, sprinkle with one cup of chopped raisins and a half cup of chopped citron. Dust with cinnamon, roll up and steam for thirty minutes. Serve warm with hard sauce.

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

The most healthful leaven is carbonic acid gas from pure cream of tartar and soda. It is the only leavening power of Cleveland's Baking Powder. That is why Cleveland's is perfectly wholesome, leavens most and leavens best. Try it, Cleveland's.

New School House.

Mayor Fairbanks has received an opinion from City Solicitor Hayes that the order making an appropriation of $31,500 for the new brick school house at South Quincy was legal, and has signed the order.

The plans and specifications have been made by Loring & Phipps and may be seen at the City Hall.

The total length of the building will be 160 feet, 8 inches; width 43 feet, 8 inches. There is a projection of 13 feet, 4 inches on the front, 60 feet, 6 inches long, in which are two entrances, and two teachers' rooms, 14 feet 4 inches, by 12 feet, 4 inches, with closets and toilet rooms. The corridor 15 feet, 4 inches, runs the entire length of the front of the building; out of this is taken the eight cloak rooms, two for each school room, which are against the school room and run lengthwise of the hall.

At each end of the corridor is a stairway five feet wide, which with two turns leads to the second floor.

Th re Are on Each Floor

four school rooms, each 37 by 25 feet, 4 inches, and lighted by five four-foot windows, so that the light enters on the left of the pupils. Each room is entered by two doors. Between the rooms are the vent flues, warm air flues, and closets of the Smead direct system of heating and ventilating.

The third floor is also reached by two stairways above the others. Each enter corridors which in turn enter a large hall 72x32 with a stage on the side 22x14. On each side of the stage is an ante-room 14x9 which may be entered from the corridors. Large unfinished attics may also be entered from the corridors.

In the basement are two play rooms 25 feet by 36 ft. 6 in., one for boys and the other for girls; also large sanitaries, the furnaces, and a fuel room with a capacity of 100 tons. There are two exits and two stairways to the first floor. The basement floor will be concreted.

All the rooms are to be connected with the principal's room by electric bells and speaking tubes, and a gong will be placed on the outside of the building.

The specifications call for rough split Quincy granite for the foundation, Quincy granite for the exterior steps and thresholds, and red Quincy granite or freestone for the caps and sills.

Proposals are asked in the advertising columns for building the new brick school on Brooks avenue, South Quincy. Plans and specifications may be seen at the City Hall. Proposals will close on Saturday, Aug. 22, at 4 P. M., and the successful bidder must give bonds to complete the building on or before April 1, 1892.

Bathing Accident.

A bathing accident which was almost attended with loss of life happened to a Quincy gentleman Sunday morning off Fort Point, North Weymouth. The particulars as given to a PATRIOT representative are as follows. Sunday morning Michael Logan, his son James, and John D. Moriarty all of this city, started in a boat for North Weymouth on a mackerel trip. After fishing for some time Mr. Logan thought he would take a bath and proceeded to swim towards another boat which was anchored a little ways off. He reached the boat in safety, and started to return, when he was suddenly taken with cramps, and immediately called for help. Mr. Moriarty pulled in his anchor and started for his companion, who in the meantime had disappeared beneath the waters. When he arose Moriarty grabbed for him and succeeded in catching him as he was going down for the second time. Being unable to pull Logan into the boat he called to Logan's son to keep a hold on the exhausted man, while he rowed to the shore, which luckily was only a short distance away. When they reached the shore Logan was unable to move, and it required several hours to resuscitate him. Mr. Logan may congratulate himself on his narrow escape from a watery grave.

Brooks—Fuller.

Dr. George Frederick Brooks, the popular physician and surgeon, who has made such a host of warm friends and well-wishers since he has been amongst us, is to be warmly congratulated on his recent marriage to Miss Abbie T. Fuller, our favorite and charming singer, and we wish them long life and happiness.

The doctor will reside at No. 9 Hall place, West Quincy, and will be at his medical office, No. 18 Temple place, Boston, till 4 o'clock, afternoons, after which he will come to Quincy to visit his patients, as heretofore, calling at Durgin's drug store daily to receive the address of new patients who may wish to see him.

July Weather.

The month of July was unusually cool. The average temperature was two degrees colder than the average for July during the past twenty-one years, or since the establishment of the Signal Service weather reports, and the rainfall was above the average for twenty-one years.—Journal.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels.

Distress After Eating

Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Firemen Play Ball.

Nines composed of members of Hose No. 1 and J. Q. Adams Chemical No. 2 met on the diamond near the Atlantic depot, Saturday afternoon, in a friendly game of ball, and a great game it was. Seven innings only were played, at the end of which the score stood 16 to 4 in favor of the Chemicals.

The vitrolites were the first at the bat, and before the Hose boys had time to think 4 runs had been made.

Farrell then took up the stick and after fanning the wind a few times was declared out, and Morris and Barry did the same.

In the second inning Barry, [who was the short stop of the old West Quincys,] got in his work in the box and retired three of the "metal puddlers" in short order. The "stone cutters" again came in and were as quickly retired.

In the third, Barry, who saw that he was not receiving much support from the outfielders who were all new at the business, did not attempt to show his powers and allowed two more runs to be made.

When the Hose boys took their inning in the fourth the score was 8 to 0, not one of the Hose boys having seen what the first base was made of. Price Morris, the famous captain of the Bradfords, seeing how things stood, pulled off his coat and rolling up his sleeves grasped the stick firmly and made an awful swipe at the ball, sending it into left field, and taking first and finally reaching the home plate, making the first run, which was received with shouts of applause.

Thus the game continued until the end of the seventh, when being somewhat tired of their hard work, the umpire called time.

Of the features of the game much might be said for there were many. Barry and Cunniff both pitched a good game, and had the Hose boys had a good second baseman the score might have been different. The boys however did the best they could with the experience they had had.

Several of the Chemicals were old hands at the game. Golden and O'Connell were not however, this being their first appearance upon any diamond and their playing especially the base running astonished themselves as well as the spectators, and they were heard to vow at the end of the game, to give up work in the Foundry and enter the base ball arena.

At the close of the game all hands, including Chief Ripley and Councilman Kinn, who were interested spectators, were invited to the Chemical quarters where clam chowder, steamed clams and coffee were served which all pronounced excellent. Cigars lighted an hour or more was pleasantly passed in discussing the afternoon's game.

Balky Horse.

Sunday morning about ten o'clock as one of the Italian fruit venders who lives on Water street was driving his gray "mustang" up School street, he met with an incident which he will not be likely to forget in a short time. When nearly opposite Summer street the horse stopped suddenly in the middle of the electric car track, and could not be induced to proceed a step further. The owner coaxed and threatened but to no purpose for the horse remained as solid as the rock of Gibraltar. A crowd soon gathered and endeavored to help the son of sunny Italy to the best of their ability, but they might as well have tried to stop the sun in its course. "Maledetta" growled the Italian as one of the urchins endeavored to give assistance by trying to persuade the owner to tie a knot in the animal's tail, while a young man remarked "It's no use boys, he's anchored," just at this moment an electric car bound for West Quincy with its load of passengers hove in sight. Here was a predicament! A horse attached to a heavy wagon, rooted as it were to the track, as seemingly unconscious of the oncoming danger as the unborn babe. If ever there was a time when there was a chance for men to display their courage and the coolness of the mental faculties in a trying ordeal, this was one. But the crowd was not lacking in bravery for they rushed towards the wagon lifted it bodily and dragging the horse with them landed both in a place of safety. Mr. Patrick Morris, the genial captain of Steamer No. 1, happened along at this time and offered his assistance, but to no avail. Mr. Cornelius Kelliher the veteran jockey next mounted the wagon and endeavored to start the beast, and came near receiving a broken neck for his pains. All efforts seemed fruitless, when suddenly the horse started off of his own accord, the owner gathered up the reins and ran along side of him, and when last seen both were running towards Franklin street, with the speed of a railroad train.

Didn't Get Their Money.

There were fifteen disappointed certificate holders at the Golden Grail meeting Wednesday evening. The cause of their disappointment being the failure of the Imperial officers to show up as they had agreed to as late as Wednesday noon. The members were very indignant and some of them stayed there until the late train. A committee of two was then appointed, consisting of J. W. Lombard and James O'Donovan, to wait upon the Imperial officers and ascertain why they did not come out as they agreed.

The visit of the committee from the local lodge of the Golden Grail to the imperial officers Thursday, brought out some facts that will surprise the members of the order in this city.

One of the imperial officers was seen who expressed surprise that they were expected in Quincy Wednesday evening, as they had made no appointment to do so. When asked when they would come, he said they could not tell, and that they would now have to take sixty days after maturity, instead of thirty, for the reason that all the orders having money on deposit in the North National bank had been attached by certificate holders in Malden and other places, and no money could be obtained from there until the matter had been settled in court. They said they had plenty of money, but for the above reason could not get it, and they had nothing to pay with except what came in from present assessments.

The Quincy members who held matured certificates will therefore have to wait thirty days longer.

BROCKTON. It is settled beyond a doubt, says the Enterprise, that the Old Colony railroad is to make extensive improvements in its property in Brockton, involving alone an estimated expenditure of nearly a half million of dollars. The first matter to be attended to is the grade crossings, and next will follow the erection of new passenger and freight stations.

—The Brockton fair will be held Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

District Court, Quincy.

The following cases have been before the District Court in this city the past week:

The liquors, seized from George S. Simmons of Weymouth, were forfeited to the commonwealth.

Edward Tewksbury of Holbrook was arraigned for assault on Emma J. McCully and was found guilty. The case was continued until Wednesday for sentence.

Thomas and James Sullivan, two juveniles, were arraigned Monday for stealing a peck of peaches valued at fifty cents from the orchard of Henry H. Faxon. The case was continued until Thursday for hearing.

Jeremiah Connelly, James F. Sullivan and William Bennett were arraigned Monday or entering the fruit store of James McConnell and the larceny therefrom of fifty cigars valued at $2. They plead guilty and this also being a juvenile case was continued until Thursday for hearing.

Gustave A. Johnson of Randolph pleaded guilty to keeping a liquor nuisance, the case being continued until Saturday for sentence.

The continued case of Patrick Haley of Weymouth, for keeping liquor with intent to sell, came up and he was fined $50, from which he applealed.

Henry Mobes of Quincy, for disturbing the peace at Houghs Neck was arraigned and case continued for hearing until Friday morning.

The case of Thomas Sullivan, James F. Sullivan, Jerry Connelly and William Bennett for larceny, was continued until next Thursday.

George W. Peterson, Andrew Peterson and Peter Dixon were arraigned for having in their possession twenty lobsters less than 10½ inches in length. The case was continued until Saturday August 15, defendants being held in $300 for their appearance.

The case of Edward Tewksbury of Holbrook, for assault on Emma J. McCully, came up Wednesday when the defendant was found guilty and fined $25, which he paid.

The case of Henry Moebs for disturbing the peace at Houghs Neck came up for hearing on Friday, a number of Houghs Neck people being among the spectators.

J. D. Taber, the plaintiff, was the first witness who testified he was having trouble with another boy when Moebs interfered and wanted to fight. The crowd commenced in the afternoon to tear down the flying horses which are on my grounds. This is the same crowd that have been trying to run the beach. One of the crowd on the horses refused to give up his ticket and I went to take him off, when Moebs pitched into me. I went to see his father and the boy drew something, I do not know what, and said if I went through that gate he would blow my brains out. His father also said if I did not keep off he would kick me out. The horses are running yet.

The other witnesses for the government testified substantially the same.

Henry Moebs the defendant testified that on August 3, he was down to Taber's and Henry Hoey was on the horses. Taber came over and pulled him off, taking him by the throat. I went over and took hold of his arm and told him he had assaulted the Hoey boy. Taber said he would go over to see my father. I told him to keep off of the land or I would shoot him. I had nothing to shoot with. A LEDGER fell out of my pocket and I suppose Taber thought that was a revolver.

Several other boys told practically the same story.

The case was then continued two weeks to give the Probation officer an opportunity to look into the matter.

James Wentworth of Randolph was arraigned for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell and continued to August 20.

Tax It.

Unoccupied land does not earn. Tax it, then, at the rate of what it would earn if put to earning by the erection of buildings like those about it. Then you will have no more land held at exorbitant figures for a rise, and taxed at half what the owner asks for it, but will find the vacant lots coming into the market and soon covered with tax paying buildings.—Exchange.

A High Tax Rate.

Marblehead taxpayers should have the sympathy of the whole state. The Assessors announce a tax rate of $21.40. The valuation is $5,045,834 and population in 1890, 8,202. The rate is $4.60 larger than last year.

—It will cost the Brockton members of the Order of the Old Colony holding the earlier certificates $95 to receive $100, while those in the $50 class will have to pay $51 for it.

—The souvenir spoon collector can now have something over 700 in his collection. This ought to enable one to be decidedly spooney.

HOUGHS NECK.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mears, formerly of the Great Hill House, but now of Brockton, have been visiting their old home at Houghs Neck. The couple are in good health and are looking well.

Among the new arrivals at Houghs Neck, are Messrs. H. French and W. S. Osborne, of Quincy, who are occupying their new cottage, the Everneat, nearly opposite the Casino. They are entertaining, this week, Mr. Emery, of Quincy.

Miss Agnes Howard, cashier at H. W. Robinson & Co.'s, Brockton, is spending this week at Raccoon island.

The Furnald cottage is occupied by a Brockton party, L. D. Bates and party, including some fine singers.

One of Pierce's cottages is occupied by Hiram Wright and party, one by Mr. Baldwin and family, of Brockton, and one by Elbridge Ross' family, of Stoughton.

Among the guests at Pierce's, are Timothy Morse, wife, daughter and son-in-law of Marshall's corner; Edward C. Pierce and wife, Chas. Harriman and wife, George Johnson and family from Brockton, and a large number from Dedham and Stoughton.

As Mr. Thomas Jackson and three of his family, who have a summer cottage at Houghs Neck, were driving to the Quincy station Monday in their jaunty dog cart, they met with a mishap which might have been much more serious than it was. Without warning, while on Coddington street, the axle broke allowing the carriage to collapse. The escape from injury was miraculous.

State Officer Proctor has been at Houghs Neck looking for short lobsters and it is said he found some; at any rate warrants have been sworn out against Capt. Dixon George W. Peterson and Andrew Peterson, each charging ten lobsters, although considerably more were taken.

It is now three weeks since the disastrous fire at this place, and as yet nothing has been done toward better protection except that the chemical has been supplied with new hose. This does not satisfy the property holders and there is a talk of forwarding a petition to the city to have the old Granite located here.

Mrs. Kate C. Corliss of Boston, and Mr. Frank J. Long of Charlestown are the guests of Mr. Thomas J. Downey.

H. C. Pierson and family of Malden are at the Daisy cottage.

Herbert Higgins has his new 22-foot yacht moored off Houghs Neck.

Among those at the Loretto this week are Mr. and Mrs. Haley, Dr. Kanning, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Sargeant, Randolph; Miss Davenport, Medford, and Miss Tracy, Boston Highlands.

H. S. Huntington and family of Milton are in the Unquity.

G. S. Adams and family of Lowell are at the Lincoln cottage this week.

C. B. Faunce and family of Boston are at the Poco.

A party of young ladies are having an outing at Ferris this week.

A. H. Taber has sunk a well on his land and at a depth of 19 feet struck a boiling spring which flowed three feet in an hour.

James Maxin is to have an elevator put in his cottage to accommodate the ice man.

The Whoop-La Temperance club, of Brockton, held an outing at the Casino last Sunday.

Shaw Bros. have fitted the yacht Moondyne with new and lighter spars.

Timothy Smith has a new cat boat.

Those registered at the Linden this week are George H. Goodwin and wife, Somerville; William J. and J. D. Batchelder, Boston; Miss Clara E. Jender, and Herbert W. Hall, Brockton.

Mr. Woods and family and Mr. Hayden and family, of Brookville, are at Dearing's cottage.

Mr. Withington and family, of Boston, are at the Little All Right.

Charles Hall, of Quincy, is building a new stable near Pierce's.

Elbridge Ross and family, of Stoughton, are at the Grapevine.

Hiram Wright and family, of Brockton, are at the Dew Drop In cottage.

Calvin J. Emery of the Loretto is taking a two weeks' vacation.

Nothing has yet been done by the cottagers toward an illumination this year.

T. Mair and family of Boston are at Mrs. James Shepard's cottage on Rock Island.

Frank Creber and family of Roxbury are at their cottage.

Mrs. Rufus Littlefield and daughter, formerly of this place, are registered at Pierce's this week.

Two picnic parties, one from North Stoughton and one from Readville, were here Wednesday with headquarters at the Casino.

Miss Teenie Downey, daughter of J. Thomas Downey of the Globe, entertained several of her friends at Houghs Neck, Wednesday. In the morning a sail was taken to Nahant in Capt. J. L. Harvey's sloop yacht Rival; returning from which the party was invited to partake of dinner by Mrs. Downey at the French cottage on Sea street. A group photograph was taken after which the several points of interest on the beach were visited. The guests present were Miss Lizzie Harper, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Miss Mamie Long, Charlestown; Miss Alice Downey, M. F. O'Neil, Henry Moebs, Bert Nolan and John Long.

Mr. and Mrs. John Goff are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Peters.

Miss Newhall of Roxbury is a guest at the Idlewild cottage.

The Globe says: "Wanted—a man" would be a most appropriate sign on the beach just now, but it is hoped August will bring more of the masculine gender.

The garbage wagon was round among the cottages at Houghs Neck, early Wednesday morning, and we hope collected enough to make it an object to come again, as the accumulation of swill has been a decided nuisance in years past. We are sorry that a more extended notice had not been given, as we think the cottagers would be greatly pleased to know that a way had been provided for the disposal of their garbage. Mr. Murray very kindly informed several of the housekeepers of the fact, but still there were many who know nothing about it and had probably disposed of what they had before the arrival of the team.

Mrs. Lund of Brockton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mears' has been visiting her brother, Mr. Stanley Mears' of the Great Hill House.

Dr. Sylvester and family of Beacon street, Newton, are camping on one of Mrs. Lapham's large front lots.

Mr. Downs of Cambridge has erected his portable house on another of Mrs. Lapham's seashore lots.

Mr. Frank Goodhue and family and Mrs. Edwin White and family have taken the Centre George for the next two weeks.

The cottage formerly called the Seaweed has had its name changed to the Centre George.

Mr. McLean and family of Hyde Park are staying at Mrs. Lapham's on Rogers street.

In the summary of personal property published in the LEDGER, Quincy takes the average position among the cities. The average amount of taxable personal property to each individual in New Bedford is $413, while in Marlboro it is but $74. In 11 cities it is larger per capita than in Quincy, while in 14 it is lower. The proportion of personal to real in Quincy in 1890 was nearly one to three; in 1889 it was nearly one to four; in 1888 over one to four. It has averaged about the same for ten years or more.

—The following is the Assessors' valuation of the town of Milton for 1891. Personal estate, $8,715,412; real estate, $5,426,500; total valuation, $14,141,922; number of polls, 1023; rate, $8 on $1000; amount of tax, $115,184.38.

Bad Accident.

J. Wellington Field met with a severe accident at Fort Hill, Hingham, about 9 o'clock Sunday evening which may result fatally.

It seems that he had been to Nantasket, and was on his way home and meeting other teams going the same way, a race ensued. When Fort Hill was reached the teams came together, the force throwing both horses into the air and Field violently to the ground, causing concussion of the brain.

He was taken up and carried to his home at South Quincy, and his case continues serious.

Another story of the accident is that Field was racing with another team and was leading the way when his horse stumbled and threw him out. The driver of the other team, which was immediately behind, was unable to stop his horse and the wheels of his carriage passed over him.

J. Wellington Field who was so severely injured last Sunday evening remains about the same. He has recovered consciousness several times for a few moments and has spoken which gives his family much encouragement as there is a chance for his recovery.

Small Burglaries.

Two breaks were reported to Constable Furnald on Sunday, the Adams Academy and fruit store of James O'Connell having been entered. Mischief was evidently the object at the first place, for the only things missing are some keys. At the fruit store some choice cigars were taken. Constable Furnald immediately got on the track, and arrested three youth who will average about thirteen years, viz.: Jerry Conlin, James F. Sullivan and William Bennett. Some of the stolen goods were found in their possession.

They were arraigned in the Quincy court Monday.

THE ASSESSORS of Newton report a very small gain in personal property, only $5,060. In real estate, however, the gain was $1,363,775, making the gain in valuation $1,368,835. The tax rate is higher than for two years, being $15, against $14.60 last year and $14.80 in 1889.

—The Rockport Granite Company has been awarded the contract for furnishing Boston with 300,000 paving blocks for $77.65 per 1000.

—The tax rate in Natick is $18.40; valuation $5,608,850. Forty-five persons or firms pay a tax of over $300.

FOR GENTLEMEN
FOR LADIES

Ask my agents for W. L. Douglas Shoes. If not for sale in your place ask your dealer to send for catalogue, secure the agency, and get them for you.

☞ TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE. ☜

WHY IS THE W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

Development of the Northwest.

"The Great Northwest" becomes a very indefinite phrase as the frontier moves westward with each decade. The new States that have recently been admitted to the Union have a good title to the old term "The Great Northwest," and the two Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Washington make a great empire of new possibilities. The Chicago & North-Western Railway, that once covered the "Old Northwest," ministered to its growth and greatness and was a great missionary factor in the development of northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Northern Michigan, Minnesota and Nebraska. This was the Old Northwest, and now, by branch lines or by its alliance with the Union Pacific Railway it stretches out its protecting hand of help to the six new States which have begun their march in paths of progress.

What a mighty tide of traffic is served by the thousands of miles of railway that compose the Chicago, Union Pacific and North-Western Line! Reaching sixteen States and the territory of Utah, and touching more than 2,500 cities and towns, there is sure to be a wonderful growth and development, and somewhere in this mighty empire, there is always the high tide of prosperity and great opportunities for capital, brains and energy.

The splendid Vestibuled Trains of the North-Western, which provide all the luxuries of travel, convey the traveler comfortably and safely to nearly every part of the "Great Northwest." One of these trains runs through, solid, from Chicago to Portland, Oregon, with sleeping car Chicago to San Francisco without change—another conveys passengers between Chicago and Denver with the loss of only one business day en route, and still another takes them to the Twin Cities of the northwest (St. Paul and Minneapolis), or to the rapidly growing metropolis, Duluth, without change, in cars that represent the highest skill and ingenuity of the best manufacturers in the world; combining in the highest degree, elegance, safety and luxurious comfort.

Excellent meals in North-Western Dining Cars, which enjoy a national reputation for excellence, are served at the uniform price of seventy-five cents each, and Free Reclining Chair Cars are run on through trains between Chicago and Council Bluffs, Omaha, Denver and Portland, Oregon.

The comfort and convenience of passengers desiring to travel at a small expense upon second-class tickets is promoted by the provision of accommodations for their use in Tourist or Colonist Sleeping Cars, which are supplied with every requisite for comfort, and in which completely furnished berths may be procured through from Chicago to Portland, Oregon, or Chicago to San Francisco at the nominal rate of $4.00 per berth.

All ticket agents in the United States and Canada sell tickets via the North-Western, and time tables and full information can be obtained upon application to any of them, or by addressing Mr. W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Contented Jim.

Everything pleased our neighbor Jim.
When it rained
He never complained,
But said wet weather suited him.
"There never was too much rain for me,
And this is something like," said he.

When earth was dry as a powder-mill,
He did not sigh
Because it was dry,
But said if he could have his will
It would be his chief supreme delight
To live where the sun shone day and night.

When winter came, with its snow and ice,
He did not scold
Because it was cold,
But said: "Now this is really nice;
If ever from home I'm forced to go,
I'll move up North with the Esquimaux."

A cyclone whirled along its track,
And did him harm—
It broke his arm,
And stripped the coat from off his back:
"And I would give another limb
To see such a blow again," said Jim.

And when at length his years were told,
And his body bent,
And his strength all spent,
And Jim was very weak and old;
"I long have wanted to know," he said,
"How it feels to die"—and Jim was dead.

The Angel of Death had summoned him
To heaven, or—well,
I cannot tell;
But I know that the climate suited Jim;
And cold or hot, it mattered not—
It was to him the long-sought spot.

Household Receipts.

RASPBERRY AND CURRANT JELLY. To one and one-half pints of currant juice allow one-half pint of raspberry juice and two pounds of sugar. Proceed as in rule for currant jelly until the sugar is added. Then boil twenty minutes. The raspberry juice requires more boiling than the currant. This jelly is more easily made and of finer flavor than that made entirely of raspberries.

SPICED CURRANTS. Five pounds of currants, weighed after they are stemmed; four pounds of coffee sugar; one and one-half cupfuls of vinegar; one tablespoonful each of salt, cinnamon, cloves and pepper. Mix the ingredients and boil until the consistency of rich preserves.

SWEET PICKLED CURRANTS. Five pounds of currants; two and one-half pounds of brown sugar; one pint of vinegar; one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, cloves, allspice, pepper and salt. Cook half an hour.

BAKED TOMATOES. Select smooth, round tomatoes, of uniform size, not very juicy. Put them in hot water, remove the skin, cut them in halves and scoop out all the seeds. Chop, and rub to a powder one-third of a cup of boiled ham or tongue. Add two-thirds of a cup of soft bread-crumbs, one teaspoon of chopped parsley or one saltspoon of thyme, a little pepper and sufficient melted butter to moisten. Fill the tomatoes with the mixture, place them in a shallow dish, and bake fifteen minutes.

Don't forget to sprinkle flour on the bottom crust when you are making fruit pies to absorb the juice. Piecrust is better if mixed with a knife and not touched with the hands any more than is absolutely necessary. A little milk rubbed over the top crust before baking gives a brown gloss.

A CURIOUS INITIATION. A Western Odd Fellow received the initiatory and first degree, and before applying for the second and third degrees became totally deaf. When he asked for those, the question arose whether they could be given him on account of his deafness, and the grand master of his jurisdiction decided in his favor. The grand sire was appealed to and he gave a decision confirming the action of the grand master, to the effect that the second and third degrees should be given to the candidate by allowing him to read the ritual, see the floor work, and have the passwords communicated to him written upon a piece of paper to be immediately destroyed. This is said to be the first case of the kind on record.

OLD CHURCHES. There are five old churches in Marshfield. The First Congregational was organized in 1632; the Methodist Episcopal organized in 1785; the First Baptist church in 1788; the North Baptist organized in 1833, and the East Congregational organized in 1835.

☞ There is a man living in Winsted, Conn., who belongs to twenty-four secret societies, three churches, nine military companies and four volunteer fire organizations. Will this blast from the Ram's Horn apply to such a person? "The man who joins church simply to make money out of his profession of Christianity, is a man the devil loves to shake hands with."

The Japanese language is said to contain 60,000 words, every one of which requires a different symbol. It is impossible for one man to learn the whole, and a well educated Japanese is familiar with only about 10,000 words.

Sarah Bernhardt has again changed the color of her hair. She is now a pronounced brunette.

"Y-yes," sobbed Billykins, "b-but n-not in the s-same p-place."

Little Bess came home from church one Sunday with her head full of the sermon. It was about a "new heart," she told us when we questioned her. Her father took her on his knee and gravely asked her if she understood what a new heart is?

"Oh, yes, indeed," she answered brightly, "it's a kind of heavenly stomach."

Walter—"Do you object to cigars, Miss Perte?"

Miss Perte—"Never, unless they are lighted."

A Letter From Africa.

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 7, 1891.

MY DEAR FRIEND: We left Bombay, India, by the P. & O. steamship about the last of December, steaming across the Arabian sea to Aden in Arabia. Here we changed to the P. & O. steamer Oceana, a 7000 ton ship, the largest of the line. On this steamer we went across the Red sea and the gulf of Suez, where we saw Mt. Sinai, and that strange, rare sight, a mirage. The steamer crossed the spot where the Israelites passed through the Red sea. We touched at Suez and then steamed through the Suez canal, stopping off at Ismalia.

There we took the train to Cairo, leaving the "wilderness" in the background. At Cairo there are many scenes interesting to travelers. Here are donkeys, camels, Arabs and carriages, all mingled together. Once in awhile a deep sounding bray comes from a donkey far away, then the growl of the camel and the cries of the frequent sounding "backsheesh" (money) from the little ragged Arab children.

On the 9th of January we started on our trip up the Nile. The steamer first stopped at Beni-Hassan, where we visited the rock cut tombs; then we went through the town and visited the bazars of Assyroot which were very interesting. This queer old town is 750 miles in the interior of Egypt. Our next visit was to the bazars of Assonan and the great obelisk, which was half quarried out upwards of 3000 years ago and the work left uncompleted. Then we made an excursion to the sacred island of Philæ and the hugh stone temple built upon it. Here I may say that all the temples of Egypt are made out of massive blocks of stone. Then we looked at the temple of Keneh, and last and best of all, Luxor. The temple of Karnak, the temple of Luxor, the tombs of the kings, the Rameseum, the temple of Abydos and the colossi were on the list of wonders. We did them all.

The temple of Karnak is simply grand and wonderfully large. The great hall alone contains 130 columns, each one thirty-six feet in circumferance and sixty-five feet in height. Besides this large room there are hundreds of large additions put on by other kings and many sitting Colossitoa. The temple of Luxor contains many large roofless columns.

We next saw the tomb of Ramases 2d, the Pharaoh of the Bible, and the tomb of Ramases 3d and of Sethi 1st. The Rameseum contains many colossi. We took our lunch in Cleopatra's tomb. It was a singular and solemn dining-room, was it not? The temple of Abydos is next in importance to Karnak; a man looks frightfully small beside the colossi. In Cairo the "howling dervishes" made up a novel feature of the Mohammedan religion. The performers stand around in a ring in the interior of the mosque and suddenly there is a beating of the tom-tom, then the performers begin to sway slowly to and fro, then the leader of the band beats the tom-tom faster and faster and the music is pounded out in double quick time and the men sway faster and faster till they spun about like tops and their hair spreads and flies off in the air about their heads in a surprising style. All the time they are whirling around they are yelling at the top of their voices. The sweet singers of Egypt.

We saw the place on the banks of the Nile where Moses was found in the bulrushes. We also visited the Coptic church built on the spot where Mary and Joseph once worshiped. Then we visited the mosque of Mehemit Ali, which is made of alabaster and is very beautiful inside. We have, since all this sight-seeing, climbed the pyramids and seen the Sphinx, which we may well say as they do in New York, is immense, and now we are resting.

I will now close this letter hoping to hear from you soon.

Your affectionate young friend,
BRUCE McLEAN FALCONER.

P. S. DEAR EDITORS: I am sure we shall all say that this letter is of marked ability and very entertaining when we bear in mind that the writer is only twelve years of age. I am certain that when our dear Bruce wrote this letter he was the smartest boy in all Africa and Asia too.

Bruce sends his thanks to the PATRIOT for kindly printing his letters. J. G. B. H.
New York, Aug. 3, '91.

LOST HER BONNET. There is a good story being told of one of the prominent ladies in Whitman. She dressed the other afternoon and came up town on a shopping tour and after visiting several stores she slowly sauntered home. Arriving at the front door of her house, she was about to enter, when she espied, hanging to the rose bush, just over the door, a bonnet. One look it was hers. One clutch at her head, where the bonnet should have been, but where it was not, and then came fainting and a tableau.

SAT UPON BY AN OSTRICH. A gentleman had a theory that any creature, however savage, could be subdued—"quelled," as he said, by the human eye. One day he tried to quell one of his own ostriches, with the result that he was presently found in a very pitiful predicament, lying flat on the ground, while the subject of his experiment jumped up and down on him, occasionally varying the treatment by sitting upon him. Doubtless it was safer to lie down than to stand up to be kicked, but to be sat upon as if one were an egg must have been indeed humiliating.—London Spectator.

TO KEEP OFF MOSQUITOES. Take a small quantity of a two per cent. carbolic acid solution and sprinkle sheets, coverlets, pillow and bolster on both sides, the edges of bed curtains, and the wall next the bed. The face and neck may also be slightly wetted with the solution. Not a single gnat or mosquito, it is said, will come near.

☞ A curious wedding took place recently in Ashley, Northamptonshire, Eng. The contracting parties were a man aged 66 and a woman aged 77. The banns had been published in church fifty-six years ago, but they separated and married different people. The wife of one and the husband of the other dying, they found themselves at liberty to renew their old engagement, and have now married, presumably for the last time.

☞ The latest plan to improve the draught of the furnaces of ocean steamers is to increase the height of the smoke pipes. The new steamer Scot of the Cape Mail line is provided with smoke pipes 120 feet high above the grates, being the loftiest pipes ever put into a steamer. A draught of three-quarter-inch water pressure is thus obtained, all the steam needed is easily secured, and the use of fans is dispensed with. Her speed is nineteen knots.

St. Helena, Cal., boasts a remarkably active "oldest inhabitant" in the person of a book canvasser, who, although 92 years old, is as vigorous as most men at 50. Two years ago he walked to a town 32 miles distant and back the same day. We would not believe that if we told it ourselves.

☞ An exchange says, "It is never a mistake to treat a newspaper man fairly; and if you want things printed correctly, afford the reporter every opportunity to get the facts."

The August number of the Home-Maker is delightfully summery, with its illustrated sketch of out-door life in Madison Square, and its story of Nantucket, with pictures of the old windmill, and the cottages at Siasconset. There are stories too by the best of short story writers, and there are the excellent departments of "Art at Home," with the "Housewife," illustrated Fashion and Women's Clubs, all practically, admirably and originally treated.

Visiting Day.

From Squantum Heights Tuesday, there might have been noticed unusual commotion on Thompson's island. It was visiting day at the Farm School.

Never, says the Herald, since the days when Capt. Myles Standish stepped upon the shore and the Sagamore of Agawam ruled thereon, has Thompson's island appeared more beautiful than it did yesterday, when a party of 300 people visited the place to see the young relatives they had intrusted to the farm school's wise management.

The summer "cottages" of the lads, appeared very inviting, with their spacious interiors, swinging windows, and pretty furnishings, arranged by the boys themselves. Luxuriant crops covered the farming portion of the island, handsome Jerseys cropped the herbage, and everywhere thrift, peace, order and comfort reigned.

As the Gov. Andrew drew toward the little wharf, strains of music finely rendered by the farm choral band floated out in greeting to its coming guests. On landing the party proceeded to the large industrial building, where Mr. Arthur Dexter gave the boys a cheery greeting, and announced to the friends that the next visiting day will be Sept. 3.

Then there was a bright little galop by the band, after which Mr. Dexter bestowed the semi-yearly Dexter cash prizes and the Temple book prizes to the lads whose records were highest for manly, upright conduct and perseverance.

After the distribution of prizes a delightful hour or two was spent in inspecting the great homelike building and lunching in the groves or in the dining rooms. Beside Messrs. Henry S. Grew and Arthur Dexter of the management, there were present among the guests Mr. and Mrs. Piper of the Pine Farm School, West Newton; Mr. Pear, of the Boston Children's Aid Society and Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss and Miss Dyer, of the state primary school at Monson.

The prizes given were the result of 26 weeks persevering effort and constant watchfulness by the boys, instead of 11 weeks as before. Under the regime of Mr. Bradley the moral and intellectual growth of the school is fully keeping pace with the increase of the island's physical beauty. Many valuable and practical innovations have been introduced in the educational and industrial departments, and the incalculable value of the institution is being more clearly demonstrated with each succeeding term.

A Shortage Reported.

Insurance Commissioner Merrill has exercised the authority conferred upon him by statute and called upon the assessment endowment corporations for a report of their business for the half year ending June 30. There are reported ten orders that write certificates maturing in one year.

In this class it is noted that the certificates terminated by lapse and death are less than five per cent. of the total outstanding, and that six of the ten concerns have failed to meet their obligations at maturity. There are 8741 unfortunate holders of these overdue certificates. To meet the liabilities of $13,789,519, all due in a year, there are cash assets of $1,153,249. To meet the deficiency the 133,452 members must be assessed an average of $94.68 each besides expenses, that is if there is no increase of membership.

If new members come in they will help to pay off the old ones, but at the same increase the ultimate liabilities in a constantly increasing ratio. In the longer term orders a still more discouraging condition of affairs is reported. In the fifteen-year order, the American Friendly Society, the liabilities are $606,303 and there are absolutely no assets. These statements are not the garbled reports of enemies of the orders, but are gleaned from the official reports to the commissioner as made by the officials of these societies under possibility of prosecution for perjury if found incorrect.

UNUTTERABLE AGONIES. A line man in St. Louis became accidently connected with the wires, and received an electric current so violent that he instantly fell to the ground and was believed to be dead. To the amazement of the attendants who removed him, he revived, and told the tale, which no one else has ever lived to tell, of the unutterable agonies of the electric shock. He says that all the tortures imagined since the world began, fail to even suggest this agony, and that though it could hardly have lasted over a quarter of second, it seemed to him ages. If this is true, electrocution is not the easy and painless death that its advocates have believed.

HE TOLD THE TRUTH. At the conclusion of a festival an excellent teacher, desirous of administering a trifling moral lesson, enquired of the boys if they had enjoyed the repast. With the ingenuous modesty of youth they all responded, "Yes, sir." "Then," asked the excellent teacher, "if you had slipped into the garden and picked those strawberries without my leave, would they have tasted as good as now?" Every small boy in that stained and sticky company shrieked, "No, sir!" "Why not?" "'Cause," said little Thomas, with the cheerfulness of conscious virtue, "then we shouldn't have had sugar and cream with 'em.—N. Y. World.

STENCIL PLATES. Every farmer should have a stencil plate with his name and residence cut in it, so that he may plainly mark all bags, blankets, robes and boxes with it; also a brand with which he can burn his name into the handles of hoes, shovels, rakes, forks and other tools. Then, if he is blessed with a borrowing neighbor, the sight of the name may remind the borrower to return the tool before it is worn out. At least there will be less danger of his thinking he owns it, because he has had it so long that he has forgotten how he came by it.

THE EIGHTH WONDER. A clock that might be safely stated to be the eighth wonder of the world is to be placed on the tower of a public building now erecting in Philadelphia. The centre of the dial, which is twenty-five feet in diameter, is to be thirty-five feet above the street. The bell will weigh from 20,000 to 25,000 pounds and its detonations will be distinguishable throughout the whole city. The minute and hour hands are to be twelve and nine feet in length, respectively, and the Roman characters on the dial will be two feet eight inches long.

A novel plan of spending an enjoyable vacation is being carried out by Mr. S. B. Schlesinger, of Brookline, Mass., accompanied by his two daughters and a son, by making a tour of the mountains on horseback. The party has with it seven horses, a carriage and two servants, making a noticeable cavalcade as it journeys from place to place.

Proposed License Law.

SUGGESTED BY REV. HUGH MONTGOMERY.

Nine hundred and ninety nine persons in every thousand are hereby absolutely prohibited from stealing; but if the town or city shall vote to license stealing, then the thousandth person shall be licensed to steal for one year from the first day of the following May.

Every person licensed to steal shall be of strict integrity and unquestioned honesty.

He shall not steal after eleven o'clock at night nor before six o'clock in the morning, nor on Sunday.

He shall not steal from minors or from persons from whom his associates in crime have already stolen during the day.

He shall not steal on legal holidays, except on Washington's birthday and Fourth of July.

As a part compensation for the poverty, wretchedness and misery he causes by his stealing, he shall pay one thousand dollars annually to the Municipal Treasury.

ENGLISH RAILROAD ACCIDENT. The first great railroad accident occurred on the Great Western road of England in 1841. A train was rushing along when a mass of earth and stones fell from the enbankment and obstructed the way. Eight persons were killed and many wounded. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of "accidental death in all cases and a deodand of £1,000, an engine, tender and carriages." The old common law provided that when any personal chattel was the cause of death it should be forfeited to the king. Part of this act was not enforced in later years, but a heavy fine was imposed on the owners of any chattel doing personal injury to the king's subjects. This law was observed as late as 1847, when parliament abolished the practice.—Detroit Free Press.

GOT INTO A GOOD FAMILY. Adam Smith was a cattle-dealer, and was a very wicked man. A camp-meeting was in progress in his locality, and among many others who were converted were several members of his family. At last he consented to visit the meeting, and during the progress of the service one of his daughters came around to where her father was sitting, and in tears, she said to him: Father, I am wedded to the Lord." "Wedded to who, did you say, Mary Ann?" "The Lord, father," if that's so, b'gosh, the Smiths have got into a good family at last."

WATCH SCREWS. A visitor to the watch factory at Waltham, describing some minute screws, says: "A small heap of grain was shown to us, looking like iron filings or grains of pepper from a pepper castor—apparently the mere dust of the machine which turned them out—and these, when examined with a microscope, were seen to be perfect screws, each to be driven to its place with a screw driver. It is one of the statistics of Waltham, worth remembering, that a single pound of steel, costing but fifty cents, is thus manufactured into 100,000 screws, which are worth $11.

ASTONISHED HIM. "Little boy, do you understand what is meant by energy and enterprise?"

"No, pa, I don't think I do."

"Well, I will tell you; that one of the richest men came here without a shirt to his back, and now he has got millions."

"Millions! how many does he put on at a time, pa?"

Women and Ladies.

There have been some amusing instances of the misapplication of the word lady, which custom has decreed to mean social culture instead of its original meaning, "loaf giver."

A girl waiter in a large hotel in an eastern city approached a guest with this query:

"Has any other lady taken your order?"

This was equivalent to the politeness of the little girl who surprised the family by announcing:

"Mamma, the swill lady is at the back door."

There is a story of the mistress of a fashionable house who, on being left without any servant, answered the door bell and was confronted by a stout girl, who asked:

"Are ye the woman that wanted a lady to work for ye?"

A minister who was very polite changed a portion of the Scripture to read, "Ladies and gentlemen created he them;" and a lecturer who cared more for the sweet phrases of politeness than for the plain statements of the truth, rung this query upon an astonished audience as he discoursed on the characteristics of women:

"Who were the last at the cross? Ladies. Who were the first at the sepulchre? Ladies."

But even he was outdone by the exquisite divine who, as he concluded marrying a couple, said gallantly:

"I now pronounce you husband and lady.—Detroit Free Press.

The Mission Band Picnic.

The day was very lovely, graced with our summer's glow;
Nature reveled in the splendor of the wealth she did bestow;
Breezes soft o'er flowers were sweeping, breathing sweetness on the air
From distant hills soft mists were lifting showing beauty everywhere.

The children caught the music of dear Nature's glad refrain:
Could they help from bubbling over when so free from toil or pain,
And it flitted through my mind, as I watched their fun and glee,
How many useful lessons children teach you and me.

What is one? I will tell you, if you really care to know;
Because they love their parents and implicitly trust them so,
And isn't it because we doubt God's love so strong
That we lose so much of sweetness and the soul's most joyous song.

We gathered at the "Pines," it was where we met last year,
If you do not know the place, I cannot tell you dear;
Because it might intrude and that would be all wrong,
So while you count your fingers, I will sing another song.

The children numbered thirty-two, with parents quite a few;
For six was just the number, while babies numbered two;
Four swings were for our use, with hammocks by-the-way,
And croquet sets all trim and neat, to pass the time away.

Most certainly we enjoyed it, all the hours which we passed there;
Skipping, tripping, lightly sipping the draughts of sweetness in the air
Till the sun in golden splendor frankly told us twelve o'clock.
Then we went to work in earnest, for we felt the sudden shock.

Now prepare a picnic dinner—"one, two three, sit where you be,"
Give three cheers for fragrant pines, and our Mission-band spree;
Yet we all will be so dainty in our manners all the time,
It will be a thorough pleasure 'round a picnic board to dine.

Something more than just a "board" graced our table let me say,
Viands there were in rich abundance; fruit and flowers we had that day,
We were very much refreshed, for our appetites were lean,
And happier or more satisfied children, I think are rarely seen.

But look! the shades of evening will be falling e'er we know,
One by one the stars be shining in their brilliant evening glow,
And may our lives dear children shine for Jesus day by day,
With a sweet and mellowed beauty, like the stars along the way.

MAY LOVEJOY.

Miscellany.

Going to Leave the Farm.

The work of the farm house was over for the day; the children—with the exception of the eldest son, who had gone to the village—were in bed, and in the big comfortable kitchen Farmer Harewood, his wife, and his wife's sister, Mrs. Lucas, were sitting around the centre table. The farmer was reading the paper, his wife was putting a patch on the knee of little Harry's diminutive knicker-bockers, and Mrs. Lucas was crocheting a hood of blue and white zephyr for a small neice.

There was a silence in the kitchen, save for the snapping of the fire in the stove, the ticking of the big eight day clock in the corner, and the rustle of the farmer's newspaper, and when Mrs. Harewood sighed deeply, both her sister and husband looked up in surprise.

"What's the matter, Sarah?" asked the latter. "That sigh was the loudest I ever heard you give. Has anything gone wrong? You look as though you had a big load on your mind."

"I have," answered his wife. "And it is a load which you must share, Eli; I have borne it alone as long as I can bear it. There is a great trouble in store for us, husband—George is going to leave the farm."

The newspaper fell to the floor, and for a moment the farmer looked at his wife, too much surprised to utter a word.

"Going to leave the farm!" he repeated at last. "Sarah, you must be dreaming."

Mrs. Howard shook her head sadly.

"I wish I were," she said. "No, Eli, it is true. George has made up his mind to leave us. I have noticed for months past that he seemed dissatisfied and restless, and since you sold Vixen he has grumbled a great deal about the work and the dullness of his life. And today I heard him say to Jasper Flint that he would not be here a month from now; that he had had enough of farm life and intended to leave; and if we refused our consent to it he would run away and take his chances."

"We'll see about that," said the farmer angrily, "Consent to it! I rather think not! I won't consider it for a moment. What would he be worth a year from now if I let him go? He'd fall in with all sorts of rascals in the city, and get us all into trouble. Besides, I need him here. It'll be ten years at least before Harry can take his place, and he's got to stay if I have to tie him down."

"Why don't you make him want to stay, Eli?" asked the gentle voice of his sister-in-law.

"If he's got the city fever on him, all the talking in the world wouldn't do any good," rejoined the farmer. "He would not listen to a word."

"Don't let him ever suspect that you are aware of his desire to leave you. Try a new plan, Eli, a plan I have been thinking of all day."

"The best plan I know of is to tell him my mind freely, without any beating about the bush; and the sooner it's done the better."

"Now, Eli, don't be above taking a woman's advice. Let me tell you how to deal with George. I have been here three months now, and have taken a deep interest in the boy. I have seen his dissatisfaction, and recognized the cause. I have heard him talking to Jasper Flint more than once, and only yesterday I heard him say that if he went to the city what he earned would be his own, but here he worked from dawn to dark, and was no better off at the end of the year than at the beginning. He said that Tom Blythe, who is in a grocery store in the city, gets twelve dollars a week, and Tom is only seventeen. Now, if you want George to stay on the farm, give him an interest in it Eli. He is eighteen years old, and has worked faithfully for you ever since he could talk plain. He has had his food and lodging, and two suits of clothes a year, to be sure, but all he actually owns is that collie dog which is always at his heels. You even sold the only horse you had that was fit for the saddle. And George was extraordinarily fond of Vixen."

"It seemed a pity to keep a horse that no one but George ever rode," said the farmer, "and she was too light for work. I'm a poor man, Hester, and can't afford playthings for my children."

"You can better afford to keep an extra horse than to have your son leave you, Eli. Whom could you get who would take the interest in the work that George has? You have thought it only right that George should do his share towards running the farm, and have considered your duty done in giving him a home. You are disposed to think him ungrateful because he wants to leave you now that every year makes his services more valuable. But the boy is ambitious, and is not satisfied to travel in a circle. He wants to make some headway. And it is only natural."

The farmer leaned his head on his hand, a look of deep thought on his grave, weather-beaten face. His gentle sister-in-law's plain speaking had given rise to thoughts which had never before entered his mind.

"I believe you're more than half right, Hester," he said at last. "I'll think it all over tonight and make up my mind what to do. I'd be lost here without George, and he shan't leave the farm if I can help it."

"Force won't keep him, Eli, remember that," said Mrs. Lucas; feeling that she had said enough, folded up her work, and taking a lamp from a shelf by the stove went up stairs to her own room.

Just at daybreak she was roused from a sound sleep by the sound of horse's hoofs in the yard and looking out of the window she saw Eli trotting away on old Roan.

"Where can he be going at this hour?" she thought.

When she went down stairs at six o'clock, George was standing by the kitchen table, having just come in with two full pails of milk. His face wore a discontented unhappy look, and he merely nodded in return for his aunt's cheery "Good morning."

A few minutes later his father entered, but George who had gone to one of the windows, and was looking out dejectedly, did not even glance up.

You were out early, Eli, said Mrs. Lucas. "I heard you ride away at daybreak."

"Yes, I went to Pine Ridge on a matter of business."

"That's where you sold Vixen, papa, isn't it?" said little Harry, and Mrs. Lucas saw a quiver pass over George's face as the child spoke.

"Yes, my boy. I sold Vixen to Lawyer Stanley. George," turning to his son, "I've made up my mind to part with that fifty-acre lot by the river. What do you think of that?"

"Of course you are to get a good price for it, sir," said the young man indifferently. "It's the best piece of land you have."

"But I haven't sold it. I am going to give it away."

"Give it away!" repeated George, roused out of his indifference, and staring at his father as if he thought he had not heard aright.

"Yes, deed it over every inch of it, to some one I think a great deal of, and who deserves it," laying his hand on his son's shoulder, and his voice breaking a little. "I am going to give it to my son, George Harewood, to have and to hold, as he sees fit, without question or advice."

"To me! You intend to give that fifty acres to me, father?"

"Yes, my boy, and with my whole heart. You've been a good son, George, and I only wish I was able to do more for you. But I am not a rich man, as you know, and I have your mother and the three little ones to provide for, too. Still, I want you to have a start, and this fifty-acre lot will yield a handsome profit. You can have three days a week to call your own, and that will give you a chance to work it, and if you choose to break in that pair of young oxen I bought the other day from Bagley, you can have them for your trouble."

"This—this seems too much, sir," stammered George. "I don't know how to thank you."

"Too much! Then I don't know what you'll say to this," and the farmer took his son by the arm and led him out on the porch. "There's another present for you, my boy."

"Vixen!" The word came from George's lips with a long sigh of joy, and with one bound he was at the side of the little black mare he had thought never to see again, and had both arms about her neck. "Oh, father, I'd rather have Vixen than anything else in this world."

And he buried his face in the pretty creature's mane, and in spite of his eighteen years, fairly broke down and sobbed aloud.

That ended George's desire to leave the farm. He was never again heard to mention the subject, and he grumbled no more about the hard work and the monotony of his life, but in every way tried to show his appreciation of his father's kindness.

In fact, Eli Harewood was won't to say occasionally in confidence to his wife that he had reason to bless his sister-in-law for her good advice, and that he owed it to her that he had a stalwart arm to lean on in his advancing years.

But George never knew to what he owed the change in his fortunes.—New England Farmer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 2.

"Our country is the world; our countrymen are all mankind." Embodied within the precincts of that sentiment are the best influences of modern Christianity spreading far and near, one might almost say throughout all the world, the magnificent precepts of humanity and the humanizing teachings of our modern educational facilities, striving ever to knit the opposing forces of the human race into one vast brotherhood. Endorsing this sentiment, believing in its utility, as we do, for the furtherance of those purposes which it may be said to uphold, we are, yet, oft times assailed with the thought that the country in which we live, so vast in its territory, so mighty in its resources, so far-reaching in its government, is well worthy the admiration of every clime, not undeserving a thrill of national pride in your heart and mine, when we pause in the rush and turmoil of everyday life, and remember that this fair land, rich in its natural superiority over other lands, is our country. A long digression, do you say? Let us tell you of the varied scenes that called forth these thoughts of our nation's greatness.

Early Monday morning, July 13, the editorial delegation were busily engaged in packing valises, bags, etc., preparatory to leaving our lakeside "home" and bidding it a farewell, not unmixed with a sense of homage, at the greatness which confronted us on every hand and which went in one vast aggregation to form the city of Chicago. Our visit had been very pleasant, although of short duration, and we left much there unseen by us upon which to construct another excursion to that metropolitan wonder of the western hemisphere.

Amid the confusion incident to travel, the shouts of the railroad porter, the sonorious "All aboard," of the conductor, the clang of the bell, the scream of the whistle, with a snort and a roar, the iron horse plunged forward with the animation of life and once more we were rushing on.

We left from the Chicago and Northwestern station, in a train of palace sleeping cars specially provided for the editors and their ladies. The railroad station just mentioned is a marvel in more ways than one and in it a vast business is done each day, the passenger traffic in twenty-four hours seldom going below 25,000 persons.

Our journey was commenced at 9 o'clock and after three hours of rapid riding the train came to a stop in the "cream city of the lakes"—Milwaukee. As it was raining when we arrived at this city, and as our stay was limited, our opportunities to examine its variety of pleasing features, or its polyhedral monster, through which it has become famous from sea to sea, and with which it floods all our large cities with what is called a superior quality of lager beer, were small. The breweries of Milwaukee are vast in their construction and wield a mighty influence on the city in its commercial relations. That the editors might have an opportunity to test the excellence of lager beer in general, and of Milwaukee beer in particular, thirty cases or more of Pabst's best quality were placed in the baggage car during our short stop. Some small souvenir bottles were presented to the ladies of our party, as well.

Again we were off and again, after about an hour's ride, we came to a halt; this time in the town of Waukesha. Our sojourn here was limited to three hours. Our party was met at the railroad station by a deputation of the citizens in carriages, who had made preparations extraordinary in behalf of the visiting "quill drivers," who, with their ladies, were conveyed through the fine, shady streets of this beautiful summer resort to the Fountain Spring House, which is a structure well supplied with all modern improvements, and is fully equipped and has ample room for the accommodation of 500 guests. There are 155 acres of ground surrounding, and belonging to the hotel, which are laid out in avenues, with shaded plank walks, the latter extending to a total length of about three miles. J. M. Lee, who in winter operates some of the largest and finest winter resort hotels in Florida, has the management of this attractive house.

Waukesha is sometimes mentioned as the Saratoga of the west, having a wide-spread renown in consequence of its mineral springs. Here the fashion, the wealth, the beauty and the "five hundred" of the west congregate and revel in the pleasures of sweet vacation time. Known throughout a large portion of the west as the place above all other places in Wisconsin, in point of natural beauty, it is not strange that people flock to it by thousands. The facilities for carriage and horse back riding are unexcelled; the water of the springs is of crystal clearness, and is without the offensive qualities found in the medicinal waters of other springs. We could have increased our stay at this delightful place to many times its length, for the people were charming hosts and their unbounded hospitality was an invitation in itself to prolong our visit.

We said "good bye," and went dashing on to Madison, the capital of the state. Here, by special invitation, we made a stop of several hours. Here we had another specimen of western hospitality which only added to our respect for that section of our country. Madison is a beautiful spot upon the earth, situated between five lakes, and having a population of 11,000. Upon our arrival we found several small steamboats were all prepared for our embarkation. A band of music was under orders to accompany us, and as the sweet strains rolled out over the waters, as our craft steamed along with its gentle undulations so suggestive of a lull in the mad rush of nineteenth century existence, we each and all enjoyed it with a deep sense of appreciation.

Our party, owing to its unusually large numbers had been divided up and each division assigned to a different hotel, and after the disposal of tea at the several hotels we all accepted of a cordial invitation to visit the capitol.

Here in a blaze of glory, with colors flying, bands playing, orators speaking, we gazed upon the structure from out the doors of which is issued the legislative law of the great Commonwealth of Wisconsin. The grounds forming the environment of the State House were beautifully and artistically illuminated with Japanese lanterns. Inside the great building a wave of music, both vocal and instrumental contributed very materially to the enjoyment of the great concourse of people present. A speech by Gov. Peck was one of the features of the evening. Speaking was participated in by the Mayor and citizens of Madison, and also by delegates from the visiting editors.

Thousands of people assembled to look upon the men whose life study is the never ending improvement of American Journalism, to listen to the charming music, and to hear the stirring addresses. Verily, it was a grand, good time and a night that we shall long remember.

The band played "Annie Laurie," "We've been there before," and as our train rolled out of the depot, at 11 P. M., en route for St. Paul, there came faintly to our ears the fast dying sound of a regimental band discoursing in the language of music of the "land that is fairer than day."

[From the Garden and Forest.]

"The Massachusetts Forest."

It is remarkable how little the population of our great cities often know of prominent and important features of the landscape close at hand. A notable instance of this is to be found in the beautiful range of the Blue Hills, near Boston. These hills are the highest elevations in eastern Massachusetts, and are the only eminence of a distinctively mountainous character near the Atlantic coast-line of the United States south of Mount Agamenticus, near Kittery, in Maine. The highest summit is known as the "Big Blue," and is the westernmost of the range, where stands the stone tower of the Rotch Meteorological Observatory, a privately endowed institution, which is performing a valuable scientific service. This summit is 635 feet above the sea-level, but being so near the ocean that altitude shows for its full value, giving an appearance of height greater than that often possessed by inland elevations very much superior.

* * * * *

The Blue Hills are familiar to thousands at a distance, and very many who have thus gazed in delighted admiration have been filled with the curious longing, that generally arises at such times, to know them close at hand and gaze from their summits over the widespreading landscape that must thence be disclosed. But of those thousands very few have ever visited the spot, although the hills are, indeed, a favorite excursion-ground for many nature lovers—like the members of the Appalachian Club, for instance. It would be thought, however, that a range of hills like this, close to a great city, would long since have become popular and celebrated as a pleasure-resort, as they certainly would in the neighborhood of a European metropolis.

The views from these summits are remarkably far-reaching and varied. They embrace a great extent of coast and inland scenery: the blue sea indenting the shores, meandering rivers, wide meadows and plains, clustering towns, forest expansions, hilly undulations, and the lofty peaks of far-away mountains—Monadnock and Wachusett, with other ranges more distant. To the northward lies the great city, spreading until its mass of buildings is lost beyond the hills which they cover. Its noise is hushed, its bustle not apparent save in the smoky streamers that float like dusky pennants in the air. One feels no sense of the swarming multitudes with their manifold occupations, burdens and cares, concentrated in that space which, though so limited in comparison with the vast encircling horizon, holds a third of the population of the next to the most densely populated state in the Union. To the southward, however, the contrast to the city is impressive. Save for a peeping spire, or a distant town that seems but a wee cluster of houses, seen at intervals, the earth's surface appears as a vast wilderness, almost as unbroken as it must have looked when the eye of a white man first gazed from these hill tops.

* * * * *

The air on these hill-tops is like that of the mountains, pure and bracing, for the winds sweep freely from all sides. Here would be an ideal place for a great sanitarium, for close-at-hand people of limited means, who cannot afford long journeys, would find all the attractions of air and scenery for which many are accustomed to travel hundreds of miles.

* * * * *

The Blue Hill range is chiefly in Milton, though a large portion lies in Canton, the next town to the southward, and in the city of Quincy, to the eastward. It is not generally known that it is to these hills that the commonwealth of Massachusetts owes its name. The country about the bay was called by the Indians living hereabout "Massachusetts," a word which in the Algonquin tongue literally means "the Great Hills Place." Thus it was that Massachusetts Bay received the name; thence the colony and province of Massachusetts Bay, and finally the commonwealth of Massachusetts. It seems appropriate that the last remnant of the Indians hereabout, the Ponkapog tribe, lived on the southerly verge of these hills at the place that still bears their name, and where possibly some of their descendants may yet be found absorbed in the rural population of the neighborhood.

Even merely for the sake of commemorating the origin of the name of the great state from which has arisen the glorious fabric of our mighty republic, with its free institutions—aside from the remarkable beauty and picturesque character of the region—it would seem to be extremely desirable that this noble range, which thus gave Massachusetts its name, should in some way be forever dedicated to public uses. The best way to accomplish this end would seem to be for the state to take the entire region occupied by the hills, which is still for the greater part in a wild, woodland state, and make a permanent forest reservation of it. "The Massachusetts Forest" would be an exceedingly appropriate name for the place.

It would require a special legislative act for the purpose. Action under the Public Forest Law—under which, by the way, nothing has ever yet been done—would be hardly practicable, as it would be difficult to get the three communities in which the range lies to unite to this end. If the matter were properly brought before the legislature the patriotic purpose underlying the proposition, which should appeal to every true son of Massachusetts, ought to be sufficient to secure favorable action, to say nothing of the great benefit which would be conferred upon the entire state by the creation of so beautiful and valuable a public domain. Within sight of these hill-tops there lies more than half the population and more than half of the property value of this thickly peopled and rich commonwealth. The establishment of such a public forest would greatly advance the happiness and health of this population, and would thereby, in increasing the attractiveness of the region, correspondingly enhance its prosperity.

A special act, taking this region for the purpose, and providing the means for its administration and improvement, would, therefore, be necessary. It would probably be a good idea to place the domain in charge of the newly created society called "The Trustees for the Preservation of Beautiful and Historic Places." The task could be entrusted to no more willing and capable hands.

The cost would not be great. The land is rough and of comparatively little value. Much of it would probably be given by the owners for such a purpose, as was the case with the Great Woods of Lynn. The rest could be obtained at low figures, either by ordinary purchase or under the right of eminent domain.

The improvement of a tract of such a nature would be comparatively inexpensive also. The most that would be needed would be to protect it from fires and other devastations, and to secure a forest-growth where desirable. Then a system of good roads, winding along the slopes, with vistas opening out through the trees here and there, and with branches to the summits, should be created. This system, connecting with the nearest railway points, would render the range easily accessible to the great population of the city and of the entire surrounding region. It would form one of the most beautiful drives, and a service of popular conveyances could be arranged for at cheap rates that would take passengers from one end of the range to the other, going by one railway route and returning by another. A round-trip ticket, covering the entire excursion, would bring it within the means of the multitude.

Favorable sites for hotels, sanitariums, restaurants, etc., could be leased to the right parties, under proper conditions, and, possibly, these might be approached by lines of electric railway connecting with the suburban services of the steam lines. With such conveniences these institutions could not fail to be liberally patronized, with a long season, lasting from springtime well into the autumn.

By all means, then, let us have our "Massachusetts Forest." To that end I would suggest that persons naturally interested in bringing it about—such as the members of the Trustees for the Preservation of Beautiful and Historic Places, or of the Appalachian Club—take the matter definitely in hand, inform themselves as thoroughly as possible on the subject, including the character and conditions of the region, and unite in bringing it to the attention of the next General Court of Massachusetts.

SYLVESTER BAXTER.

For the Patriot.

New York Letter.

August is a trying month. There is nothing august about it, for it is a torpid, tame and tepid period of the year, soft and sodden. The dog star reigns, the sky rains almost every day and fogs abound. Things grow sticky and moldy. It is a lonely month. Everybody who can get away is supposed to be out of town. The portals of the big brown stone houses are boarded up, the stoop and area unswept and an air of neglect declares the fact that nobody is at home. It is a hard month for the news gatherer. It is said that moral responsibility ceases with the mercury in the eighties. Certainly interest ceases in reciprocity, tariff reform and seal fisheries, in home rule and second term probabilities.

Yet, on the other hand, it is strange that thousands flock to summer schools by the hillside and the seashore to study philosophy, physics, Hebrew and what not. Tired out teachers who ought to forget their text books are giving or receiving courses of instruction in the higher branches of university instruction. The most ambitious programmes are issued. One school tries to outdo another. Real estate speculation, however, are mixed up with summer schools and camp meetings. It is not difficult to see how thorougly the latter are made to advertise the former. I attended an international medical congress, so called, a few weeks since on Staten island, where a new park has been opened. Continuous meetings of all sorts are held all summer. Stereopticon shows, gold medal contests, vocal music, humorists, converted minstrels and pugilists have been drawing crowds and $80,000 worth of building lots have been sold. Another park, not far away, adjoining Ocean Grove, sends me its pamphlet of educational advantages with portraits of the pundits that preside. You would almost think yourself in Berlin or Vienna to read the list of titled teachers and the elaborate list of studies pursued. It makes one tired to see the work laid out for this month, of all the year the least desirable for continuous mental activity.

A letter received last evening from my colleague in Canton, Dr. Kerr of the Presbyterian Hospital, says that the few foreigners there are formed into a military company for defense and are drilling. The consuls are vigilant and efforts to disturb the peace have been kept down, but foreigners are warned to be cautious. Exaggerated reports have been sent to this country and to Europe. France tells China that if her officials are not able to protect foreigners, the allied powers will take the matter into their own hands. This threat may come from France with better grace than from the United States, for the Romish priests have had more trouble than we; moreover, our treatment of Chinese in the States has been so ungenerous that retaliation might anytime be expected in China.

The tragic deaths of Rev. W. J. White and daughter of Macao, who were about to return to China, have awakened wide sympathy. If these deaths lead to long delayed legislation in regard to the crossing at grade by railroad lines, the tragedy will not be wholly fruitless in good results. A lawyer has been desired to draw up such a law. It is time that the slaughter of people was stopped and the sanctity of human life regarded. Thousands are killed at unguarded crossings. What is everybody's business is nobody's and so the long suffering public silently bear the burden and peril year after year. I was a guest of the White's at Christmas, 1889, in Macao.

A half century ago 170 passengers perished by the burning of the Lexington on Long Island sound. At about the same spot a steamer crowded with 1300 people took fire last week, one night. For an hour there was a prospect of another fearful catastrophe. The captain and crew finally conquered the flames and the steamer reached Bridgeport in safety.

George Francis Train has about thirty subscribers to his proposed excursion round the globe in forty days—not forty minutes, as Puck says in Midsummer's Night Dream. Is Train deranged? well, I should say that he never was properly arranged.

Illumination at Houghs Neck.

In response to a call issued by the illumination executive committee of 1890, a number of the residents met Thursday evening to take definite action for a grand illumination for the season of 1891.

Mr. James Murray called the meeting to order at 8 P. M. with thirteen in attendance. It was voted to have an illumination on Thursday, Aug. 27, and an executive committe was elected consisting of Mr. Thomas Downey, Jr., as chairman, Mr. E. H. Brazer as secretary and treasurer and Mr. Arthur Wyman.

The meeting appointed Mr. James Murray as a committee to wait on the commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club to solicit their co-operation, and also tendered a unanimous vote of thanks to last year's committee for their efficient services, having paid all expenses with $5 remaining towards this year. It was also voted that the executive committee appoint solicitors for this year's expenses. The meeting then adjourned till Saturday, Aug. 15, at 7.30 P. M.

Fountain Nearly Completed.

A pleasant word and check for $50 have been received for the fountain from Messrs. Churchill & Hitchcock.

The box given by Mrs. Theophilus King, and placed on the lamp post near the stone trough in the Square, has commenced to gather nickels towards paying for the beautiful new fountain. It is hoped all persons, especially children, who cannot afford to give dollars, will put in their pennies, so that all can say with pride and honor that they gave something towards the beautiful granite fountain.

Have all the teamsters and others who have had the pleasure of watering their horses at the old trough given something toward the new one? It is much larger and more convenient than the old one, and will give all travelers a chance to get a cool and refreshing drink in the summer, as well as their horses.

The Treasurer of the Association writes: "A great many things are necessary before the fountain is finished, and passed from the society's hands to the city's care. No contract has been made for a dipper and chain. All cost money. Who will donate this? We do not want our horses to go one day without water, while the grounds are being graded and the old trough moved. One must realize how much care and thought as well as money come in as factors to accomplish this.

"Sunday 5 cents were deposited in the box at the trough; Monday 87 cents; Tuesday 97 cents. Please add one nickel every time your horses stop there. There are many items of cost at the last not before thought of. There are some subscriptions not yet paid in which should be at once.

"The contract calls for $5,888; architects, $588; plumbing, $200; well, $100.75, and already nearly $100 has been paid out for surveys, plans, printing, correspondence and incidentals; making a total of $6876 for entire cost.

"A few bills may possibly come at the last, but as far as we know only $250 more will be needed. There is no touch of clumsiness in the fountain although it is so massive. It ought to appeal to all artistic tastes, although many may have expected something fanciful or more ornamental. Why can we not have a bit of elegant landscape in the Square, by driving around the fountain instead of across the grounds, taking down part of the chains, sodding all and having seats placed at intervals. A few more trees, some patches of flowers can be added, and after a week the few extra seconds of life given in driving to the station will be forgotten while the eye is fed by something beautiful.

The Summer Bachelors.

Last Wednesday evening Mr. A. G. Olney of Wollaston entertained his fellow sufferers, the summer bachelors, whose better halves have temporarily hid themselves away, and his residence was the scene of a gay but decorious gathering of sad eyed bucks who endeavored to find congenial solace in unified misery. Despite the absence of the "other side of the house" the evening was passed very pleasantly.

Mr. Marsden's fine collection of birds and "gunning" affording a prolific theme of discussion. Messrs. H. T. Whitman and Alphonse Williams were the "liars" of the party, their wives having returned a few days previous; and had it not been for the vivacious conversation of these gentlemen, the evening might have been passed in rigid solemnity. As it was Mr. Olney's guests enjoyed a very agreeable evening, that gentleman insisting that the party should disperse at an early hour, and ere midnight struck, the disconsolate "bachelors" had returned to beds that bore terrible evidences of the absence of feminine hands, which were not there to deftly turn the disordered counterpane or pillow sham into a picture of snowy lovliness. Among those present were H. T. Whitman, Q. A. Faunce, H. A. Jones, H. W. Marsden, A. P. Gardner, R. F. Ross, Alphonse Williams and C. A. Stevens.

Workingmen's Train.

Mayor Fairbanks had a conference with General Manager Kendrick of the Old Colony, Thursday, regarding the running of a workingmen's train, or the reduction of the fares on specified trains, to and from Boston, between Quincy Adams, Quincy, Wollaston and Atlantic.

Mr. Kendrick agreed to sell fifteen tickets for a dollar between these stations and Boston. These tickets are good only on the train which leaves Quincy at 6.13 in the morning and leaves Boston at 6.30. P.M. This goes into effect in a few days.

Fires.

The alarm Monday afternoon at 1.45 from box 23, was occasioned by the shingles on the roof of a wooden two story building, situated in the rear of James R. Wild's blacksmith's shop, catching on fire from sparks from the blacksmith's shop.

The firemen were soon on the spot and quickly extinguished the flames; the damage being slight. The building is owned by Henry H. Faxon, Esq.

The overturning of an oil stove in a new house on Kemper street, Wollaston Park, owned and occupied by Theo. Gahm, caused the alarm from box 56 at 9.10 o'clock on Thursday. Neighbors rushed in and threw the stove out doors and by that time the department had arrived and soon had the fire out. The kitchen was sheathed with hard wood which was such blistered in a manner as will have to be replaced. One hundred dollars will probably cover the loss; insured.

PERSONAL. Mr. J. Irving Crowell, formerly of Quincy, has returned to Massachusetts after several years sojourn in California, with his health nearly regained, and is conducting the affairs of the New England and California Fruit Land Company; the Boston office being at 19 Milk street. It will be remembered that Mr. Crowell was a victim of an Old Colony railroad accident at South Boston, and his many friends in this vicinity will be much pleased to learn of his renewed physical condition as well as of his business good fortune.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mr. C. Frank Hardwick is in New York on business.

Misses Margaret and Sarah Garrity have gone to Old Orchard for three weeks.

Mr. Henry R. Holden is at Harpswell, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Newcomb are in New Hampshire.

The stone work on the new fountain is practically completed.

Now is the time to look for the August meteors.

There was no session of Probate court in this city this month.

Mrs. Mary Pollock and daughter Madeline have gone to North Conway.

B. N. Adams and wife have returned from the mountains.

Miss Esther Ellis left Friday for Stockton Springs, Me.

Miss Katie Meaney has returned from a two weeks' visit at Medfield, Mass.

Mr. Eben W. Prescott of Spear street is visiting in New York city.

Mr. A. Darling and son William are visiting relatives at Mt. Vernon, Me.

Thomas V. Keating, employed at C. W. Guy's, is enjoying a week's vacation.

Mrs. A. G. Durgin with her three children and maid are at Harpswell, Me., for a month.

Chas. A. Feltis and Arthur Feltis, clerk at Saville & Jones, have gone to Gardner, Me., for two weeks.

Miss Hattie L. Burrell is spending her vacation with friends in New York city and vicinity.

Miss Cynthia G. Souther of Washington street is spending a few weeks at Gardner, Mass.

Mr. Bartholomew Bryant is visiting relatives and friends in Rockland and other places.

Miss Jennie C. Ellis and Miss Tena Cleaves are visiting at Stockton Springs, Me., for a month.

A goodly number from Atlantic, East Milton, and West Quincy have taken advantage of the reduced fares on certain trains to and from Boston, and many more, who now hold unexpired season tickets, will do likewise when their tickets run out.

Some of our street cars carry people the round trip these warm days. People finding that an easy and inexpensive way of getting cool. The Point route seems particularly favored with passengers who ride down and back, in the cool of the evening, and say it is most refreshing.

At the close of the regular meeting Wednesday of Granite Commandery, No. 36, Peoples' Five Year Benefit Order, all the members present adjourned to Wales' ice cream parlors and partook of refreshments.

The Sterling silver cups given by Vice-Commodore Sanborn in the first and third class of the Quincy Yacht Club, and won by the Erin in the first class and Rocket in the third class, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. C. A. Pettingill's jewelery store, Hancock street, Quincy.

The Catch-'em-all fishing club did not have as good luck Thursday as anticipated. The water was rough, which made it extremely unpleasant for the amateurs. However, the party, seven in number, hooked six fish, two of which were sculpins; and the local dealers in fish are heard drawing a long sigh of relief.

There has been an immense travel to Houghs Neck the past few weeks. Double that of last year at the same time. Last Sunday the road carried 2,021, and the average for the past three Sundays has been over two thousand. There has not been an accident of any kind and scarcely a slight mishap. Superintendent Morton has looked carefully after the road and it has paid well for the care. On and after Thursday last, the cars run every half hour during the afternoons.

Monday evening, about eight o'clock, a carriage containing two ladies and two gentlemen was being driven through School street, when the horse becoming frightened at an electric light which a workman had lowered to fix, jumped one side, throwing one of the ladies out, who struck on her head on the sidewalk, she was carried into Mrs. Follett's house where restoratives were applied; after which the party drove away without leaving their names.

Mr. Patrick Linehan a member of the school board of Hopkington, with his family are visiting friends at West Quincy. Mr. Linehan inspected the new Willard school building and was very much pleased with its construction. Also the method of heating and ventilating which is not excelled in any building.

William B. Barry has returned to West Quincy after a year's absence in the West.

Owing to the excessive heat Tuesday several of the stone sheds at West Quincy shut down.

The workmen employed at T. Mannix's and the Co-operative sheds took an outing at the beach Tuesday.

Rocket Sold.

An event of more than passing interest to the racing yachtsmen of the 18-foot class is the sale of the cat-rig Rocket, owned by Mr. H. M. Faxon of Quincy to Mr. F. Vogel, Jr., of Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Faxon purchased the boat of Benj. F. Bass her builder and designer, in 1886.

After two seasons of successful racing she was rebuilt and remodelled by A. B. Lelois of Quincy, and the sail-plan largely increased.

For five years, from the season of 1888 to date, she has stood at the head of her class with the remarkable record of 44 Firsts and 24 Seconds, out of 80 starts. The season of 1890 being an exceptionally brilliant one:—15 first, 9 seconds, once third and once disabled by squall out of 26 starts, winning the championship in the Quincy, Hull, Dorchester and Monatiquot Clubs; besides first prizes in city of Boston, open, July 4; Lynn Yacht Club, open, Sept. 1 and Savin Hill, open, Sept. 3.

More Burglaries.

The residence of the late Hon. Charles Francis Adams on Adams street was entered by burglars Friday Aug. 7, who gained entrance by forcing a window catch from the front piazza. Once inside they had everything their own way as the family were at Dudley Farm, Salem.

Everything was turned upside down, bureau drawers were ransacked and trunks burst open. The silverware was locked up in the safe which was not apparently tampered with.

Mr. Brooks Adams returned Saturday night, and reports all that was missing was some clothing, which the parties put on, leaving their old clothing in the house.

Band Concert.

The band concert to have been given in Merry Mount Park Wednesday evening was postponed owing to the rain.

It is now arranged that the City band will give a fine concert this evening, in the park, if it does not rain.

Extra cars will leave Quincy Centre for the park every ten minutes.

At the close of the concert extra cars will leave the park for Quincy Point, West Quincy and Atlantic.

Quincy Water Company.

Attorney General Pillsbury says that the returns of the Quincy Water Company, which were made at the State House in compliance with the lobby registration act, are defective.

In the bitter fight between the city and the water company, the expenses of the company are reported at $1819.89, of which Geo. D. Robinson got $643.29 and F. P. Goulding $397.52. The expenses of the city of Quincy in this fight were $500.

Another Game Today.

Last Saturday afternoon nines from the stone sheds of the J. N. White and Nichols Granite Company met on the Hall place grounds in a friendly game of ball, which resulted in a victory for the Nichols men in a score of 12 to 11; a full account of which appeared in Monday's LEDGER.

The White men were evidently not satisfied and another game has been arranged for today, Saturday, for $100 a side, and the championship of Quincy. Monday's LEDGER will tell you all about it.

Gov. Northend Signs the Bill.

Gov. Northend of Georgia Tuesday signed the bill to prohibit the sale of liquor within three miles of any church or school in the State, except in incorporated cities.

This means prohibition in Georgia as either schools or churches exist almost every three miles, and where they do not exist cheap structures will be erected at once.

—The new Ames building, corner of Washington and Court streets in Boston, so the Boston Globe says, "alone has increased the valuation $2,000,000. As the air is forty-five miles high, Boston has a lofty future in store for her. Set 'em up! There's plenty of available atmosphere left yet. The assessors will have to literally tax the "mansions in the skies" by and bye."

—Editor and Mrs. H. F. McQuillen of the Dedham Transcript, are spending two weeks at Grove Beach, Conn.

WOLLASTON.

The Mission Band connected with the Congregational church, Wollaston, held their annual picnic at the Pines, Wednesday, Aug. 4th. Thirty-two children and six of the parents being present. It was very enjoyable.

Mrs. John M. Call is dangerously sick.

Hotel Fire Escapes.

Some few weeks ago the state inspector of buildings visited Wollaston where he found that the Wollaston Hotel had not complied with the law which requires that all hotels shall have ropes in each room not provided with means of escape.

Mr. Merrill was notified he must comply with the law but refused to do so even after being threatened with arrest.

The inspector then put Mr. Merrill into court where he agreed if his case was continued four weeks he would put in the necessary appliances. This he has done, and was discharged on payment of costs.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Merrill, Mr. Ellis M. McTear, Miss Grace Merrill and Miss Nellie Cleary of Wollaston are at their Summer cottage at Brant Rock.

Miss Florence G. Roberts is passing a few weeks in New Brunswick.

A meeting was held at Perry's hall, Wednesday evening to take some action in regard to the running of a working men's train. The meeting was very successful. After a lively debate it organized as follows:

Chairmain,—E. L. Mitchell.
Secretary,—A. F. Hurd.
Committee on petition,—R. S. Jones, Wm. S. Waterhouse, Benj. King, Morris, Welsh.

George R. Prescott.

Wollaston has lost one of her well known and respected citizens in Mr. George R. Prescott, who died Thursday of enlargement of the heart. He has been in poor health for the past year.

Mr. Prescott was born in Holderness, New Hampshire, in 1835, and lived for years in Ashland.

In 1874 he moved to this state, settling in Wollaston.

He has been engaged for several years in the real estate business in Boston. He was a member of the Wollaston lodge, Knights of Honor, joining that lodge soon after its organization.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The funeral will be from his late residence on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The interment will be at the Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Monatiquot Yacht Club.

The fifth annual Ladies' Day of the Monatiquot Yacht Club was very successfully observed Thursday afternoon. At 3.45 a signal was given and the yachts sailed from the clubhouse down the Fore river and return, passing in review of Commodore Cavanagh on the Erin.

On return to the house an excellent supper was served in the banquet hall, which proved a pleasant and joyous feast.

During the evening there was a promenade concert and dancing. The clubhouse and yachts were illuminated, and there was a display of fireworks. The committee were Maj. E. C. Pierce, Commodore Cavanagh, W. H. Shaw, Francis H. Cowing and Charles G. Sheppard.

The boats and their guests were as follows:

Mortgagee's Sale.

PURSUANT to the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Herbert E. Coombs of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to Elizabeth P. Underwood of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, in said Commonwealth, dated May 28th, 1890, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 638, folio 365, for breach of the condition of said mortgage deed, will be sold by public auction on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, Sept. 8th, A. D. 1891, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular, the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, to wit:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Quincy, County of Norfolk and Commonwealth aforesaid, and bounded and described as follows: Easterly on Lot. No. 17 on plan made by L. Briggs & Co., dated April 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, 101 25-100 feet; southerly on Walker street, 71 1-20 feet; westerly on land of one Allen, 99 feet; and northerly on Lot No. 11 on said plan, 75 8-10 feet. Being Lot No. 13 on said plan and containing seven thousand three hundred and fifty (7350) square feet, being the same premises conveyed to Herbert E. Coombs by William H. Morse by deed dated April 22, 1886, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, libro 578, folio 9.

$300 to be paid in cash at time and place of sale. Other terms at sale or upon application to the auctioneer.

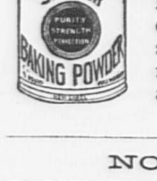
3 cups of flour, 1 tablespoonful of butter, ½ teaspoonful of salt, 2 cups of milk, 4 eggs whites and yolks beaten separately, 1 heaping teaspoonful of Cleveland's baking powder.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together twice, chop in the butter. Stir the beaten yolks into the milk and add the flour, then the frothed whites. Whip high and light and bake in cups in a quick oven.

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.



Hot biscuit made with Cleveland's baking powder may be enjoyed even by those of weak digestion. Cleveland's is the anti-dyspeptic leavening agent. The leaven comes from cream of tartar and soda, nothing else; no ammonia or alum.

Dedication.

The new Willard school building is now about completed and it is expected that the carpenters will be through this week. As the time draws near for its occupancy the question has been propounded whether or not its completion should not be recognized in some formal manner, and to obtain views on the matter the PATRIOT has interviewed several of West Quincy's citizens and here is what they say:

Representative Burke.

"It is an established precedent to have some kind of a dedication of a public building, and especially one that is to be used for educational purposes. It is also an established precedence that in order to have a grand dedication of this kind the building should be free from all incumbrances.

The letting of the contract and the dilatory manner in which the building has progressed is clear in the minds of our citizens, as the morning when they were aroused from their slumbers to find the old building going up in smoke. Their good patience has been thoroughly tried. Under the present circumstances, and in the manner and way of bringing it to completion from the very start to the time when the city had to take possession on account of its being let to parties that finally became embarrased in taking a contract below cost, it has turned out to be false economy from a financial standpoint.

As to the incumbrance on the building, I understand there are two or more citizens that will suffer on account of the financial embarrassment of the contractor in failing to complete his part of the work. In my opinion these citizens should be paid, either for the work done or material furnished. I think you would be unable to raise that enthusiasm that the people would naturally feel had it been brought to completion sooner, for it has tried their good patience.

But it seems necessary, after waiting so long, to have some dedicatory exercises in the way of turning the building over to the school committee. The officials of the city and school children might take a prominent part. Some of the men that knew the time honored Solomon Willard when they were boys should take part in the exercises. Also there could be a sketch given of Mr. Willard's life, and what educational benefits derived and what we hope to see accomplished in the new building.

The building should be thrown open to the public for inspection. For the people feel glad it is completed, and as for its history, it will long be remembered. I believe the citizens would like to see some kind of a dedication, nothing elaborate, but something plain, and leave aside all differences of opinion and the affair could be made a grand success.

The people should feel grateful to the owners of that ever will be remembered drift way in their kindness shown in signing their claim over to the city. For in the first order there was a clause which provided that the release should first be given without any expense to the city and these people were tried in the balance and not found wanting, for they signed the release and helped to push forward the building of a new school. I secured the release of drift-way August 9, 1889, and we owe our gratitude to the following persons: Mrs. Lyons, Messrs. Miller and Gline and the Conlon heirs.

T. L. Williams.

"Do not see any reason why there should be much, but we have every reason to feel glad at its completion. As a rule I like to see these improvements celebrated and you may count me in favor of recognizing its completion in some inexpensive manner. What would be my plan? Well, I would have a public meeting in the hall and have the city officials present. There would be speeches and have some one give a review of the Willard school from its foundation, also of its founder and what has been done by the school in the educational way. A few facts about the cost of the present building and what children it will accommodate, and if there is any graduate from that school who has achieved greatness, that they be enumerated, that it may be an example to the coming generation of children who will attend school there."

S. B. Little.

"The building should be dedicated in some manner, but do not believe in lavishing money to make a big spread, owing to the financial standing of the city, besides the unnecessary expense we have had in building it by not awarding the contract to responsible parties. The doors should be thrown open to pubiic inspection before it is occupied."

Postmaster Kimball.

"We are all glad that the building is at last completed and we ought to have a grand time. A proper programme would be a hard thing to fix upon, but I am in favor of celebrating in some manner."

The PATRIOT man interviewed a number of other well-known gentlemen at West Quincy and all seemed of the opinion that the completion should be recognized in some manner.

John Quincy Adams' Bible.

Charles D. Howard, the able editor of the Natick Citizen, an excellent suburban weekly, writes:

"As the Citizen editor writes this paragraph, there lies on the table before him an old Bible that was once the property of John Quincy Adams, and published in Oxford in 1795. It is the old King James version, printed in octavo form, and contains the apocryphal books of the old testament. It bears on many of its pages critical notes and references in the handwriting of Mr. Adams, who, it would seem, thought enough of it to give it a second binding, in which it now appears. It was purchased by its present owner at a second-hand bookstore in Washington, D. C."

Suburban Press Association.

The next meeting of the Suburban Press Association of New England will be held at South Framingham, Mass., today, to inspect the new office erected by Bro. McPherson.

The association has also accepted an invitation to visit Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge at his home at Nahant, on Monday, August 24th. Pleasant times are anticipated.

Sewerage Question.

As there is no more important subject before our citizens than the sewerage question, anything that can be said to enlighten our citizens is all-important at this time. In a few weeks our citizens will be called upon to vote whether they will accept of the sewer act. It is something that requires the best thought and intelligence of our people. We shall feel it a duty, therefore, to insert anything, either for or against the act, which we think will throw any light on the subject.

It appears from a lengthy and able editorial in the Boston Herald on Saturday, that the emptying of sewage in the harbor is not giving perfect satisfaction, although millions of dollars have been spent by that city. And in a few years, when Boston and the other cities and towns in this vicinity have double the population they have today, will it not be a big nuisance,—the emptying of all the sewerage into the bay? Read what the Herald says:

"The increased number of complaints made by those who reside on the shores of Massachusetts bay make it evident that our city government will soon have to consider the question of adopting some other means for the disposal of garbage than the wholesale dumping of it into the sea a few miles outside of Boston light. The theory upon which this practice rests is that if this waste matter is thrown into the ocean at a point a few miles distant from the land when the tide is on the ebb, this great water movement can be depended upon to carry the refuse far out to sea, where, by the action of the waves, it will become in time disintergrated and sink to the bottom. But this supposition seems to be only in part realized, for, while an ebb tide may take the refuse matter out to sea, a flood tide is likely to bring a considerable part of it back again. A north wind is quite apt to cause a part of it to lodge on the beaches and rocks of the South Shore, and a south wind carries an undesirable quantity of it to a lodgment on the North Shore, causing in this way quite as great a nuisance to the residents of these two districts as would be occasioned to the people of Boston if the garbage was thrown overboard in Boston harbor.

"If the matter is not promptly attended to by the municipal government, it is probable that the state board of health will be asked to interfere, or, failing of action through this authority, some of the interested town governments or the citizens of these places may endeavor to protect themselves by securing some form of legal injunction. It is sufficiently obvious that the convenience of the city government of Boston furnishes no justification for the creation of what is a nuisance to the citizens of neighboring towns; and if, as seems likely, the existence of this nuisance can be demonstrated, it would be well for our city government to consider what other methods it could adopt for the disposal of its refuse matter.

"During the last financial year the cost of thus disposing of garbage was $11,300, an amount considerable smaller, probably, than would be spent in disposing of it in any other manner. The most effective method is that which has been used in certain cities of the West of burning garbage and offal in furnaces specially prepared for the purpose, where the heat is so intense as to quickly reduce the material to ashes without the least trace of unpleasant odor. But it is probable that if this method was introduced into Boston, it might be necessary to be more careful in separating the different kinds of refuse matter, because the garbage now frequently includes material of an incombustible nature.

"If this system was adopted, it would be desirable on sanitary grounds to utilize these furnaces as a means of totally destroying the house offal of the city. In the last fiscal year the city obtained from the sale of its house offal nearly $31,000. This waste material was purchased by those who feed it to swine, and possibly also fowls raised upon farms. This form of disposition has the merit of economy, for not only does the city obtain a pretty fair revenue, but the purchasers of this offal, no doubt, get the food for their swine at very low prices. But it is open to serious doubt whether this economy is not more apparent than real.

* * * *

"Hogs fed on this decayed and decaying substance must of necessity be unhealthy; and, although few of us are aware of the places where the meat that we consume as food is produced, we believe that hardly any one would knowingly buy and eat pork, chickens, or even eggs, that were the products of a farm where the swine and fowls were fed upon city offal."

Personal.

Dr. George F. Brooks is having the most wonderful success in the treatment of old chronic medical cases from which some of our Quincy residents have suffered for years; and daily is adding many new friends to the host of very warm, devoted ones he has made in Quincy and Wollaston by the cures he has been able to effect for our citizens; and this, combined with his genial manners has made him deservedly popular, and a very great favorite with all classes of people.

He still continues to call on any sick person free the first visit who may leave their address at Durgin's well known drug store where he will daily call to get the names and addresses of any new patient who may desire to see him professionally.

Our churches should not fail to secure his valuable services as church organist and musical conductor, as he has had many years' experience in churches of all denominations in Boston, New York and Montreal, and has played the great organ at the noon concerts at Boston Music hall, and was leading tenor for many years of the Strakosch Grand Italian Opera.

Quincy Expressman Assaulted.

According to all accounts Harry Gallagher, manager of Gallagher's Quincy and Milton express, met with a rough experience at the hands of officers of Station 6, South Boston, last week.

Mr. Gallagher is a young man of excellent character but is unfortunately subject to convulsions which lasts but a few moments, and as he recovers the nature of his trouble makes him inclined to be ugly, whereas he naturally is of a very genial disposition.

Thursday afternoon while at South Boston he was attacked with his malady and fell in the street. One of the officers attached to Station 6, arrested him on the charge of drunkeness and took him to the police station; while there Gallagher came to and was doubtless ugly. Then the officer went for him using him unmercifully, breaking his nose in three places and otherwise injuring his head. His back and limbs did not escape, and when they released him at 5 o'clock he was badly used up.

He made his way to the street and hailing a carriage was brought home.

The case has been reported at headquarters and the young man's father intends to carry the matter into court.

The committee having charge of the Labor day parade for the Boston branch of the Granite Cutters' National Union report that the union will turn out 600 strong, under escort of the Quincy Granite Brass band. Delegations will also be present from Quincy, Milford, Cape Ann, Salem and other branches throughout the state.

Rev. Edward Beecher, who is eighty-eight years old, preached in Hartford last Sunday. He had to be assisted up the pulpit steps, and sat while preaching, but his voice was at times full and strong. His topic was on discerning the signs of the times.

HOUGHS NECK.

Mr. E. D. West and family of Milton Lower Mills have moved into their new house on Manet beach.

A little child belonging to Mrs. Wyman, tenting on Rogers street, Houghs Neck, had his feet badly burned by stepping on some stones that had been heated for a clambake Sunday. Dr. H. L. Dearing attended the little sufferer.

The second week in August, which means that greater part of the summer has gone, and in two weeks more many of the cottages will begin to pack their trunks and the exodus will have commenced and then instead of announcing the arrivals, it will be the departures, but meanwhile everything goes smoothly on, every cottage is taken and scarcely a "to let" sign can be seen.

The warm weather this week has brought large crowds to the Neck and the Manet Street railway has been carrying heavy freights, who have amused themselves along the beach and have helped to swell the coffers of the hotel keepers, which have been none too full this season and according to their reports not much money will be made, but "hang sorrows care will kill a cat," the world goes merrily on and what is their loss is some one else's gain.

Smelting parties are in order and several of the natives have made successful trips.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mansfield of Boston are at the Neversink.

John H. Dinegan and family are at the Monopole.

Miss Sarah O'Brien, of Randolph, is the guest of Mrs. Jane Dooley on Bell street.

Miss Mollie Webb is the guest of Monopole cottage.

Miss Minnie Kiley, of North Hampton, is the guest of Mrs. William Agnew at the Idlewild.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Nolan of the Beatrice have been entertaining some guests, among whom are Miss Annie Sullivan, Miss Nellie Mack, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Whitten, Dorchester, Miss Julia Hayes, Miss Ella Stetson, Mrs. P. F. Cassidy, Miss Minnie E. Keeler and Mrs. John Ward of Boston.

The yacht club house has been a favorite resort for members of the club this year, and parties have been there every evening.

The sale of the Rocket makes the fourth boat enrolled in the membership of the Quincy Yacht Club sold since the season opened. The others are Mabel, Capt. H. L. Rice; Latona, Capt. Elmer E. Munroe; and Undine, Capt. A. H. Doble.

The young men from Milton, who are at the Golden Rod, are to give a dance at the Casino Friday evening to some of their Milton and West Quincy friends.

J. C. Hobbs and family of Chelmsford are at the Lincoln cottage.

Capt. Smalley and family are here from the Cape with his new yacht Gypsy. She is a handsome craft and a fast sailer.

F. F. Bryant and family are domiciled in Vogel cottage.

Sandy McDonald and family and T. A. Walters and family are taking a cruise in the Alice.

Dr. Doble has sold the Undine to Capt. Driscoll of South Boston.

George Gould with a party of friends are at the Pine Tree cottage.

John Glover and family of Boston are at the Birds Nest.

Stanley Mears entertained a party from St. Louis Thursday.

Dr. Sylvester and family are camping near Mrs. Lapham's.

Quincy Yacht Club hop this evening at the Club House.

Mr. Brine and family and Mr. Chase and family of Hyde Park are in two of Pierce's cottages.

During the storm of Wednesday a sign was torn from Doble & Johnson's store and carried to the water's edge.

Timothy Smith of Dedham is to build another new cottage near his present one on Bell street.

John Brady and family of Brockton have moved into their new cottage.

The half-hour cars on the Manet street railway are evidently appreciated, judging from the number of passengers they carry.

Among those at the Loretto this week are:

Mrs. Currier, Miss Maud Currier, Rev. Fr. Tracy, Miss Tracy, Roxbury; Mr. Grant and Mr. Lewis, Boston; Miss Helen Crosby, Hyde Park; Miss Leonard and Miss Almeda, Charlestown; Mrs. Hugh Tolland and daughter, Boston Highlands; Misses Fox, Miss Cohen and Miss Cashman, Canton; Mr. K. Edgett, Milton; Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, Worcester; Miss Blance Armstrong, Boston Highlands.

Frank Goodhue and family and Edward White and family of Quincy are at the Seaweed cottage.

The Manet Land Company are improving that old pond back of the Loretto by filling it up with gravel.

MILTON.

James Daley, clerk at T. L. Pierce's store goes to Portland, Me., next week on his vacation.

J. B. Baxter has returned from a visit to Marlboro.

Miss Marie Page and Miss Jennie Beals of Fargo, Dakota, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gridley Beals. The young ladies have just returned from Germany where they have been studying.

N. C. Buck, of Adams street, had quite an experience last Sunday. Early in the morning a party from Hyde Park passed through Milton and one of the party stole two small flags from a tent in Mr. Buck's yard, more for the fun of it than anything else. That night on their way home they were stopped on Centre street by Mr. Buck and an officer, and satisfaction was demanded. Mr. Buck gave them the choice of paying $5, or being locked up. After some words they paid and left for home, at the same time saying they intended to have Mr. Buck arrested for using profane language.

Mrs. Effie L. Rhines, bookkeeper at Kemp & Tisdale's, is having a vacation.

Miss Grace Alden has returned home from her visit to Chicopee.

Selectman Simpson's son is improving and will be able to come home in two weeks.

Eugene Gallagher, James Gallagher, Thomas McKay, Frank Hart, Milton Hart, William Cole and Stephen Welsh, all of East Milton are rusticating at the Golden Rod cottage, Houghs Neck.

Mr. J. F. Chubbuck, of Dorchester, will conduct the Gospel meeting at Washington hall, East Milton, Sunday, at 3.30 o'clock. All invited.

Franklin Park.

This beautiful park, which Boston is spending money so freely upon, is attracting thousands of people. It is an easy drive from Quincy, and many of our citizens improve it. It is near Oakland Garden, Dorchester, well known to most of our readers.

Sunday was a lovely day, and it is estimated that upward of 16,000 visited the park.

One of the attractions is the drove of sheep which number about 170. When out on the field grazing they are under the charge of a shepherd and two dogs. The instinct of these dogs is something remarkable. As long as the sheep stay on the field where they belong, no attention is taken of them, but let one of them cross the path on to the lawn, the dogs, without a word being spoken to them, will instantly drive it back.

—Quincy Dyer's hardware store was burned at Hyde Park at 6.10 Tuesday morning. The cause was the explosion of a kerosene lamp. Mr. Dyer carries a stock valued at about $8,000, and it is more or less damaged. The insurance is $6,000.

Wednesday's Storm.

Wednesday was an unusual hot day and everybody was sighing for a cool breeze and early in the afternoon the black clouds on the horizon gave promise of something of a cooling nature. Just about 3 o'clock the sky suddenly grew dark and in a few moments the dust blew off the streets in great white clouds, which was quickly followed by a heavy rain which sent the water flowing down the gutters like a mill stream.

This heavy shower was accompanied by thunder and lightning that came so sharp and loud that the timid ones closed the blinds and kept away from the windows. The storm lasted but a short time when the sun again shone full as hot as ever.

While the storm did much injury in surrounding towns, Quincy fortunately escaped with but little damage.

The house owned and occupied by Thomas F. Keenan on South street, was struck by lightning; one of the blinds was torn from its fastening and three large panes of glass were smashed.

Mr. Keenan was just entering the yard when the crash came; he rushed up stairs, but no further damage was found.

Two Quincy young men had a narrow escape from drowning Wednesday. They were sailing near Slate island when the squall struck them and in an instant their boat was capsized. The young men clung to the boat and were shortly rescued from their perilous position by a passing tug boat.

A large tree in the old cemetery on Hancock street was shattered; also one in the rear of the Kidder house, West Quincy. A number of trees and limbs in other parts of the city were blown down, but no serious damage done.

The fire alarm wire became crossed with a Western Union Telegraph line, and the bells on the circuit were heard shortly after 5 o'clock striking out a message. The lightning entered the apparatus which works the automatic whistle and burnt that out and the Squantum line was also blown down. Chief Ripley and Electrician White were early on the line repairing, and it was in working order before dark.

At the telephone office the lightning played havoc and burnt out about half of their instruments, besides blowing down several of their lines.

At East Weymouth the dwelling-house of M. Shields and John Fraher was stuck by lightning Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Shields received a severe shock. The house was considerably damaged. The Weymouth water works office was also struck and the clerk prostrated. Considerable damage was done to fruit trees and crops. The house of Rev. A. P. Staples on Walnut street was also struck by lightning and damaged $75.

The dwelling of Mrs. Winkfield, on Shaw street, Braintree, was struck by lightning Wednesday afternoon. The house and furniture was considerably damaged, and Mrs. Winkfield received a severe shock to her nervous system.

The storm along the South Shore was very severe. Near Land Hills beach Scituate it seemed to put in extra force, and the wreckage is great. The first house in the path was Starr cottage, where nearly every pane of glass on the storm side was broken.

Sherman's store was the next building damaged. A heavy settee on the porch was taken up by the wind and carried over 100 feet. The front window was demolished. One of the corner posts upon which the building rests was knocked out, and the lamp post was blown down.

A boat lying on the beach belonging to Mr. Sherman was hurled 300 feet, smashing it into kindling wood.

A big rocking chair on the platform in front of Bates' cottage was whirled out into the bay.

Whiting's cottage and stable were both completely demolished, only a lot of broken timber remaining.

A small barn belonging to Mr. Vinal of Norwell was picked up bodily and carried by the wind about 300 feet and set squarely down, very little damaged.

A cottage owned by William Fairbainks of Rockland was blown over on its side wrecking it badly, and his barn was completely demolished.

An immense door on George Allen's barn was blown out into the harbor and found at night lodged against the breakwater.

Chimneys on the houses of Lot Phillips, Alphonso Damon, Dana Smith and John Spense were swept off close to the roofs.

A Mr. Clark and Mrs. Arthur Chamberlain and a child were injured during the temptest by being buried in ruins.

Every boat hauled up on the beach was smashed, and a camp of Indian basket-makers was prostrated and their belongings blown about in all directions.

A carriage belonging to Bert Williams was capsized and badly damaged.

The rain fell in torrents at Nantasket beach, and blinds, awnings, piazza roofs, chairs, etc., were hurled mercilessly about. There was a scampering to places of shelter by thousands of pleasure seekers. Ladies adopted the dress reform movement several weeks ahead of time. Several boats were overturned along the beach, and there were numerous narrow escapes from drowning.

Hull Championship Races.

The second championship races for the boats of the third, fourth, fifth and sixth classes of the Hull Yacht Club was sailed off the club house Saturday afternoon.

The regatta was sailed in light, variable winds, and was not particularly interesting.

The result of Saturday's races gives the championship to the Swordfish, Idler and Rocket in the third class keels, fourth class jib and mainsail, and sixth class, respectively, while the Torment and Pansy each hold a leg in the third class centreboards; the Egeria and Atala each a leg in the fifth class centreboards, and the Composite a leg in the fifth class keels.

Boston Valuation.

The Assessors of Boston completed their work Tuesday and find that the value of real estate in Boston is $650,238,375 and personal $204,827,739, making a total of $855,066,114, an increase of $33,040,014 over 1890.

The number of male polls is 132,845, and females 410. This is an increase of 6939 over 1890, and a loss of 4643 women.

The tax rate is $12.60 per $1000. In 1890 the rate was $13.30. It is lower this year than it has been for eleven years.

—The annual report of Mr. Charles E Dennett, grand scribe of the Sons of Temperance shows that organization to have 101 divisions and 6000 members in this state.

Mrs. Vesta Gates of Norwood died Tuesday at the age of 100 years, 4 months and 26 days. Funeral services were held from the residence in Norwood, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

District Court, Quincy.

Gustave A. Johnson, of Randolph, for keeping a liquor nuisance paid a fine of $50.

Henry H. Burrell, of East Weymouth, for disturbing the peace was sent to the House of Correction at Dedham for ninety days, from which he appealed.

Thomas Wilson for being a tramp at Milton, was sent to the State farm at Bridgewater for six months.

The liquors seized from Catherine Sullivan, of Weymouth, were forfeited to the Commonwealth.

Thursday was juvenile day in the District court, and the following cases were disposed of:

William Bennett, for larceny of cigars from McConnell, was fined $5.

Stephen Maccaro, for malicious mischief, was fined $5.

John F. Sullivan, for larceny of cigars from McConnell's fruit store, $5; and for larceny of peaches from Henry H. Faxon, was fined $5.

Jeremiah Conley, for malicious mischief, was fined $5; and for larceny was placed on probation.

Thomas Sullivan and John Sullivan, for larceny of peaches from Henry H. Faxon, were fined $7 each.

John Maguire, disturbing the peace at Quincy, was fined $8.

William J. Carroll of Randolph, for disturbing the peace, paid a fine of $6.

Luke Mulligan of Randolph, for disturbin the peace, paid a fine of $6.

Arrest of the Burglars.

Officer Furnald has succeeded in running down the gang of burglars who broke into the hardware store of Charles H. Jenness, on Hancock street, last week.

It seems that the break was made by a gang of young thieves whose average age is thirteen years, from the North end, Boston.

The gang numbers six, and they went to Nantasket Wednesday, and stealing a team drove to Egypt, where they entered four unoccupied houses, and started back toward Nantasket in the evening, going over Jerusalem road, where they amused themselves by breaking the electric light globes. The police got on to them and chased them to the beach where they let the boys go.

On the way to Boston the boys stopped over in Quincy and burglarized Jenness' hardware store. They then hung around Quincy until morning, when they went to Boston on the cars.

Two of the boys were arrested and have confessed, implicating their companions.

The Boston officers have several complaints against the gang.

Nantasket.

There were immense crowds at the beaches Sunday. It was the biggest day for the hotels that they have had this season. The beaches were crowded as seldom seen. The cool and cloudy afternoon made it attractive for the visitors. It is estimated that over thirty thousand were at Nantasket, and the trains on the Old Colony were packed to their utmost, many being obliged to stand on the platforms. There was an unusually large number from Quincy.

The concert by Brooks' New York military band and Martland's Brockton band were unusually attractive, and the concert solos of Walter Emerson on his gold cornet recently presented to him by Dan Godfrey of London, was listened to with delight.

At 3 50 the two bands consolidated under the direction of Ellis Brooks, when the dramatic symphony, known as the unfinished symphony, by Schubert, was rendered. The first movement only was given.

During the fifth concert at 6.45, Brooks' band rendered a number entitled the "Soloists' Contest," which was well received.

Look Out for Prowlers.

Last Saturday night, about 12 o'clock, a team drove along Washington street and stopped in front of No. 136, when a man got out with a basket in his hand and walked through the yard toward a house occupied by Maynard H. Tinkham. Mrs. C. H. Abbott, who occupies the other part of the house, not feeling very well, had not retired, and hearing footsteps went to the window and enquired what was wanted. The man answered that he had something to sell and immediately left.

On the following night some one stole two of Mr. Tinkham's pigeons, which were valued at $14. It is supposed the theft was committed by the same party who was about Saturday night.

Hull Yacht Club.

A german was given in the Hull Yacht club house Wednesday evening and was enjoyed by about thirty couples. The Boston Cadet band furnished the music.

The celebration of ladies' day, together with the formal opening of the new club house, will take place on Wednesday, 19th inst., when his excellency Gov. Russell and staff are expected to be present. The exercises will begin in the forenoon at 11 o'clock and will end with a grand hop in the club house in the evening.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly

☞ TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE. ☜

WHY IS THE

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

How to Oil a Harness.

Take the harness to a room where you can unbuckle it, and separate the parts completely. Wash each part well in lukewarm water to which has been added a little potash. Scrub well with a brush until all grease and dust has been removed. Work the pieces well under the hand until they become supple. It won't do to oil until it becomes so. Let the parts dry in a place where they will do so slowly. When just moist, oil. For this purpose use cod liver oil. It is the best for the purpose. Besides, if you were to use neat's foot, the rats and mice are your enemies at once, while they will not touch a harness oiled with cod liver oil. Give a good dose of oil to all parts, then hang up to dry. When dry rub well with a soft rag.

SINGULAR DEATH. The death of W. E. McCutcheon which occurred in Verona, Pa., July 27th, was caused by a bean that was not thoroughly cooked which he ate the day preceding. He complained of not feeling well and the intestines seemed to be clogged and in spite of prompt medical aid he sank rapidly.

The post mortem revealed the fact that a bean which had not been thoroughly cooked which had escaped mastication, had passed into the vermiform appendix, a portion of the human system for which anatomists have failed to find a useful purpose. It could go no further, and there it produced inflammation and gangrene. No medicine known to man could have prevented his death.

The grip in Labrador has brought the people to the verge of starvation.

SATURDAY, AUG. 15, 1891.

The Song of the Thrush.

BY C. P. CRANCH.

"Ah, will you, will you," sings the thrush,
Deep in his shady cover,
"Ah, will you will you live with me,
And be my friend and lover?

"With woodland scents and sounds all day,
And music we will fill you.
For concerts we will charge no fee,
Ah, will you—will you—will you?"

Dear hidden bird, full oft I've heard
Your pleasant invitation;
And searched for you amid your boughs
With fruitless observation.

Too near and yet too far you seem
For mortals to discover.
You call me, yet I cannot come,—
And am your hopeless lover.

Like all that is too sweet and fair,
I never may come near you.
Your songs fill all the summer air;
I only sit and hear you.

St. Nicholas.

Household Receipts.

COLLEGE PUDDING. One pint soft bread crumbs, one pint warm milk, one tablespoon soft butter, two tablespoons sugar, two tablespoons cream, one saltspoon salt, one-half nutmeg, two eggs, one cup currants. Use the inside of a loaf of baker's bread; soak it half an hour in the milk. Dry the currants in a little flour. Mix in the order given, and bake in custard cups. Stir once or twice while baking to prevent the currants from settling.

SPONGE GINGERBREAD. Three cups of flour, one cup molasses, one of sugar, one of sour milk, one heaping tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful saleratus, two teaspoonfuls ginger, one of cinnamon.

PRESSED BEEF. Boil a neck piece or any of the poorer portions of beef until very tender, and chop to a jelly; add celery, season with salt and pepper, press in a mould, and slice cold.

ONE OF THE very best applications for the bites of mosquitoes and fleas, also for other eruptions attended with intense itchings, is menthol in alcohol, one part to ten. This is very cooling and immediately effectual. It is also an excellent lotion for application to the forehead and temples in headache, often at once subduing the same.

GINGER SNAPS. One large cup of butter and lard mixed; one coffee cup of sugar; one cup of molasses; one-half cup of water; one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one tablespoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of cloves, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water. Flour for a pretty stiff dough. Roll out thin and bake quickly. They keep well.

RICE PUDDING WITH FRUIT. Put your rice in a stewpan with very little milk, that is, to one cup of rice one gill of milk. Stand it where it will be hot, but not boil; when the rice has absorbed all the milk, add to it a quarter of a pound of dry currants and one egg, well beaten. Boil it in a bag till the rice is tender, and serve with sugar and cream. More fruit may be added to the rice if it should be preferred.

If you are a lover of cucumbers try them served this way: Slice, sprinkle both sides with corn meal, pepper and salt, and fry brown, and you have a delicious dish, they say.

VANISHED IN SMOKE. A Middleboro farmer had eight tons of hay vanish into thin air last week. The hay lay in long winrows ready to load, when the men thought to vary their work by burning out a "yellow tails'" nest. They started a fire and lit out. When they turned to see the hornets flying out of the flames with singed antennæ and smoky eyes, they beheld the hay crop burning briskly. The wind had shifted in a twinkling, and saved the hornet's home at the expense of the hay.—Memorial.

PUNCTUALITY. A thorough business woman whom I know says that from the business point of view woman's worst fault is lack of punctuality. She herself has lost considerable money through the apparent inability of her sex to understand that when a certain date was named next day would not do as well.

—The will of the late Mary F. Searles of Methuen has been filed for probate in Salem. Considerable interest attaches to it, from the fact that she leaves an estate worth at least $30,000,000, with a prospective value of $75,000,000, a large part of which is in the Pacific railroad. She was probably the richest woman in America, and one of her efforts was the construction of a $2,000,000 house at Great Barrington. Her last husband, Edwin F. Searles, was the architect who designed the house.

—The Delaware peach crop will be very abundant this season. The estimate is 6,000,000 baskets. The Pennsylvania crop will also be large.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

Anecdotes.

Stranger,—"Just look at the crowds going along. I shouldn't think you could build churches enough to hold them all."

Native,—"We can't, they're going to the ball game."

Little Miss—"Mamma don't want you to look out of the window so much."

New Girl—"An' phy not?"

"Because it makes people stare."

"Sure, didn't they iver see a gude lukin' face in these windies before?"

Undertaker (to dying editor)—"What epitaph shall we place on your tombstone?"

Editor (feebly)—"We are here to stay."

"I understand that a cyclone carried your house away," said a Chicago man to a Kansas friend.

"Well I lost the house replied the Kansan; "but I don't blame it altogether on the cyclone."

"No?" "You see I was foolish enough to put wings on the building."

"There goes a man who was brought up with a silver spoon in his mouth."

"I know a man who was brought up with a dozen silver spoons in his pocket."

First colored citizen—"Come ova hyur, Jim."

Quidnunc—"What makes your hair so much grayer than your whiskers?"

Bulfinch—"Why, my hair is a great deal older than my whiskers."

Quincy Yacht Club.

The third championship race of the Quincy Yacht club was sailed off the club house, Houghs Neck, on Monday, in a good stiff southwest breeze, which called out a goodly number of the yachts. The extremely warm day also drove a large number of ladies to the shore, who, from the broad piazza of the club house, watched one of the prettiest races held this year.

The preparatory gun was fired promptly at 2 o'clock, and five minutes later the first class was under way; the White Fawn leading off, with the Korban, Erin, Posy, Moondyne and Adolph close to her heels; and as they sailed away toward Sheep island it was a pretty sight.

The White Fawn took the lead, which she held throughout the entire race.

The Posy did not appear to be in it, and for some reason she was away behind, and did not finish until seven minutes behind the leader.

The Korban was a good second; the Moondyne and Erin coming next. The Adolph withdrew.

The second class boats were under way at 2.10. The Egret being first to cross the line; but she quickly surrendered her lead to the Idler, who led the way throughout, finishing four minutes in the lead of the Helen.

The Vision finished, but as she had never been measured her time is not given.

The Scamp carried away her headstay, and the Egret withdrew.

The interest of the day was centered in the third class, which got under way at 2.15. The boats entered being the Flora Lee, Rocket, Dandelion, Mab and Freak. The Rocket and Freak each had a leg in the championship prize, and a close race was looked for between these two boats.

When the gun was fired they all crossed the line in a bunch. The Rocket then forced ahead but the little Mab was in it and she kept close to her heels; the other boats falling to the rear.

In rounding Sheep Island buoy the Mab took the lead and the race was becoming excited, when the Rocket carried away her headstay and rapidly fell behind.

Once in the lead the Mab had things her own way and finished with some minutes to spare.

When she crossed the line at the finish the commodore's daughter was so elated at the victory, that she asked permission of the judges to fire the gun, which request they readily granted.

The Freak split her mast off Sheep Island and was out of the race. The only boats finishing besides the Mab, being the Flora Lee and Dandelion.

At the close of the race the Dandelion protested the Mab, Flora Lee and Rocket, for leaving Racoon Island buoy on the port side instead of starboard, and thus giving her a leg in the championship with the Rocket and Freak.

The Mab also protested the Dandelion for fouling Sheep Island buoy.

As a result of the race the Erin, Posey and White Fawn each have a leg in the championship prize in the first-class; the Madge, Scamp and Idler in the second-class; and the Rocket, Freak and Dandelion in the third-class.

In the cup races the Madge, Scamp and Idler have a leg in the Rice cup, in the second class the Erin, Posey and White Fawn a leg in the Sanborn cup in the first-class.

Cash prizes of $5 each were secured by the Korban, Helen and Mab.

The judges were Benjamin Bass, C. H. Colby and P. H. Gavin.

After the third-class were under way Vice-Commodore Linton of the Monatiquot club steamed up and invited the judges and reporters to take a sail in his steam launch Enid, which was readily accepted.

The Enid is one of the finest and best appointed steam launches afloat. She is forty feet long and is decked all over. The inside is finished in solid oak and mahogany, and her seats are upholstered in rich blue silk plush. Plush curtains are also provided for the windows, and the floors are nicely carpeted. She is supplied with a well appointed kitchen and toilet room and will comfortably carry twenty-five, and can sleep ten. Her speed is about ten miles per hour.

Billings Family Reunion.

The seventh annual reunion will be held at the American house, Boston, Friday, Sept. 4, at 10 A. M. All persons connected with the family by blood or marriage are invited to attend. The family will be called to order by the President at eleven o'clock, when the meeting will be formally opened. Dinner at 1 P. M. The indispensable feature of the dinner table,—toastmaster,—will be ably represented by Mr. Sanford Waters Billings. The expense for each person including the dinner, will be $1.25. Singers will please carry Father Kemp's Old Folks Concert books, and the Ancient Harmony Revived, containing selections of music as originally composed by William Billings.

The announcement comes from Baltimore that a new method of storing power for street car traction and other purposes has been invented by Robert R. Zell, and a company has been organized to take hold of it. The nature of the new motive power is kept secret at present, but it is openly hinted that it is electrical.

—A Philadelphia statistician says that there are four long tons of pure gold, worth $2,500,000 carried around by the people of that town in the shape of filling in their teeth. This is a considerable in the assets that Honest John Bardsley didn't get away with.

—A Pawtucket exchange remarks that in all that city there is not one respectable family that has pie for breakfast. What's the matter? Is it style or low wages that works this state of things in the Rhode Island city?

☞Parson Whangdoodle Baxter distinguished himself once more at the funeral of an aged colored man:—"Our diseased budder was married foah times during his life," said Whangdoodle, "but only one ob de widows am so fortunate as to be present on dis heah very selemnious occashum."

Mrs. Lelia J. Robinson Sawtelle, whose death occurred Monday, at Amherst, from an overdose of medicine, was the first woman admitted to practice as a lawyer in Boston. She was a woman of rare intellectual gifts and a good journalist, and on the evening before her death wrote an able paper on her loved subject—the woman and the law—to a Chicago journal.

Yacht Capsized.

A sad accident occurred in Dorchester bay, near pumping station Sunday, caused by the capsizing of a yacht by which two men and four children were drowned. The party which consisted of four men and five children started for a sail down the harbor, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon from the foot of G street in a lapstreak dory, measuring between 12 and 13 feet and carried a sprit sail. One of the rescued members of the party says:

"We were at a point between the channel and Cow pasture point, directly off the pumping station, when Burke started to tack. The sail lazily eased over, and there was no sudden flopping of the canvas or filling of the sheet to indicate that there was any breeze, but, without warning, the boat gave a lurch to leeward and capsized, throwing all that were sitting on the lee rail backward into the water, and I was one of them. The sail immediately covered us and held us down; but, as I was able to swim, I hastily got out of my perilous position by diving down and outward.

"On the side where I sat were four of the children. I think it is possible that the skipper shifted his seat, and came to our side just as he jibed the boat, and that put too much weight, probably, on one side.

THE ROLLER COASTER. The roller coaster of only a few years ago has developed strangely under competition. Where it had one sprawling, hummocky track at first it now has three and even four stories of such tracks, one above the other, with steam elevators to lift passengers to the topmost one, with a central court for ice cream, eating and dancing and with a band of music to help make things hum.

Alcohol Imperils National Life.

The effect of intemperance upon the patriotism of a nation is neither obscure nor doubtful. When excess has despoiled the man of the natural affections of husband, father, brother, friend, and thrust him down to the condition of an animal, we are not to expect of him comprehensive views and disinterested regard for his country. His patriotism may serve as a theme of sinister profession, or inebriate wasting; but what is the patriotism which lives only in words, and in general violates in detail all the relative duties on which the welfare of the country depends? The man might as well talk of justice and mercy who robs and murders on the highway, as he whose example is pestiferous, and whose presence withers the tender charities of life and perpetuates weeping, lamentations and woe. A nation of drunkards and drunkard makers would constitute a hell. Upon the national conscience or moral principle the effects of intemperance are deadly. Upon the national industry the effects of intemperance are manifold and mischievous. The result of national industry depends on the success of well directed intelligence and physical power. But intemperance paralyzes and prevents both these springs of human action.—Cause.

Will Vacations Effect Education?

Says Edward Hungerford in August Century: I do not know that an effect of summer migration on the country school is often observable. Exceptional instances exist, and cases may be numerous. The increasing disposition of families to prolong their stay in the country beyond the limits of the city school vacation suggests that the time may not be far distant when those who control the village schools will adjust the terms and studies so as to enable children from the city to continue work during a portion of their stay. The similarity of courses in all graded schools favors this transfer, and by painstaking a fair adjustment might be reached. This would take away from many city families a chief objection to prolonging their sojourn, and would result in a positive benefit to the inhabitants. Lacking some such arrangement, the migratory habit must soon lead to the establishment of private schools in some districts to accommodate temporary residents.

The Girls of Ninety-One.

They tell me 'twas the fashion,
Oh, long and long ago,
For girls to look like lilies white,
And sit at home and sew.
Forth strode their sturdy brothers,
On many a gallant quest;
But the maids behind the lattice
Their weary souls possessed.

Today the times have altered,
And pretty Kate and Nell
Are playing merry tennis—
In sooth, they do it well.
They ride across the country,
They climb the mountain-side,
And with oars that feather lightly,
Along the rivers glide.

If they've not yet been to college,
They are going by-and-by,
To shake the tree of knowledge,
Though its branches touch the sky.
For all their Greek and Latin,
And poring over books,
With faces smooth as satin,
They'll keep their dainty looks.

Do you want a happy comrade,
In study or in fun?
Be sure you'll find her quickly
'Mid the girls of Ninety-one.
She'll keep that bright head steady,
Unharmed in any whirl,
And not a lad will love her less
Because she is a girl.

A PULLMAN CAR WOOING.

Scene: Eastern-bound Pullman car at the Oakland mole.

Time: 3.30 P. M.

Enter elderly gentleman, carrying small valise and large hamper. Following him two ladies, evidently mother and daughter. Daughter in dark blue travelling costume, with large bunch of violets pinned to front of her jacket; is a pretty, slender girl, of about eighteen. Both laden with flowers, books and numerous small parcels, which they deposit in section nearest middle of car. The following conversation ensues:—

"Gladys, dear, I am really worried over your taking this trip alone. Had you not better wait a day or so, to see if you can hunt some one up to accompany you?

"Oh, no, indeed, papa. It was unfortunate that Mr. Wilson was taken ill so suddenly this morning so that Mrs. Wilson could not go with me this afternoon, but you see I'll have to start today to reach Omaha in time for Clara's wedding, especially as I'm to be bridesmaid. You and mamma must not worry, for I shall get along all right alone."

In the meanwhile other passengers come in, and find their respective sections. The engine toots warningly. A few more kisses and hurried instructions, and papa and mamma are gone. The train moves off, slowly at first, then with increasing speed carries her further and further away from the two worried souls she had just left.

Her thoughts flew back to her parents, now on their way to their home in San Francisco. She knew how much they would miss her,—their only child,—though she was going to stay only a few weeks with her Omaha friends. She thought, too, of some one else who—well, some one who was also left in San Francisco.

Finally, turning to inspect her fellow-travellers, she thought the few men and two fussy old ladies looked very uninteresting. Thrown carelessly in the section opposite was a valise and a man's ulster, but the owner was not visible. She then turned her attention to the books, candy, and flowers piled up in front of her. She read, smiled over, and tucked away in her bag, the cards and tiny sealed notes hidden in the candy boxes or attached to the bouquets.

Time passed, and with a reckless little yawn Gladys glanced at her watch and found it after six. The porter just then announced that a stop will be made now at Sacramento for dinner.

Gladys thought of the bother of unpacking the neatly-strapped hamper for just one meal,—disliked the idea of going out at the station alone,—wished Mrs. Wilson had come,—then decided to dine on candy, as she was not very hungry.

At the moment a familiar form came up the aisle, and in a second a tall, handsome young man was standing near with outstretched hand. A gleam of amusement was in his dark eyes as he quietly said, "How do you do, Gladys?"

A delicate pink colored her cheeks as she shook hands, and answered him with a surprised and rather cool, "Why, Jack, where did you come from?"

"From the smoking-room, where I've been for the last three hours, ever since I came in and found you so wrapped up in the scenery you did not see me," he replied, moving some books away and sitting beside her in the most matter-of-course way.

"Where are you going, Jack?"

"To Omaha, Gladys."

"What for?" asked she, suspiciously.

"Partly business—partly pleasure. Business, to take care of you; pleasure, to be with you," he answered, concisely.

"Now, Jack, you know that is very foolish, after——"

"Last night, when you refused me again. Yes, I know; but, you see, I can't help being foolish. Was born so, I guess," said Jack, resignedly.

Dead silence followed this for about two minutes. She looked steadily out of the window, while he gazed absently at the bald head of a man a few seats in front.

Then he broke the silence by leaning toward her and saying in a soft and persuasive tone, "Glayds, won't you reconsider what you said last night?"

Looking around nervously to see if any one could hear, she answered, "No, Jack, please don't go over that again, for it won't do one bit of good."

He looked disappointed; then picking up her jacket, said, "Well, we're almost to Sacramento. Come, let us go out to dinner."

Gladys rose quickly, glad that she did not have to dine on candy after all; and while helping her with her coat Jack casually remarked:—

"You have lots of flowers."

"Yes, and these lovely violets—they came this morning with no card attached; but I think I can thank you for them," she said, looking up brightly at him.

A tender look came into his eyes as he said, "Yes, I sent them, and I'm much obliged to you for wearing them."

"Oh," said Glayds, rather cooly, "I had no preference. They matched my dress so well—that is why I wore them."

"Yes, I see," assented he, as coolly. "Those cream roses would not look well with it at all, for instance."

Poor little violets—that last remark caused their dethronement, for the girl with a flush hastily and angrily detached them, saying, "Come to think of it, the roses would be far more effective," and pinned a few of the longed-stemmed beauties in their place.

Just as quickly Jack replaced the few violets he had worn in his coat with a rose-bud that she dropped, saying, "Mine are withered, too."

Gladys looked annoyed, but said nothing, and in five minutes they were hurriedly eating dinner at the station restaurant.

Afterward Jack amused and entertained her till the early bedtime, and she slept soundly that night, feeling safe with a friend so near.

Carefully looking from behind her curtains next morning, Gladys saw that the opposite section had been changed from "two beds to two seats" again, but Jack was not visible. Half an hour found her dressed, waiting for him to appear, as she intended asking him to breakfast out of the well-stocked hamper.

Presently he came in, and after a very slight hesitation smilingly accepted her invitation. He helped her unpack the hamper and set the table in her section, and in a perfect gale of fun they began their morning meal, sitting opposite.

"This is fun, isn't it?" said Gladys, spearing for a sardine with a corkscrew, for Jack, as company, was honored with the only fork.

"Immense!" he assented so emphatically that she laughed gleefully.

Emboldened by this, Jack, in the act of carrying a piece of cold chicken to his mouth, leaned over, and lowering his voice and fork at the same time, said coaxingly, "Let's breakfast together always—shall we, Gladys?"

She smiled in spite of herself at his tone and manner, even while a dainty frown slightly marred her pretty forehead, and she answered briefly and emphatically, "Couldn't think of such a thing. Don't be silly, Jack."

"O, you cruel little girl!" said Jack, dramatically, as he straightened up and proceeded to eat the morsel on his fork.

Their merry little meal over, the rest of the day passed in the usual routine of a Pullman car. Jack was all devotion from first to last. Reading, talking and eating, with hasty promenades when there was any opportunity, was the order of the day.

Glayds acknowledged to herself, after bidding him good-night, that Jack was a very pleasant companion—but she did not want to marry him; no, indeed.

Jack Hollis had known and loved Gladys Preston since he was a boy of nineteen and she a little girl of fourteen. He had proposed and been declined several times, but knowing that she did not dislike him, and believing that "everything comes to the man who waits," he was waiting, and in the meantime wooing to the best of his ability.

He was very much afraid she would meet some other man during her visit, who would fall in love with her and win her; hence his deep-laid scheme to travel to Omaha with her.

The second morning Gladys arose with a severe headache. With that and a wretched night's sleep she was worn out and cross—undeniably so. She snubbed poor Jack, who was all sympathy; refused the cup of tea he brought her when they changed cars at Ogden; and when the journey began again, lay back on the pillows he fixed in the seat for her, and would have nothing to say to him.

All day she suffered intensely, feigning sleep most of the time, to avoid being fussed over by the sympathetic old ladies.

How Jack longed to take the golden-brown head in his arms and stroke the throbbing temples. Toward evening, when the rest of the passengers were out at dinner, he asked her with a passionate tremor in his voice to give him the right to do so.

She was trying to swallow the tea he had again brought in to her. Pushing it away, she said angrily:—

"Jack, you bother me to death. Don't ever mention that subject to me again, for I will not marry you. Go away, and don't speak to me at all." The aching head dropped wearily back on the pillow.

Jack paled, took the half emptied cup, and walked silently out of the car. That was the last she saw of him that night. She had her berth made up early, and, utterly exhausted, soon fell into a refreshing sleep, from which she awoke in the night with the headache gone.

Her first thought was of Jack, and her eyes opened wide with shame as she remembered her rudeness to the man who had always been so kind to her. She recalled the pained, set look, as he had turned away the evening before, and resolved to ask his pardon the first thing in the morning, when of course he would forgive her and they would be good friends again.

Morning found Glayds herself again, sweet and pretty as ever; but no Jack to be seen. He had not come in to take breakfast with her, as she expected, so she decided he must have eaten at the station which had been passed early, before she was up.

After a lonely little breakfast by herself, she settled down comfortably with a book to read and wait for him to come and make up.

The hours passed, however, and still no Jack. His traps were still opposite, so he must be on the train, probably in the smoking-room, where the other men spent most of their time. She began to grow very indignant at his neglect.

"To be sure, I told him never to speak to me again, but he knew I did not mean it," soliloquized Gladys; then tossed her head and vowed she didn't care what he did.

At luncheon time she saw him disappear in the eating-room without so much as a look even in her direction. Shortly after the train moved he sauntered carelessly in to his section. Meeting her wondering eyes he gravely bowed, then taking a book, was to all intents soon absorbed in its contents.

Her heart seemed to sink a few inches as she fully realized that he had taken her hasty words literally, and did not intend speaking to her. But pride came to her rescue, and she was apparently as much interested in her work as he was in his.

The afternoon rolled on, and still they read, never glancing at each other. As the train drew up at the dinner station he threw down his book, and without a word to the girl across the aisle, went out talking and laughing with one of the men.

Gladys, who had not left the car that day, timidly asked the old ladies if she could go out to dinner with them, and was promptly taken under their wing. After dinner, Jack stayed in the smoking-room playing cards.

Then, as the shadows darkened so that she could not see to read, Glady's spirits fell to the lowest ebb. Turning to the window, but seeing nothing of the fast-darkening landscape, she gazed steadily out with fast-filling eyes. She realized and confessed then to herself how much she had missed Jack all day.

On the train flew into the darkness. The car lamps were lit, and berths were being made up all around her. More and more lonely and low-spirited she grew. Tomorrow morning would bring them to Omaha, where her friends would meet her. She would go one way, Jack another, and he would never speak to her again. The last thought was too much for her, and by this time she was crying softly but bitterly in the corner, with her face still turned to the window.

Ah, Jack, deliberately staying away all day from wilful little Gladys was a diplomatic stroke of yours!

Suddenly some one leaned over her and said softly, "Why, Gladys, homesick already?"

Startled, she turned quickly, and with a joyful little catch of her breath dashed her handkerchief over her eyes, and answered, shyly, "No, Jack, only lonesome, and I—I'm sorry I was so rude yesterday."

He sat down, screening her from any prying eyes, and said very low, "Gladys, darling, were you crying because I've been such an unmanly beast today?"

The pretty head dropped lower—but no answer. Jack glanced around; no one was looking. Taking her hand, he said, "Gladys, once more I ask you to be my wife. If you say no, I shall never trouble you again, but shall take the first train home from Omaha tomorrow, a disappointed man. Which is it, dear, yes or no?"

Still no answer.

"Say yes, dearest," pleaded Jack, with his lips dangerously near the fluffy bang.

An almost imperceptible nod was all the answer he got, but it seemed to satisfy him. Gently raising her head he stole a kiss, just in time to escape the porter's inquisitive eyes as he came up, blandly asking the young lady if she was ready to have her berth made up.

Blushing furiously, the young lady said yes, she was ready; so pressing her hand warmly, Jack whispered, "Good night, love," and left her, well pleased with the result of his journey.—Jessie Howell Hull.

For the Patriot.

A Letter from Switzerland.

VEVAY LA TOUR,
GRAND HOTEL OF THE LAKE,
JULY 19, 1891.

My Dear Friend:

As I promised you a letter on my post-card from Lucerne, I must write you one, though short, according to my promise. After leaving Lucerne we went to Brunig, Interlachen, Berne, and then to that beautiful city on the lake where we are now. In coming from Lucerne to Interlachen we first had to cross the picturesque Brunig pass to Brienz, stopping at Brunig for a short time. Brienz is the place where one of our Swiss governesses lived. Another lived in Berne, still another we had came from Lausanne.

In the Grand Hotel Victoria, at Interlachen, (a very strange one), we had to pay extra for the covers of warm dishes, napkins and table cloths. It is certainly a very queer arrangement to Americans. It is a good one, I know, to make the hotel bills large.

From Interlachen we passed through both Berne, Lausanne, and Thun also. In Berne we visited the Bearpit. The bears are in the Coat of Arms of the Canton of Berne, and the bears are kept by the inhabitants of Berne. We visited the old clock in this old city. This is a lovely place as you will see by the frontispiece on that sheet of paper.

We had our photographs taken yesterday in the Swiss peasant's costume.

The other day we went to the ancient Castle of Chillon. There is a dark hole in one part of the castle, with a stairway. The prisoner was told if he walked down the first three steps he would then gain his freedom. When he had walked down three steps he was caught in a trap and precipitated on knives and then thrown into the lake. We saw also the prison of Bonnivard, and the names of Eugene Sue, Byron, Shelley and Victor Hugo carved on the walls.

I give you a pen and ink drawing of some of the natives we have met in our travels.

I will now close and remain your affectionate young friend,

BRUCE McLEAN FALCONER.

"Take my Seat, Madam."

Every seat in the bridge-car was occupied when a negress got aboard the train. Her arms were full of bundles, and she appeared to be weary. As she tried to clutch a strap, she dropped a package, and, in stooping to pick it up, stumbled. She would have fallen, too, had not a gentleman sprang to her aid.

With an outstretched arm he helped her to regain her balance, secured the stray bundle, and then led her to the seat he had just vacated.

"Take this seat, madam, if you please," he said.

For a moment the negress hesitated, and then sat down, after incoherently murmuring her thanks.

The episode created a sensation among the passengers, all of whom were men.

As the unknown gentleman was leaving the car, a friend was overheard to ask him:

"George, are you getting near-sighted?"

"No; why do you ask such a question?"

"Why? Because you gave up your seat to that negress. I think you are overstraining yourself in trying to be polite."

"Not at all, my dear fellow. I gave up my seat to her simply because she was a woman. I should have despised myself for remaining in my seat because she was black."—New York Herald.

—It is proposed that the three towns of Ashland, Framingham and Natick unite in the building of a union hospital. The idea would seem to be a feasible as well as an excellent one.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 3.

The train rushed on and on through the darkness of the night. Ever and anon the iron horse, with a yell of seeming impatience, would put on an extra spurt until we fairly flew, and like a thing of life it took us safely to our destination. The railroads of the west, as a whole, run their trains at a rate of speed unknown to the Old Colony, if we except the "Dude," the Shore Line Express, and perhaps a train or two from the Cape.

Our train, filled to repletion with happy-go-easy delegates and their ladies, out for a summer's excursion, taking, so to speak, a grand review of "the land of the free," rolled up to the railroad station at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, and stepping from the cars to the platform we were arrived in the city of St. Paul.

Arrangements for our entertainment had been made with various hotels, and to them we were at once conducted. The party representing the Old Bay State, a party of perhaps 32, about equally divided as to sex, sojourned in easy elegance at the Hotel Ryan, a hotel second to none in the entire city. This, in short, was the headquarters of the editorial delegates. Having secured our rooms and removed the dust and grime incident to railroad travel, a raid was instituted on the dining room, which, by the way, gave every evidence of having been previously prepared for the shock.

We were soon on the way to the Grand Opera House, at which place the convention was to be called to order at 10 o'clock A. M. With all our hurry and effort to be punctual we arrived at the massive structure only to find it nearly filled and that we were a trifle behind time. Never in the entire history of journalism throughout all area of the western hemisphere—the best half of the world—has the gathering together under one roof of sound, practical, editorial talent there assembled, been surpassed, or equalled either. Woman was well represented on that floor, and although no doubt many of them accompanied a father or a husband, it is none the less true that enough of them were actual workers to amply prove that woman in journalism is no mean quantity.

The convention consisted of 417 delegates representing every state and territory in the union except New Jersey. The Canada "pencil pushers" were also represented. Add to this by no means small gathering the great concourse of people who were admitted as spectators, and you will have a fair idea of the appearance of the convention of American editors.

A selection on the organ was followed by a prayer by Bishop Ireland of St. Paul. The hospitality of the state and city were extended to us by the Governor and Mayor respectively. Senator C. K. Davis made the address of welcome, and President Stevens made an eloquent reply.

After lunch the writer of this and daughter had the good fortune, in company with Mr. and Miss Procter of Gloucester, Mass., to be conducted on a sight seeing expedition in the carriage of and accompanied by Mayor Smith. St. Paul, is a city of 170,000 inhabitants. Large and massive are its buildings, both public and private, and many elegant residences grace its streets, situated in many instances on the bluffs commanding a fine view of the city.

St. Paul is very conveniently supplied with railroad facilities, both steam and electric, and is connected by both with its rival, sometimes mentioned as its twin city, Minneapolis, which is but ten miles away and has a population of 250,000 more than the capital. These two cities are rapidly growing larger, and in the natural order of events must at some future time become one, large and beautiful city. Residences are being rapidly erected between the two places and it will soon be difficult to tell where one town leaves off and the other commences.

After a very pleasant drive, highly enjoyed by us all, we accepted the Mayor's cordial invitation to visit City Hall. In its municipal building St. Paul has a structure that it might well be proud of, a structure that almost any eastern city might erect within its limits and point to with pride as being an added ornament to the place. The courts, public offices, public library etc., may all be found under this one roof. All who want books must take the elevator and go up five stories to get them. The building is finished throughout in a handsome and an attractive manner, and does the city honor.

Mayor Smith, although a very wealthy gentleman, we found to be a genial and pleasant citizen, who tried to make the stay of the editors in St. Paul a pleasant one. All the street cars except the line to Minneapolis, passed the delegates free on their several routes, during their stay in the city.

The convention held two or three sessions each day; able addresses were made and discussions had on subjects of interest and importance to newspaper publishers and editors. We cannot give the proceedings of the convention because of a lack of space, and also we doubt if our readers would be interested in the details; but simply close by saying that an immense quantity of experience was given, which would be of great profit and interest to all persons engaged in newspaper work.

Two interesting papers were read by members from Massachusetts; one on Editorial Department, by W. H. Hill, of the Writer, and one by Mrs. A. E. Whitaker, of the New England Farmer, on Woman's Work in Journalism.

Every afternoon during our stay in St. Paul, pleasant excursions were arranged for the pleasure and enjoyment of the delegates and their ladies. First afternoon: a delightful carriage ride about the city. Second afternoon, by the cars to Fort Snelling and the Falls of Minnehaha. Third afternoon: to White Bear Lake, where a beautiful sail was enjoyed. The fourth and last afternoon there was an excursion to lovely Minnetonka, a ride by steamer on the lake and an elegant banquet at Hotel Lafayette. Here the association adjourned to meet at such time and place next year, as the executive committee may select.

TRY THIS REMEDY. An English surgeon claims to have relieved ninety-eight patients out of 100 cases of rheumatism by the local application of wintergreen oil. He makes a liniment of equal parts of wintergreen and olive oil, and applies it to the part, keeping it covered with oil silk and flannel. He says that the pain is relieved in from four to six hours.

Friday, Aug. 21, 2 P. M.

Indications for Saturday: Showers followed by fair weather; stationary temperature.

H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

A Breathing Place.

While we heartily bid Godspeed to the increase of dwellings in Wollaston, we view with regret the inroads that are being made on the breathing space around the Wollaston schoolhouse.

By some mistake the last end of the addition to this building is barely on the city's ground and renders it imperative that immediate steps should be taken to secure that part of the Safford land which is directly east of and between the school building and Winthrop avenue. This parcel has already been sub-divided into small lots, and as the land is high and very desirable for residential purposes it is more than probable that these three lots, covering 13,500 square feet, will be the first ones sold.

There is a very strong feeling in Ward Five against these three lots, which are absolutely necessary to the city, being used for private purposes. If any citizen of Quincy will drive through Beale street he will see at a glance the situation. The land on the east side is a rough gravel bank as high as the schoolhouse. All of the hill should be removed or gradually sloped down from Winthrop avenue to the building.

It is understood that the owners of the land have named a low price, should the city desire to purchase, and a chance will be given the proper officials to bring this matter before the City Council. Otherwise it will be put on the market at once.

We trust that this robbery of breathing space and spoilatian of this naturally pretty landscape will not be permitted.

Illumination at Houghs Neck.

The meeting held Thursday evening at Mears' pavillion was largely attended by the cottagers, many ladies also being present. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and from present indications the illumination next Thursday evening will surpass all previous efforts.

The executive committee announced the following sub-committees:

Subscriptions—Thomas Downey, Jr., J. D. Taber, J. L. Harvey, C. T. Trask, T. H. Ramsdell, E. H. Brazee, W. E. Wyman, J. W. Johnson, William Boyd, J. Stanley Mears, Mrs. H. H. Connor.

Yachts—John Cavanagh, J.T. Cavanagh, F. R. Cowling, Arthur Shaw, Joseph Veader, H. O. Caryl, H. A. Billings, J. A. Evans, Elmer E. Brazee, John Day, William Tracy, Ray Taber.

Printing—W. E. Mansfield.

Frank C. Almy Arrested.

The murderer of Miss Christie Warden was found and arrested at Hanover, N. H., on Thursday. He has been secreted in hay, in the barn of Mr. Warden, for thirty-three days since the murder. The details of his capture are as follows:

On Monday evening last Mrs. Warden, mother of the victim, while looking for some chickens in the barnyard, discovered a small opening in the underpinning, which she thought might lead to the chickens' hiding place. She removed a small board and found on the inside an empty jelly tumbler, and farther in, twelve cans which had recently contained salmon, oysters, peaches and other substantial eatables. There were also empty wine and beer bottles.

Wednesday morning F. W. Davidson and N. A. Frost made further investigations under the barn, finding more bottles and a formidable bludgeon, about the shape but somewhat larger than a policeman's club. Knowing that the cellars of several families in the village had been robbed of such things, they visited these families, and found beyond all question that the goods came from their houses, and, farther, that some had been taken as recently as August 10th.

Wednesday night Prof. G. H. Whitcher and Sheriff H. C. Brown watched the premises. About 2 o'clock, while they were hid in some corn in the garden, a man whom they first supposed to be Farmer Warden came toward them to some apple trees within ten feet of where they stood.

He was barefooted, his trousers were torn, and he looked pale and thin. He had a bag with him, and filled it, while he ate ravenously. After awhile he leisurely and unsuspectingly walked back to the barn and passed around to the eastern side, and that was the last they saw of him.

The two men returned to the village and aroused about forty men, who proceeded to and surrounded the building. The news soon spread and in a few hours there was an immense crowd around the premises.

About six o'clock he was found by a man punching a fork through some loose hay. Almy fired several shots at his discoverer and the crowd scampered from the barn. The murderer refused to give himself up for several hours, but after being promised that he should have an honest and fair trial he consented.

Sheriff Bridgman arrested and took him in a carriage to the hotel where several slight wounds were dressed which he had received from stray shots that had been fired at him while he was in the barn. Afterwards, to appease the excited multitude, some 1500 were allowed to pass through the room, where he sat, and take a look at the prisoner. At last, Almy fainted and the doors were closed.

More Serious than Reported.

It appears now that Mr. Thomas Elcock who met with an accident on Wednesday is far more seriously injured than was at first supposed. Mr. Elcock did not fall as was reported in Thursday's LEDGER but on the contrary a large sharpening stone weighing in the neighborhood of eight or nine hundred pounds fell upon him crushing him very severely. Mr. Elcock had a narrow escape from being crushed to death, and as it was, several bones were dislocated internally.

Thursday Mr. Elcock was unable to lift his head from the pillow and it will undoubtedly be a long time before he will be able to attend to his work again.

Death of a Veteran.

John Luzarder of Whitman died Thursday at the residence of Daniel F. French on Hancock street in this city, aged 52 years.

He was a veteran of the late war and served in the 24th, 42d and 56th regiments and was a member of Whitman Post G. A. R. Services was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Mr. French's residence, and was conducted by Rev. J. H. Humphrey. The body was then taken to Whitman for burial.

WEYMOUTH. A new paper called the "East Village Times," has made its appearance. It is published twice a month at East Weymouth, and is under the management of Mr. Warner P. Dailey, who is well known in Weymouth and vicinity, having collected news for many years for different newspapers. The first number makes a very creditable appearance.

There are several workmen in this city who come from Boston daily, and they are anxious to secure the same reduction in fare as those who travel the other way. They think it would be no more than right that the tickets should be good on the 6.30 A. M. from Boston, and the inward train leaving Quincy Adams at 6.10 P. M., Quincy at 6.13, Wollaston at 6.17, and Atlantic at 6.12, 6.20 or 6.24.

Sunday, during the excitement of the fire, a horse and buggy owned by Joseph T. French was driven by John Brown rapidly down School street and turned into Quincy avenue. The driver making too short a turn, struck the curbing and was thrown out, and the horse ran into the yard by Tarbox's blacksmith shop, where he was stopped. The man was uninjured but the top of the buggy was smashed.

Henry C. Litchfield of Quincy, a trader, on Tuesday filed an insolvency petition in the Norfolk Registry at Dedham. His liabilities amount to $7,888.46; assets, certain unnamed estate assigned to John C. Randall of Quincy for the benefit of his creditors. Litchfield also files an offer of composition of seventeen cents on the dollar. A first composition hearing in his case will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 2.

It may not be generally known, but the woman at the head of the "dress reform crusade" is Mrs. Frank Stuart Parker of Chicago, the wife of Col. Francis W. Parker formerly Superintendent of the Quincy Schools. The Chautauqua correspondent of the New York Sun describes her as one of the most charming of persons. She is an author, lecturer and elocutionist; is very pretty, with classic features and expressive eyes, and is a most engaging conversationist.

Over 2,000 persons were in attendance at the annual picnic of the Quincy parishes at Lovell's grove Wednesday. It was a beautiful day and lovely moonlight evening, and it was one of the pleasantest gatherings the societies have ever held. Superintendent Weeks informs the PATRIOT that between 6,000 and 7,000 fares were taken on the electric cars, a big business being done without the slightest accident.

Deserves a Medal.

The Boston Journal says that "Captain Dawes of the tug boat Samuel Little, while towing a schooner up Quincy Bay Wednesday afternoon, rescued two men about 20 years old from drowning. They had been out sailing, and a heavy squall which struck them capsized the catboat they were in. When Capt. Dawes discovered them he dropped his tow and soon pulled the exhausted men on board the tug. They refused to give their names. They were put ashore at Downer Island. Capt. Dawes has recently rescued three other men from drowning, making a total of five men he has helped to save within a month.

One of the Injured.

Wednesday was the anniversary of the terrible accident on the Old Colony railroad at Quincy. Mr. Emmanuel W. Gardner of Highland street, who was so badly injured at that time, and received $22,500 in damages, is now able to go around without the aid of crutches.—Brockton Despatch.

The Boston Globe says: "Twenty-five landlords or their representatives met at Young's Thursday to organize for protection against slippery tenants. It's a hard law of social economy which sometimes makes it "cheaper to move than to pay rent."

Dress Reform.

Poor women, the latest idea in the heads of dress reformers is to limit the articles of feminine apparel to two pieces. Perhaps the so called reformers have already swallowed their own medicine, if so, that accounts for their having so much spare time on their hands, (not having any sewing to do) to spend in thinking how to make women look like guys. Who ever saw a dress reformer who looked really well dressed and womanly, or one who looked attractive enough to make other women wish to follow her example? Women will not give up the pretty things that make them so attractive, to adopt an attire of the ugliness of the one proposed by the dress reformers.

A CARD. We, the undersigned, wish to express our feelings of gratitude to all those who offered their services during Mr. Prescott's illness, and after his death, to the Knights of Honor, to our kind neighbors, to all those who assisted at his funeral, but especially to Dr. N. S. Hunting who was untiring in his devotion to the last.

MRS. GEORGE R. PRESCOTT
AND FAMILY.

Wollaston, Aug. 22. 1w

WOLLASTON.

The pastor of the M. E. church, Wollaston, will preach next Sabbath morning, subject, "Lessons from the Successes and Failures of the Past." Evening subject, "The Great Redeemer."

At the regular monthly meeting of the Wollaston Co-operative Bank, held Tuesday evening, $800 was sold at twenty-five cents, $1400 at twenty cents and $800 at five cents.

There is considerable complaint at Wollaston because some of the streets are not marked by sign boards.

John G. Faxon, of Fitchburg, is spending his vacation with his parents at National Sailors' Home.

Mrs. Childs and her niece Miss Sadie Betts, of Wollaston Park, have gone to Rockport, Mass., for a week.

The Wollaston Workmen.

Through the courtesy of Chief Ripley the Wollaston workingman's train committee called a meeting in Hose hall, Monday evening and made their report.

Mr. Kendrick very courteously met the committee at his office on Saturday morning and stated to the committee that he would sell fifteen tickets for a dollar between Wollaston and Boston, good on the 6 17 A. M. inward train and on the 6.30 P. M. outward train. He also agreed to sell twenty tickets for one dollar, from Quincy Adams to Atlantic good on the above trains.

Mr. Benjamin King then put the following motions, which were unanimously carried:

The thanks of the Wollaston workingmen are tendered to the committee and the report is accepted.

The meeting extends its thanks to Gen. Manager Kendrick for his courteous and prompt treatment of the request of the committee.

A vote was also passed thanking Chief Ripley for his kindness in placing the Hose Hall at the disposal of the workingmen.

Fishing and Gunning Excursion.

Mr. F. L. Merrill and Mr. E. M. McTear of Wollaston have been very successful in their fishing and gunning excursions at their cottage, Sandside, Brant Rock. They have also chartered a barge for a trip to old historic Plymouth.

Among their many guests are Mrs. Annette Merrill, Wollaston, Miss Belle McTear, Cambridge, Sargeant Hall of Protective 1, wife and daughter, and Mrs. Parkman of Boston, Mr. Shurtliff and family and Mrs. J. White and daughter, North Duxbury, Mr. and Mrs. James Bent and daughter of Marshfield.

They have also enjoyed a brief visit from Messrs. Barstow and Freeman of Wollaston, on their way to the Cape in their new yacht, the "Sunlight."

Mr. Howard Kingman of Elmwood, Mass., will be the new master of the Wollaston school. Mr. Kingman has taught in the Cochituate and Stockbridge schools.

Safford Terrace.

The block of land known as the Safford lot, which has thus far been held sacred from human habitation has finally passed into the hands of the surveyor; for subdivision into building lots. It is one of the finest locations in Wollaston and will make twenty excellent house lots. Marion street will be extended through this block from Winthrop avenue to Prospect avenue.

The original Wollaston Land Associates did not acquire this parcel of land and it has always remained virgin soil.

Mr. Safford gave to the town of Quincy that portion of his tract on which the school is located, the city acquiring by purchase a small portion for the recent addition to this building.

Mr. Safford died recently and the land has been purchased by Mr. Charles R. Sherman, who is already contracted for the streets, it being his intention to sell the whole as soon as possible. It will be known as Safford Terrace.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Mr. James J. [illegible] of Dorchester is visiting his college chum, Mr. William T. Deasy.

Hugh Owen, Walter Thayer, Alex. Kemp and William Wilson are at North Chatham on a two weeks' gunning trip.

The return game of ball between Hose Co. No. 1, and J. Q. Adams Chemical No. 2, will be played on the St. John's grounds at South Quincy this Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There has been a marked improvement in the condition of J. Wellington Field the past few days. He has been up, dressed and down stairs and is growing stronger each day.

Mr. Henry Collins of Quincy avenue, while watching the ball game at Lovell's grove, Wednesday, was hit on the shin by a foul ball which caused an ugly gash and which probably necessitated several stitches.

Miss Mamie Griffin of Beverly is the guest of Miss Annie Lane.

Thomas Swithin has purchased a mustang, which he will use in his business in place of a bicycle.

At the meeting of the Quincy Branch Irish National League, held Sunday evening, the proceedings of the Dublin convention were read, and a committee consisting of James Collins, Michael Goodhue, James H. Sullivan, Michael Burns and Timothy Deasy was appointed to consider the resolutions passed and report at the next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doble and Mrs. J. H. Stetson have returned from their vacation trip to Harwich.

Fred Spargo has gone to Rockland, Me.

Alex. Beattie has gone to Graniteville, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gale of Winthrop, Maine, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Penniman.

An inquest on the death of Carl Antonio Jacobson who died from injuries received at South Quincy, Wednesday, Aug. 5, was held before Judge Humphrey Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Willard have returned from their visit to Maine. Mr. Willard brought home a feline curiosity which is half rabbit and half kitten.

Tuesday afternoon Peter McConarty was driving along Summer street in an express wagon with a load of old boards, when his horse becoming frightened at a passing car threw up his head which struck the boards. This caused him to throw up his heels, which also struck the boards, and made him more frightened and he started at a rapid rate into Water street. Here he was stopped without any damage being done, except to frighten Peter, who was unable to stop his horse.

MILTON.

One of the Pope & Turner ice company teams ran away at Mattapan Tuesday evening, throwing out George Blanchard, an employe, who was seriously hurt about the head.

Miss Susie M. Harper is spending a few weeks' vacation at her home.

Mr. Walter Carter, of East Milton, will conduct the Gospel meeting at Washinton hall, East Milton, Sunday, at 3.30 o'clock. All cordially invited.

R. F. Pierce of Pierce street has a sunflower with fifty blossoms upon it.

William West, clerk at T. L. Pearce's, goes on his vacation next week.

Kemp & Tisdale have appeared out in a handsome new delivery wagon.

Misses Katie and Lizzie Kenney of Newport are visiting with their cousins.

Miss Fannie Kemp has returned from her visit to New Brunswick.

The Granite Railway Company are cutting a handsome and costly soldiers' monument for Utica, N. Y.

Mr. Walter E. Williams of East Milton has severed his connection with the firm of Cummer, Jones & Co., Boston, and expects to open a gent's furnishing store in Quincy in a few weeks.

ATLANTIC.

At the Methodist services, Music hall, Sunday, at 3 o'clock Rev. Luther Freeman of Wollaston will preach; Sunday School at 2. The Somerville praying band will have charge of the evening service at 7.30. The public invited.

Services will be resumed as usual next Sunday in Memorial church, Atlantic. Preaching morning and evening by the pastor.

John Livingstone has gone to P. E. I.

Edward Willett is erecting a house on Clive street.

A. T. Newcomb, clerk at Timberlake & Small of Atlantic, is spending his vacation at Weymouth.

Capt. C. B. Newton, who has been sick for some time, was dressed Monday and came down stairs.

A number of Atlantic people attended the camp meeting at Ashly Grove, Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Stella Littlefield who has been visiting with Mrs. Thomas Clare has returned to her home in Worcester.

John Carver has returned from his visit to Newry, Me., and reports great fishing, one afternoon catching 175 fine pickerel.

C. L. Coe has returned from Cottage City and brought with him a fine collection of snap shots of birds which he took on the fly.

There is a great deal of sickness among the children at Atlantic.

Miss Lillian Hammond of Atlantic has returned from Cottage City.

H. B. Johnson is to move from the John Glover estate to the Hodgkin place on Atlantic street.

Timothy Golden, clerk at T. Gurney's, turned his ankle while getting off of his wagon Tuesday, which will keep him confined to the house for some days.

Misses May and Lizzie Cronin of Glover's avenue, Atlantic, have gone to California by the Phillip excursion. They intend to make San Francisco their future home. They have a rich uncle there, Mr. Cornelius Connor, a native of Quincy, said to be worth several millions, and who takes pleasure in assisting his nieces. The ladies could not leave their native town without subscribing for the PATRIOT, so as to keep informed of what is going on in this city.

The flower garden at the Atlantic depot was ruined Saturday evening by a crowd of drunken fellows who came from Boston on the late train.

Cephas Drew of T. Gurney's returned to work Monday. He has been on the South Shore and as a result of his trip exhibits some fine specimens of the finny tribe.

WEST QUINCY.

The old West Quincy base ball team will reorganize.

Patrick Kelliher of West Quincy has returned from New York.

Miss Kittie Dee of Chelsea is visiting Miss Lizzie Shea at West Quincy.

Dr. George F. Brooks has been offered a very fine position as a tenor singer in a Quincy church choir, and another church in the same place desires his valuable services as church organist and musical conductor.—Herald.

The postponed sale of horses and wagons at the stable of B. Hart at West Quincy was held Thursday afternoon.

The old shop of P. Lacy on Copeland street is being torn down.

Gene McCormack, clerk at E. H. Doble & Son's, is having his vacation.

Misses Annie and Lillian Kelly of Copeland street left Thursday for New York.

Edward Richardson of Cambridge has accepted a position as clerk for T. J. Lamb.

Misses Annie and Mary McGowan are in New York on a short visit.

The yard of the new Willard is being graded, which improves the appearance of the building very much.

Letter Carrier John S. Farrell is taking his vacation and William Bird is filling his position.

The Epworth League connected with the West Quincy Methodist church are arranging for a lawn party to be held early in September.

A little daughter of Rev. Peter England fell from the top of the piazza to the ground, Monday, at her parents' residence on Morton street, and broke her leg.

Watch Stolen.

Daniel B. Reardon of West Quincy reports his watch to have been stolen at the picnic at Lovell's grove on Wednesday. It was one he highly prized, having been awarded to him by T. L. Williams for bringing in the most LEDGER coupons during the popularity contest of last winter.

Struck on a Crossing.

Thomas Haywood, while driving across the Old Colony R. R. track at Mt. Vernon street, Dorchester, Tuesday morning, was struck by an outward bound train. The wagon was badly smashed, and Haywood received a severe gash in the head and was injured internally.

William F. Hill of Dedham has accepted the position of superintendent of the Milton water works.

Judge Flint's Decision.

Justice Flint, before whom an inquest was held on the 30th and 31st of July, to inquire into the cause and manner of the death of Charles F. Reinhalter July 23, has made the following return. He finds that the said Charles F. Reinhalter came to his death at said Quincy on the 23d day of July, 1891, in consequence of being run over by a car upon the Quincy & Boston Street Railway, near the junction of Copeland and Common streets, at about 12.25 o'clock, when the car struck a wagon in which the deceased was riding with the driver. The car in question was No. 18 and was propelled by electric power.

The location where the accident occurred was a dangarous one. The railway track is on one side of the street and owing to the presence of trees and shrubbery upon the corner lot, a car and a team might come upon each other suddenly unless the driver of both were particularly careful and watchful.

The motor man, Walter F. Pratt, had been running a car but a few weeks. It is apparent that for some reason he failed to do all that might have been done to stop the car and avoid or at least lessen the accident. The reason for this may have been inexperience, excitement or the loss of his presence of mind at

A Critical Moment.

The power was not fully shut off, nor was the break hard set. Whether or not the gong upon the car was struck and if so how many times is involved in doubt. It evidently was not struck many times and was not heard by the majority of those in the vicinity at the time. The gong may not have been as powerful as those usually placed upon cars.

The rate of speed at which the car was going at the time of the collision is uncertain, but according to the best evidence attainable was somewhere from two to four miles an hour. The covered grocery wagon which was driven along Common street and was struck by the car was being driven at an ordinary trot which also is a variable rate of speed.

Both drivers claim to have been upon the lookout, one for a team the other for a car. The evidence of other witnesses does not show any particular care upon the part of either of them. If both or either of them had been in the exercise of greater care the accident would not have occurred or the consequence would have been much less serious.

The Danger is so Great

At this crossing and what would be considered extreme care elsewhere, might be no more than ordinary or due care at a place like this. The driver of the wagon Charles J. LeClair, and in which the boy Reinhalter was riding, did not hear the car or the gong and did not pull up to listen for it. The boy Reinhalter was not driving the team, but was merely riding for pleasure with his friend LeClair. No one saw Reinhalter between the time he was last seen sitting on the seat of the wagon and the time when he was first discovered under the car.

While death was not instantaneous, it occurred in a very short time after the collision, and as a result of the injuries received at that time. The conclusion is, that Charles F. Reinhalter was the unfortunate victim of an accident which resulted in his death, and that said accident occurred because of the lack of sufficient care, both on the part of the driver of the car and the driver of the wagon; and the carelessness of each was the more serious as it was simultaneous with that of the other.

JAMES H. FLINT,
Special Justice of the District Court of East Norfolk.
Quincy, August 18, 1891.

Narrow Escape.

Joseph Prout had a narrow escape from a serious accident on the Manet street railway Sunday evening. He was on his way home from Houghs Neck on his bicycle and had nearly reached Spear street, when he attempted to cross the car tracks. When he reached the middle of the tracks his wheel slipped throwing him directly in front of the 8.45 car from the beach.

Motorman Williams reversed the current on his car and applied the breaks at the same time and succeeded in stopping the car but a few inches from Prout, who was unable to help himself.

Motorman Williams received many words of praise for his success in averting a serious accident, which would surely have happened but for his coolness in reversing the car.

Cambridge Finances.

The rate of taxation in Cambridge for the current year has been given at $15.50 on a thousand. The valuation of the city and number of polls are as follows:

Number of polls,	20,857
Personal property,	$16,446,270
Real estate,	$54,126,300

A total valuation of $70,572,570, showing a gain of a little over three million dollars. The polls show an increase of 1775.

Beverly Figures.

The assessors of Beverly find the total valuation of the town to be $13,168,115, of which $3,657,952 is non-resident. There is a loss of about $200,000 in personal property. The tax rate is $14.20 on $1000, an increase of over 60 cents over last year.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases. and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Willard Schoolhouse.

The new Willard schoolhouse at West Quincy is practically complete, and could be occupied this week if required. It is probable now that there will be no dedicatory exercises.

Chairman Claflin of the School Committeee is not in favor of any display. The School Board and the people of West Quincy are glad the building is completed, but it was the outcome of a disaster, and the delays have been vexatious, and the more quietly the building is turned over to the School Committee and the school opened, the better.

Mayor Fairbanks, when interviewed, did not think there was any sentiment in favor of a public dedication, and cited the fact that there were no exercises upon the completion of the John Hancock schoolhouse. The building was ready for occupancy.

Nevertheless the PATRIOT is of the opinion that a dedication could have been made a very interesting occasion. That the city needs such events to make things lively and progressive. It would have given the people a good opportunity to inspect the building. It is a grand structure, and while the cost and delay have caused considerable adverse criticism, the city is now proud of the building which is the finest in Norfolk County, if not outside of Boston.

No Gold but Lots of Granite.

A Washington dispatch to the Boston Journal says:

"Gold and silver have I none" must be said by the soil of Massachusetts. One of the precious stones, however, is found within the limits of the State. This mineral is rhodonite. It is found near Cummington, and fine masses weighing several hundred pounds have been blasted out. The officials of the Geological Survey say that it is as beautiful as the Siberian variety which is so extensively used for table tops, mantel pieces and other ornaments in Russia.

The Geological Survey people do not find very extensive mineral productions in Massachusetts.

In the production of Granite Massachusetts leads the country. Indeed, there is no comparison to be made, as other States are distanced. Worcester and Quincy lead, followed by Rockport. Sandstone is also produced, much of which is used in Holyoke and other cities.

The Blue Hill Park.

The state should not purchase Blue Hill for a state forest unless it makes suitable provision for opening it on equal terms to all the people. Make it a state park, put it in charge of proper keepers, have picnic grounds prepared, and then have railroad facilities to its very centre. Having done all this, let the state have the privilege of using it as a grand picnic ground, "without money and without price," except the expense of getting there, which should be at the lowest excursion rates. But the state has no need of spending the people's money to buy a state forest unless the people of the state can have free use of the same.—Brockton Despatch.

Somerville's New Hospital.

The sub-committee on the new City Hospital for Somerville has accepted the plans of Architect W. P. Wentworth of Boston, who is the designer of the Quincy Hospital and a dozen like institutions.

The buildings, which are to be located on the northern slope of Spring Hill, facing Highland avenue, will be of colonial style of architecture, with clapboarded sides and shingled roof, and will cost about $25,000.

A License Required.

At Fall River the inspector of milk has made a new departure, which is creating considerable talk. In former times druggists were allowed to retail milk shakes and cream soda without a license, but under the new law they are now compelled to pay a fee similar to retail grocers and notion dealers. The cost of a license however is only fifty cents. The inspector is to give the restaurant and saloon keepers a call also.

They Make Advertising Pay.

In no small city in the country, and in but few of the metropolitan places, do the newspaper advertisers watch their advertisements so closely, change them as often and keep them as attractive and thoroughly up to the times as they do in the good city of Brockton. It is well for their own interests that they manifest originality and use striking announcements and "catchy" lines in making up their squares and spaces in the Enterprise, for it causes the general public to pay attention to the announcements in the advertising columns and keeps them posted on the latest bargains and the lowest prices in the goods they may chance to wish to buy.

Water Supplies.

The cost of the water supply to each dwelling in 50 cities from which the census publishes returns varies widely. In Lawrence it is $12, in Lowell $13, in New York but $6; Dallas, Texas, has the highest rate, $31, the lowest being $4.50 in Washington; in Portland, Maine, where the supply is by a private company, the rate runs up to $23; it is $11 in Lynn and $15 in Fall River.

Democratic Representation.

The basis of representation to the Democratic conventions this year will be one delegate at large for each city and town, and for each ward of a city, and one additional delegate for each 100 votes, or majority fractional part thereof, cast in the year 1888 for the Democratic candidates for electors of President.

—There will be an Odd Fellows parade in Abington on Labor day, in which it is thought 2,000 members of the order will participate.

Woburn Tax Assessment.

The Woburn assessors' commitment of taxes to the collector amounts to $150,832.84; city tax, $134,549.35; county tax, 6,940.77; state tax, $6,465; overlayings $2,877.72.

HOUGHS NECK.

Things at the beach are a little more lively, owing to the fine weather we have been having. Boating parties are the order of the day and many a pleasant sail is enjoyed these fine moonlight evenings which will pass all too soon.

The principal topic now is the annual illumination which takes place next Thursday evening, and from the present outlook it will excel anything ever held before at this place.

Papers have been circulated to raise funds and thus far the cottagers have responded liberally. The programme as now arranged by the committee will consist of sailing parties for the ladies and children in the afternoon, provided by members of the Quincy Yacht Club and residents of Houghs Neck. Refreshments for the children will be provided at the Casino free of charge and the committee will ask each house-holder to furnish one loaf of cake for this purpose.

Gordon's renowned Punch and Judy show has been engaged, which will furnish endless amusement for the old folks as well as the children. Martland's Brockton band, twenty-two pieces, has also been engaged and will give concerts afternoon and evening.

Two young men in a boat attempted to be funny off the Club house Tuesday, which resulted in their being capsized and receiving a ducking.

Mr. Tzeinbloom and family of Brockton are in a cottage on Bay View avenue.

The young ladies at the Loretto intend to make a grand display next Thursday evening on the occasion of the illumination.

To Make Perfect.

IN EVERY Receipt that calls for baking powder, use the "Royal." Better results will be obtained because it is the purest. It will make the food lighter, sweeter, of finer flavor, more digestible and wholesome. It is always reliable and uniform in its work.

MISS MARIA PARLOA says: "The Royal Baking Powder is as good as any can be. I have used it a great deal and always with satisfaction."

Dress Reform.

A Brockton girl, who in company with three others is enjoying a vacation in the mountains, writes to the Enterprise:

"We are proud to own a membership in our Educational Union, and through that to the gymnasium class. Now that gymnasium business means some sort of a suitable dress for the work, and the one selected for us by our teacher, Miss Waterman, seems certainly the most desirable. When packing our trunks we tucked away our blouses and divided skirts in one corner, not being quite sure whether we should have courage so don them. But we soon made up our minds we would try the effect on the people with whom we board, and if they survived we would venture beyond the farm.

"Well, one day, having occasion to climb a fence or two, and being caught on the highest bar by skirts, we then and there made up our minds the time for our "Gyms" had come. Hastily putting them on we boldly sallied forth, and after a few antics in the kitchen, by way of preface we ventured still farther. At first it was a very novel sensation, and I imagine we felt some as Eve did when she was driven forth from Eden—sort of, as if she wished there was a face wall in front of her! But we soon grew bolder and now, bless your heart, we wear them all days some days.

"Oh, the delicious freedom from petticoat thraldom!

"We now climb fences with no thought of consequences. We wade brooks, climb fallen logs over miniature cascades, go berrying, and for climbing hills and mountains, there is nothing like it.

"And why should not we enjoy all the freedom we can in spite of what "they will say? We can walk more and straighter, breathe freer, keep cooler, and enjoy more in one week of inconventional freedom like this, than in three months vacation hampered by such restrictions as society now demands, and we shall return to our work with double vigor and stronger muscles.

"I do not say that we should always want to dress in this style, but in the proper place, and at proper times, hurrah for dress reform!"

Enforcing the Lobster Law.

W. H. Proctor, of Swampscott, Fish and Game Warden on the shores of Massachusetts, has been doing a lively business around Cape Cod this season. From time to time mention has been made of seizures this season by Mr. Proctor. A few days since a seizure of 500 egg lobsters was made at Monomoy on the cape, and these lobsters were transported to Provincetown and planted in the waters there. These lobsters were about five inches in length and were discovered in sunken cars off the shore of Monomoy, placed there by fishermen.

Hull Corinthian Regatta.

With a stiff south wind and a heavy rain the Hull Corinthian Yacht Club championship regatta was sailed on Saturday. There were a dozen entries. It was the postponed race of Aug. 1.

There were no starters in the first class. The Echo was around, but as she had no competitor considered it not worth while to go over the course.

The Myrtle and Egeria in the second class got very fair starts, but the Madge crossed the line three minutes after the gun was fired.

The start in the third class was very close and exciting, all four boats going across the line in a bunch.

The Cricket was so lightly ballasted that she was obliged to withdraw. The Mab, however, sailed a great race.

The Egeria secures a leg in the championship, thereby causing a sail-off with the Madge, that has already won a leg. By this race the Mab wins the championship. The Marjorie, Composite and Fox win second prizes. The Caprice will have to sail off with the Composite and the Billow with the Fox.

The judges were Com. Stetson, F. H. Smith, Jr., and C. V. Souther. The summary:

SHOE LACINGS. To guard against the unfastening of a shoe lacing the New York Herald gives this useful hint: "Tie an ordinary bow knot, but before you draw it up pass the right-hand loop through the knot; then give a steady and simultaneous pull on both loops." This done you can walk all day with perfect assurance that your shoe is neatly and securely tied.

SATURDAY, AUG. 22, 1891.

Summer Night Joys.

While downward the mosquitoes swoop,
  And zephyrs sigh among the leaves,
Fond couples sit upon the stoop
  And spoon away the summer eves.

'Tis not in rank, or birth, or state
  That truest happiness is found;
Joy swings upon the garden gate,
  'Tis love that makes the world go round.

Who'd sigh for wealth, or power, or place
  If he could sit these summer nights
And gaze in Chloe's lovely face
  And shield her from mosquito bites.

GEORGE RUSSELL JACKSON.

Household Receipts.

PICKLED BLACKBERRIES. Eight pounds of blackberries, four pounds brown sugar, of cinnamon, cloves and all-spice each one ounce, vinegar one quart. Boil all together for twenty minutes and bottle.

PINEAPPLE ICE CREAM. Pare very ripe pineapples, take out all the eyes, grate very fine and make the same as peach ice cream.

PEACH ICE CREAM. Select rich, ripe peaches, pare and mash them to a pulp; make them very sweet and add a pint of cream for every pint of pulp; freeze.

PEACH CHARLOTTE. Cut off the top of a stale loaf of sponge cake, scoop out the inside, put in a layer of peaches, then fill up with sweetened whipped cream.

TURNIP SLAW. Pare and slice two medium sized turnips; let stand in cold water over night, then drain and chop very fine, add salt, pepper and vinegar to suit taste. You can scarcely tell the difference between this and cabbage slaw.

MACAROON ICE CREAM. Allow one dozen good macaroons to a quart of cream, make the cream as sweet as for vanilla ice cream; brown the macaroons, and when cool roll them fine and add them with two tablespoonfuls of wine to the cream; freeze.

CONVENIENT SALAD. Small potatoes not suitable to cook with larger ones should be laid aside and used for salads. Boil them and while warm peal and slice thin; chop some parsley, an onion, and add to the sliced potatoes; sprinkle with salt and peper, and pour over two or three dessertspoonfuls of oil, or melted butter can be used, and moisten the whole with vinegar. Sliced beat and cucumber can be added to the salad, but it must be done before the oil and vinegar are mixed with the potatoes.

TO PRESERVE BLACKBERRIES. Pick the fruit nicely, and to each pound of fruit put three-quarters of a pound of sugar; let it cook slowly, stirring it constantly, until the scum stops rising to the surface, then take it off, and put it in glass jars or tumblers; seal them tightly and keep them in a dry place. Let the fruit and sugar stand for several hours before putting them on the fire, as the juice will then be extracted from the fruit, and make the syrup richer.

HIS LIMIT. A disappointed fish peddler was belaboring his slow but patient horse in a street in Georgetown, D. C., the other day, and calling out his wares at intervals, as

"Herrin', herrin', fresh herrin'." A tender hearted lady, seeing the act of cruelty to the horse, called out sternly from an upper window:

"Have you no mercy?"

"No, mum," was the reply, "nothin' but herrin'."—Forest and Stream.

TO DETECT DEATH. If, when the hand of the supposed dead person be held toward a candle or other artificial light, with the fingers extended and touching each other, and one looks through the spaces between the fingers toward the light there appears a scarlet red color where the fingers touch each other, the person is still alive. The color is caused by the blood still circulating, showing itself through the tissues which have not yet congested. When life is entirely extinct the phenomenon of scarlet space between the fingers at once ceases.

Anecdotes.

A gentleman late one evening met his servant. "Halloo! where are you going at this time of night! For no good I warrant."

I am going for you, sir."

Farmer Gilson came down from up country the other day and brought his boy along to let him see the sights.

"Paw," said the lad, amazed at seeing hearse horses trot, "that ain't a funer'l, is it?"

"Yes, 'tis, these city folk hev to hurry like sixty to get a man buried 'fore the mourners furget 'im."

"Pat, Pat, you should never hit a man when he is down!"

"Begobs, what did I worruk so hard to get him down fer?"

Johnny—"Say, Uncle George, God didnot make everything, did he?"

Uncle George—"Guess he did Johnny."

Johnny—"Don't see how that can be, cause sis's beau was here last night, and I heard sis say he made himself at home."

Said an exasperated Texas father at the dinner table: "You children turn up your noses at every thing on the table. When I was a boy I was glad to get enough dry bread to eat."

"I say, pa, you are having a much better time of it now you are living with us, ain't you?" remarked little Tommy.

A boy was asked which was the greater evil, hurting another's feelings or his finger.

"The feelings," he said.

"Right, my dear child," said the gratified questioner; "and why is it worse to hurt the feelings?"

"Because you can't tie a rag around them," answered the child.

Teacher—"Master Jones, what were the dark ages of the world?" Jones hesitates.

"Next. Master Briggs, can you tell what were the dark ages of the world?"

I think they were before spectacles were invented."

The Old Colony.

A ride over the Old Colony is a good thing to take occasionally, and see what our neighbors are doing. At South Braintree the corporation has built a new station which is now being finished, and the surroundings will soon be equal to any station on the road. South Weymouth is moving gracefully along, but not with the speed that North Abington and Rockland are. The last ten or fifteen years has transformed North Abington, and is still moving onward; but Rockland is making the greater strides of the two, where a new Congregational church and Savings Bank block are being erected, which will be ornaments to the town. The streets are being widened for the advent of the electric road, the wires of which are being put up. In the matter of house building, the record is being broken by the comfortable and handsome houses now being built. Rockland has about 5000 inhabitants and is growing rapidly, being destined for a large town.

The old town of Abington has caught the fever, but not to the extent that Whitman has. The new stations at Abington and Whitman are models of convenience and attractiveness. Whitman is a busy place. With its factories of many kinds and still increasing in number, the electric railway, and houses going up in every quarter, this town must in the future take her place near the head of enterprising towns. The citizens of Whitman are proud of their town, and have good reasons for it.

Then there is East Bridgewater, Elmwood, Westdale and Matfield, all feeling the advent of the Old Colony (pan-handle) and are moving forward. Old Bridgewater, too, has felt the thrilling current of events, and taking courage by what has been done elsewhere, is striving for a position equal to her neighbors. Of course Brockton is the centre of this section, outside of Boston. The enterprise of this city is apparent. It cannot help growing. Everybody lends a hand and makes it grow, and then they are proud of it. Well they may—they have good reasons for it. There are neat, tasteful and substantial business blocks in Brockton. When a street is laid out, and the requisite number of houses are upon it, a walk is made, curbed, and perhaps concreted. So wherever you go you have nice walks, and houses are going up every day, as well as new schoolhouses, to meet the demand for public education.

In some towns one half waits for the other half, and when the enterprising ones do make a move, then some obstruction is throw in their pathway, and things come to a standstill, or something worse. Why do you wait for your neighbor to do something? Are you not capable of doing something for yourselves? Don't say that the monied men stand in your way, or they won't do anything. Brockton was built up by the middle-men—men who had no money, but borrowed it—who wanted business and went for it. When they said anything, they talked about Brockton. They knew no other place, and so today Brockton is known all over the country.

The duty of every citizen is to help make his town worthy of being spoken of at all times without reproach. Make it so attractive that business men will desire to settle among you, and forget not to make some move towards business yourselves, for then is the only time one can fully realize the delights of running a business on his own account. It certainly is an eye-opener, if nothing else. Let us remember that there are other places on this earth worth considering, and that it is a bounden duty to make ours not the least among them. If you wish to learn something, go away from home. The trip is always beneficial.—Randolph Register.

For the Patriot.

Fashions at Watering Places.

Fashionable Outfits.

Chiffon is without doubt the leading material for diaphanous evening dresses and when thin silks are worn, chiffon trimmings are the favorite garniture. Lace or drapery nets, though claiming a share of attention, are quite distanced and in neck dressing chiffon ruffles divide popularity with jabots in the same prevailing fabric. Such favor is not without reason, since it is delightfully soft and becoming, the more so as it is seen in a variety of colors. One fashionable young lady at Newport has a dozen chiffon dresses in as many colors as against three net gowns and four of lace. For parasols or hats and as a trimming upon them, chiffon is by far most frequently employed and the young lady just alluded to has in her assortment of eighteen hats, four made entirely of chiffon and five trimmed partially with it. Her supply of chiffon jabots, ruffles and handkerchiefs are bewildering and it can be added that upon the latter may be detected the delicious fragrance of Murray & Lanman's Florida water, which is the first choice because of its delicate fragrance. The great popularity of chiffon and other thin fabrics for evening gowns has, however, brought about the wearing of close silk bodices with semi-transparent skirts, because full waists are so unbecoming to plump figures.

Much Variety

in general results from the popularity of independent waists, whether in Norfolk shapes belted in or the equally fashionable coats. Given, for example, a stylish skirt, either black or white, of India or China silk, and what changes may not be brought about by a half dozen different waists. Corsages tight fitting in the back, with jacket fronts opening over removable vests of crepon or China silk, are another element of variety in dress and the skilful economist can this season more easily than ever make a good show with comparatively small expenditure. As time goes on of cloth or serge become a leading style. Tailor made they are trimmed with white gilt or silver braid and here too the transferable vest comes in if need be, as a powerful adjunct in the way of change and also becoming touches in color, as for example, brilliant red for a brunette or pale shades for a blonde. Some very stylish white suits are provided with extra coats of white material showing small colored sprays at intervals, while elegant coats entirely of brocade adorned with lace, give a more expensive finish.

White Costumes

White Dresses

of thin wash fabrics are now but little worn. Apparent necessities in olden time, their prestige was first infringed upon by veilings that afforded light looking costume which did not need perpetual laundrying. Veilings today look cumbrous and are warm compared with the cool and charmingly soft gowns of China or India silk which have all the refinement proper to white and are always ready for wearing, with the additional advantage if desired of colors (either solid or in figures) so delicate as to produce the same effect as white. In gay patterns they may equally delight the eye and thus each season they are more sought after not only by young ladies, but by mothers for their little girls or equally for themselves, since a soft, thin silk, provided the colors be appropriate, is suited to any age. Widows find these materials an untold relief from former wools or grenadines and for mourners in general, costumes of India or China silk are very fashionable and worn at an early date. Womankind at large owes much to these products of the Orient and it does not seem as if they would ever go out of style.

LUCY CARTER.

—The fire department of Whitman is to have a field day August 22, and a big time is expected. The fire departments of neighboring towns have been invited.

—Falmouth's valuation now exceeds $5,100,000, and the rate has sunk to $6.50 per $1,000. This is indeed a splendid showing.

A Fine Office.

On Saturday, some forty members of the Suburban Press Association went to South Framingham, and held their regular meeting there instead of in Boston.

Charles J. McPherson, one of its vice presidents, and the able and wealthy editor of the Tribune, invited his brother editors to come and examine his new office, which they did with pleasure.

The Framingham Tribune was started by Brother McPherson in 1883. It was small at the start but it soon became popular with the citizens and was soon increased in size and goodness; and has continued to prosper from that time to the present. Last November the company decided to start a daily which is also being greatly appreciated. Mr. McPherson being a live and active editor, who devotes his whole time to his business, presents his readers with a paper that does great honor to the place, as well as to himself.

Owing to the large increase in business the Tribune company decided last year to build an office to meet the wants of its business. Accordingly a fine lot on Irving street, near the centre of the town was secured, and a large four story brick block has been erected. On the second floor the Tribune office is nicely and pleasantly located; the rooms are built and arranged expressly for the newspaper business. The other portions of the building are used for different purposes; the town officers have rooms in the block and there are stores, etc.

After enjoying an excellent dinner furnished by Bro. McPherson to his guests, in a large room on the upper floor, the editors had the pleasure of listening to a very able and practical address by Mr. McPherson on "The best arrangement, as to material and methods, for a printing office." It was one of the best the association has had the pleasure of listening to, and was much appreciated.

Boston Amusements.

Tremont Theatre.

The preliminary season of the Tremont Theatre will begin on Monday evening, Aug. 24. One of the best organizations of minstrels will be the opening attraction—Lew Dockstadter's minstrels. The corps has made a pronounced hit everywhere. Headed by the well known wit and scholarly comedian, Lew Dockstadter, Mr. Fred Salcombe, an English tenor, heads the vocalists; McIntyre and Heath, song and dance and sketches of George Powers, the well known comedian; Frank Girard, always welcome; Cain and Lorens, comical burlesque trapeze; Perry and Magrew, very funny boxing match; and Marvilles in graceful grotesque dancing and a number of others the best in their profession.

Managers Abbey and Schoeffel will present a great array of attractions, among which can be named George Marion, Fanny Rice, Stuart Robson, Nat Goodwin, City Directory; Rosina Vokes, Marie Wainwright. For opera, the Casino Company and the Bostonians will both appear. The cadets have a week of their new extravaganza and Edwin S. Willard and the illustrious Bernhardt will also play engagements.

Grand Opera House.

Miss Agnes Herndon, in "La Belle Marie," has drawn large audiences to the Grand Opera House the past week, and closes her brief engagement today. This is Miss Herndon's first appearance in Boston, although she is well known in all the other large cities, and very popular. Next week "Wanted, the Earth," a new comedy is announced and lovers of a laughable play should attend. The three matinees a week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, makes the Grand Opera House very popular as a place of amusement.

Boston Museum.

The Boston Museum is proving a greater attraction than ever this summer and no matter how warm the night may be, a large audience is sure to gather. Roland Reed has made quite a hit this week in "The Club's Friend," a new comedy by Sidney Rosenfield. Promenade concerts are in curiosity hall before each performance. Mr. Reed's engagement will continue through next week and then give way for the regular Museum season which will open with the new comedy, "Ye Earlie Trouble," a romance of '76.

Boston Theatre.

"Evangeline" has met with its usual brilliant success, filling nightly Boston's largest play house, and tonight will witness the close of the two weeks' engagement. Monday night for one week only, "Tuxedo" is announced. If the favorable comments heard on every side, count for anything, a very enjoyable week may be expected. George Thatcher's minstrels and Comedy Company participate in "Tuxedo." The regular season opens September with Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead."

Hollis Street Theatre.

The season at the Hollis does not begin until the 31st, but something good may be expected then, as James T. Powers and a clever company have begun rehearsals of new music for the production of "A Straight Tip."

Pin This in Your Hat.

Never wash a horse with cold water when he is heated.

Feed your horse three times daily, but never overfeed.

Water before feeding, but not while the horse is hot from work.

Use the whip very little, and never when the animal shies or stumbles.

Never leave horses standing unhitched. It is the way to make them runaways.

Do not storm and fret. Be quiet and kind, and the horse will be so too, in most cases.

Give the horse a large stall and a good bed at night. It is important that he should lie down to rest.

Do not expect your horse to be equally good at everything. The horse, like the man, must be adapted to his work.

Near the close of a journey, let the horse walk. If covered with sweat, rub off with a rag, to prevent too sudden cooling.

Collar-galls and bruises are benefited by washing with salt water. Wash shoulders daily when using the horse. Brine is good also for stiff joints.

Never allow any one to tickle or tease your horse in the stable. The animal only feels the torment, and does not understand the joke. Never beat the horse when in the stable, as nothing so soon makes him permanently vicious.

Keep a horse's bedding dry and clean underneath as well as on top. Standing in hot, furmenting manure causes thrush.

Use the currycomb lightly. When used roughly it is a source of great pain; brushing and rubbing are the proper means to secure a glossy coat. Let the heels be brushed out every night. Dirt, if allowed to cake in, causes sore heels.—American Horse Monthly.

An Indulgent Parent.

"Yes," said Mr. Easyman to the Rev. Dr. Prudent, the new minister, who was paying his parishioner a friendly visit, "you are unquestionably right. I do not believe in being over stern with children. Now mine treat me as they would an elder brother or playmate. No scampering up stairs when they hear my latch-key turn in the door. Not much! Make your home cheerful—that's my motto."

A frowzy-haired youth of some six summers appeared on the scene at this juncture. After eyeing the clergyman critically for a moment, he broke out with:—

"Say, pa, what's a jay?"

An ominous frown settled upon the brow of the indulgent parent as he replied—"A jay, my son, is a rather showy bird, having a low erectile crest of feathers and"—

"But, pa, they can fly, can't they?"

"Certainly, my boy. They are noted, too, for their propensity to chatter and, for instance, to ask foolish questions." The frown deepened as the boy went on—

"But how can they fly, pa, without any wings?"

"My son, I think I heard your ma calling you a few moments ago"—

"Yes, pa, I'm going, only as I heard you tell ma last night that our new minister was a regular jay, I just wanted to come in here and see whether he could fly. Say, mister (to the astonished clergyman), you ain't got any feathers, have you?"

There was a sudden rush on the part of the indulgent parent, followed by the sudden disappearance of the youthful inquisitor. Then came a series of discordant howls from the hall beyond.

"My dear sir," observed the parent upon entering the room, "while I admit that I am a kind and indulgent parent—why!"

At this point the front door was heard to slam violently. The minister had disappeared, and now Mr. Easyman is talking about renting a pew in another church.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

BURGLARS UNKNOWN. People are so honest in Norway that cigars and liquors are placed in the public rooms of hotels without any one to guard them. The electric light, which has been utilized to grow flowers and fruits by night or on cloudy days, has recently been employed with good effect on board a West indian steamer to keep alive and flourishing some exotic vines and other plants, which were being transported to the West Indies for acclimation.

The person who says that a girl does not look perfectly proper, modest and sweet, as she glides along on her low-wheeled bicycle, ought to take a hand-glass and look on his back for moss; the chances are that he will find some. A girl can ride a bicycle—those low ones built especially for their use—with just as much propriety and a great deal less danger, than she can ride a horse.—Electric Light.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

Law and Order is On Trial.

The community's character is to be tested. Economists, humanitarians, philanthropists, scientists, and christians, alike testify to the revolting corruption, loss, ruin, immorality, crime and degredation flowing everywhere the liquor traffic exists.

It is the duty of Christian patriots, of fathers caring for their sons, of Christian citizenship, to unite for the dethronement of this accursed power. We say as our official prayer, "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts!" Yes, but you must bear your part. Strength, character, manliness, faith, fortune, health, only come by work.

Slavery was crushed; Union and peace came by life for life. In this battle for home, country and God, He who rules over all, promises for duty here discharged—wealth, hope, peace of heart, protection and satisfaction, and over these an everlasting crown.—Extract of an address by Hon. B. B. Johnson.

—The Salvation Army at Seattle, Wash., has received a bequest of $50,000 from a philanthropist who had attended their meetings. It is evident from this that the salvationists at least have found it profitable to heed the admonition to "go west."

A philological statistician calculates that in the year 2000 there will be 1,700,000,000 people who speak English, and that the other European languages will be spoken by only 500,000,000 people.

—A certain Hanson family are enjoying an experience which seems rather strange—that of having placed in position, for the first time in their lives, a cooking range. Heretofore all cooking has been done by means of the old-fashioned fireplace, and the range is considered a most wonderful invention by the inmates.

—One girl in New York is said to have the walls of her bedroom so covered with photographs that not a square inch of the original wall can be discovered. She has ninety-seven different pictures of one leading actor.

Poetry.

Not Without Care.

You may build you an elegant mansion
And fence it around with gold,
Set it all with diamonds and rubies;
You may keep out the wind and the cold.
You may banish from it all intruders,
Have music and levity there;
You may shut out discord and envy,
But you cannot shut out care.

You may build a lowly cottage,
You may paint it all in white,
Grow vines and shade trees about it,
Let in only sunshine and light;
You may keep out the envy and malice
That wrinkle the faces we wear.
You may keep love inside, and contentment,
But you cannot keep out care.

You may sing with the voice of an angel,
You may dance with a fairy's feet,
You may laugh till your laughter makes music
For every one that you meet;
You may dance till your feet seem twinkling,
Till the roses fade in your hair,
You may dance till the world dies of envy,
But you cannot drive away care.

You may smile in the faces of women
Who envy your very life,
As you hide from their eyes all the burdens,
The weariness, heartaches, and strife;
You may live so the poor will adore you,
Live a life that the world calls fair;
You may let love be conquered by duty,
But you cannot live without care.

THE LOST DIME.

BY JENNIE P. ARNOLD.

I was sitting in the parlor of a New York friend, indulging in an after-dinner chat, when the subject of horse car strikes was mentioned and my friend remarked: "I believe I understand both sides of the story well, for I was conductor on the— avenue line for nearly a year."

"You a conductor!" I said in surprise, "I never knew that before, but then," I added, "as our acquaintantance extends only over a little more than two years you might have been a highwayman before that for all I know to the contrary."

"I hardly think a car conductor can be classed with that fraternity, though perhaps some of the bosses think they are little better, when they abuse them of having so much of the company's money stick to their fingers; but I never speculated in Wall street or bought a brown stone front with my accumulations in that line. I came to New York about four years ago with the promise of a situation in the office of the —— Avenue Horse Railroad Company, but there was no vacancy at that time, and, as nothing better offered, I accepted a place as conductor while waiting; but nearly a year passed before they were ready for me in the office, and in the meantime I had an opportunity of learning considerable of the ins and outs of the business. I added something to my knowledge of human nature if not to my bank account."

His oldest child, a bright-eyed, mischievous little sprite of eight yeaas, came up at that moment and laid her cheek against his shoulder, while her hands tightly clasped his arm.

"Ah, Puss!" he said, catching her up and giving her a toss in the air, then setting her on his knee as he resumed: "You'd be surprised at all the ingenious devices to beat a conductor out of a fare, from the well-dressed gentlemen who have left their pocket books in the other trousers pockets, to the half-drunken bummer who never has another pair of trousers to leave a nickel in, but who rides as far as he can and when put off for non-payment of fare, hails the next car and so keeps on until he reaches his destination. But the toughest of all is when a woman claims to have lost her purse, or something of the kind, and her helplessness appeals to a fellow's gallantry. I used to ring in a fare out of my own pocket at such times until I caught some of the schemers laughing at my softness, then I decided I wasn't so green as to get sold that way again. The company was very strict, it was all a fellow's place was worth to let any one ride without paying fare, no matter what the circumstances; our orders were to compel women, as well as men, to leave the car unless they paid. If we felt in the least lenient in enforcing this order we could never tell which passenger might be a "spotter," or how soon we might get called into the office and discharged. I'll never forget one case of this kind. It was a cold day in December, and the President of the road was in the car; what he was there for I never knew, but he occasionally rode up and down, for inspection, I suppose. At Grand street two nicely-dressed ladies got on, who paid their fare out of well-filled purses; not a very common occurrence where ladies are returning from shopping at the Grand street bargain stores, eh Fanny?" with a laughing glance at his wife, who was rocking in an easy chair with the baby, a fine plump little fellow a year old, in her lap:

"You ought to know best," was the response, "seeing you had a year to study up the subject."

"I shouldn't have noticed these so particularly only for what followed. At the next crossing a woman was waiting. I saw that she was young, was dressed in black, and had a very sad expression. She had a large bundle and feeble-looking baby in her arms, while holding to her dress was a three-year-old toddler with round rosy cheeks and bright blue eyes. I stepped off to help the woman on and took the little girl in my arms. I always had a soft spot in my heart for children of the genuine sort, not little old men and women. My friends used to chaff me on liking pretty little girls better than I did the big ones, and I think they were about right. This one was so bright and pretty I wanted to give her a hug and kiss, but I had learned that it isn't always wise to try it with the little girls any more than with the older ones."

"I yikes to wide!" the little puss said, looking up into my face all smiles and dimples, and showing her pretty white teeth between her rosy lips. 'It makes my tootsies told to walk,' holding up her plump little foot poorly protected from the cold pavement by a well-worn shoe."

"'Well, you shall get them all nice and warm,' I said, making room for her beside the stove. The mother dropped into a seat with a sigh of weariness, and placing her bundle on the floor shifted the baby to her lap to relieve her tired arms. I was called away to attend to other passengers, and returning held out my hand for the mother's fare. The little girl was holding out her poor worn little shoes to the fire.

"It's dood and warm here," she said, with a face all smiles and dimples, as I stopped beside her.

"'That's right, get all warmed through," I said, patting her on the head, then turned to the mother again. She had shifted the baby to her left knee and was carefully searching her pocket; a troubled, anxious expression came over her face, then one of alarm followed."

"'I had a ten cent piece in my pocket-book,' she said, looking up, 'but I can't find it; I'm sure I put it there; I'm afraid,' and her lips trembled and her eyes began to fill with tears, 'I'm afraid I've lost it.'"

"Her distress was evidently genuine I could not believe she was playing off as so many had done before, and I said pleasantly: 'Look again, madam, you will probably find it somewhere,' and I turned, catching the eyes of the President watching me sharply."

"The woman turned her pocket inside out, got up and shook her dress, then looked carefully over the floor, as did several who sat near her. I stopped the car to help on and off several passengers, then came back to the woman. She looked greatly troubled, and I could see only restrained tears by great effort."

"'I cannot find it,' she said looking up at me with trembling lips, 'I saved it out on purpose for this ride, and put it in my pocket-book just as I started, but it's gone, and I must have lost it.'"

"What was I to do? The woman seemed honest enough, yet I had seen others equally so who proved to be imposters; then there were the sharp eyes of the President upon me, and if I faltered in my duty off would go my head, with no chance of the promotion I was hoping for."

"'The rules are to put off all who do not pay,' I managed to say with assumed firmness, while all the time I felt as if I would like to pitch the President off neck and heels instead of the woman. 'I'm sorry, madam, but the rules must be obeyed.' 'I know it, I know it,' she said piteously, 'but if you would let me ride up I could pay you when I come back; I shall have the money then, pointing to her bundle of work to prove her statement; It's such a long way, and I'm so tired," she pleaded, and there was the chubby, dimpled face of the little girl smiling up at me all the time."

"I felt as if I would like to kick myself as I turned away; if I only dared appeal to the President, but no! none of the men were supposed to know him, and I felt as if his cold eyes were piercing me through and through as if he delighted in the test I was passing through."

"'Hang the old rascal,' I said to myself, 'I'll have to put the woman off, but I'll slip a quarter into Puss's hand so they can pay their fare on the next car.'

"'I'm sorry, madam,' I tried to say firmly, but the sad, pleading look almost broke me down, "the rules must be obeyed,' and I reached up to pull the bell rope; but in an instant the younger of the two women, of whom I have before spoken, caught my arm.

"'No, no! she cried with flushed cheeks and indignant eyes, and before I knew what she intended she emptied her purse into the woman's lap and passed quickly out of the car. A perfect shower of coin—several dollars, at least, fell rattling down, a part falling on the floor. I stooped to pick it up, when the elder lady dropped several more pieces into the woman's lap and followed her companion. The poor woman looked up, dumb with amazement, then covering the money with one hand, dropped her face on the baby's head and sobbed so she shook from head to foot. The little girl, seeing her mother's distress, crept up close beside her, and with her little arms against her neck and her cheek nestled against hers tried to comfort her."

"'Don't kwy, mamma,' she pleaded, 'I'll be so dood, don't kwy."

"I don't believe there was a dry eye in the car; the women didn't hesitate to carry their handkerchiefs to their eyes, but the men looked out of the windows, drew their hats down over their eyes, and some blew their noses vigorously, the President giving the strongest blast of all. As for myself, I just rung in a fare out of my own pocket, and went out on the platform, thankful that it was a cold day I could use my handkerchief freely."

"At the next street the President got out, and as he passed the little girl he stopped and patted her rosy cheeks, with some pleasant word, and slipped something into her hand. A moment later, when I had occasion to pass through the car again, the little puss held out her chubby hand: "See!" she cried, with her pretty face radiant with delight: 'O see my bright, new penny!' I looked, it was a five dollar gold piece."

"The mother noticed it for the first time."

"'Where did you get it?' she asked, in astonishment."

"'E big man div it to me,' the little one answered.

"'Oh, sir, do you know who it was?' the mother said, appealing to me. 'It must be a mistake.'

"'Not a bit of it.' I answered, almost as delighted as the child, herself, 'it was the President of this road; he could give her a thousand such pieces and never feel it.'"

My friend's little Elsie had been sitting very quietly in his lap listening attentively to his story, and now as he paused eagerly.

"'And the little girl—did you ever see her again, papa?'

"Yes, Pussie, I think I've seen her several times since then," he said, with a merry twinkle in his eyes and a pecular smile under his heavy moustache. "I think I see her now," catching up Elsie and giving her a hug and a kiss, "you're the little girl yourself, Puss!"

"Me, papa!" she cried, bounding to her feet and catching her father by the shoulder, "and was the lady my mamma?"

"Just your mamma and no one else," was the reply, with a smile at the child's amazement. "She used to ride frequently on my car after that, and I always carried a pocket full of bonbons for you, Pussie; we soon got to be the best of friends and of course mamma had to get acquainted a little with me on your account. Then I learned she had been a widow for a year and was poor and had to do sewing. After a few months I asked her to be my wife and now you are my own little daughter."

A View of Virginia.

Dr. George G. Groff, president of the state board of health, is in the habit of taking long tramps during the summer. He organized a small party, supplied with a camping outfit, and they walked over some interesting portions of the United States, studying the fauna and geological formations. When he was at the Seventh Avenue Hotel, some time ago, he spoke of one of his trips through Virginia, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

"A good section of that state," he said, "has taken a step backward, and the land that once flowed with milk and honey is nothing short of a barren waste. This is true of the country that was early settled by John Smith and the English. In many places fine plantations that once yielded heavy crops are nothing more than barren fields covered with a short thick undergrowth and inhabited by wild hogs. These animals are abundant, and the natives kill them for food. It is not uncommon to strike a stretch of laurel that reaches as far as the eye can see, and it is the easiest thing in the world for people to lose themselves in these wilds. Jamestown, that was once the pride of the first settlers, has become a village of negroes. In one of the obscure counties I was told that the judge was colored, so were the sheriff, squires and constables. In addition to being arrested by colored men, a white culprit would be tried by a jury of negroes. The old Washington and Lee University, which has educated many of the noted men of the state and country, has rapidly declined, and the faculty is there waiting for students. All these things are sad, but some day Virginia will once more be wealthy and powerful. All it needs is development. The ground is rich in coal and iron."

What a Corn Palace is Like.

Only those who have visited the previous Corn Palace at Sioux City can have anything like an adequate idea of the architectural possibilities of the product. In building the palace a large structure is first erected of lumber of a shape that will carry and show to advantage the multiform decorations with which it is to be adorned. It is in form, lofty, with broken lines, pinacles, buttresses, bridges, gables, ornamental windows, etc. Over every inch of this wooden surface are laid corn and kindred plants in architectural harmony and in a multiplicity of designs. Corn is employed in the stalk, the ear, the kernal, and even the husk has its decorative uses. The various colors of the cereal permit of a wide range of shading and coloring, while the artistic possibilities developed from year to year in building the palace admit of production of effects that are as startling as pleasurable. The interior work is especially fine and elaborate, the kernel of the corn being largely employed, and producing amazing and unique effects. Upon the walls are wrought pictures, illustrating farm scenes, nursery tales, etc., with a fidelity surprising to those who have not before seen at one of the Sioux City corn palaces the varied artistic availability of the grain, and flowers, and frescoes, figures of persons and animals and many artistic and ornamental shapes make the palace a structure of unique beauty and imposing grandeur.

The great corn palace event of 1891 begins October 1 and continues until the 17th inclusive.

Economy in a Family.

There is nothing which goes so far toward placing young people beyond the reach of poverty, as economy in the management of their domestic affairs.

It matters not whether a man furnish little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in the kitchen or in the parlor. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that nothing goes wrongfully out of it—not the least article, however unimportant in itself, for it establishes a precedent—nor under any pretence, for it opens the door for ruin to stalk in, and he seldom leaves an opportunity unimproved, says the New York Ledger.

The husband's interests should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition should carry her no farther than his welfare or happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theatre of her exploits in the bosom of her family, where she may do as much toward making a fortune, as he can in the counting-room or in the workshop.

It is not the money earned that makes a man wealthy—it is what he saves from his earnings. A good and prudent husband makes a deposit of the fruits of his labor with his best friend, and if that friend be not true to him, what has he to hope? If he dare not place confidence in the companion of his bosom, where is he to place it?

A Lost Boy Found.

A boy about twelve years old rang the who door-bell of a house on High street, the other day, and said to the lady answered it:

"Won't you please telephone to the police station for me? I have found a lost boy."

"A lost boy? How old?"

"About four years old, ma'am. He can talk, but he can't tell where he lives."

"Some poor child, probably."

"Some awfully poor child. Why, he was the dirtiest child you ever saw, and so hungry that ma said he hadn't eaten anything for a week. We think his folks lost him on purpose. Ma says they ought to be sent to state prison."

"So they had. Does he give any name?"

"Oh, yes. He says his name is Bert—"

"What! Has he light hair and blue eyes?"

"Yes'm."

"And one front tooth gone?"

"Yes'm."

"He's my own boy, he is, and you walk him over here as quick as you know how! Also tell your mother that people have become rich minding their own business!" —Detroit Free Press.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 4.

During our stay in the beautiful city of St. Paul, between the session of the convention and the many excursions, banquets, etc., we found a few hours to visit places and things of interest. One of the most attractive was near the opera house, where were on exhibition two costly machines for setting type; the Merganthaler and the St. John typobar. The latter arrived in the city first, and was on exhibition one day before its competitor. So wonderful was it to the most of the editors that the room where it was exhibited, was thronged with intelligent spectators. The machine, simple yet complex, promises to work a revolution in type-setting and enough experiments have been successfully tried to demonstrate that the typobar has come to stay. The first work done by this machine was in New York in September last, when the World came out with a column of clean, handsome face type set by the automatic fingers of this wonderful invention. While in St. Paul it was in charge of A. V. Phister, of Detroit, who represents the Michigan firm controlling the manufacture of the typobar. When he exhibited the workings of it, it appeared as though that hereafter there would be no use for the typos in the composing room. The typobar is operated exactly in the same manner as a typewriter, and Mr. Phister claims that an experienced typewriter can operate the machine successfully, although a practical printer can handle it to better advantage. The machine sets, adjusts, and casts each line as it is set, ready for the press. The work of setting and completing a line takes but a few seconds. Of course the rapidity depends greatly with the operator. The typobar can set four or five times as many lines in a day as a common compositor.

We wish not to be understood that type is set, but matrices, from which the lines are made by compression. Electric power furnishes the heat for the small boiler where the metal is contained, and a simple motion of the hand is all that is necessary to conclude the setting of a line. Several samples of work done were brought home by us, and can be seen at the Patriot office.

John W. Scott, the practical printer and editor of the Chicago Herald, was asked in the convention what he thought of type-setting machinery, and he said: "They are coming to stay. The publisher was anxious to get rid of the tremendous cost of composition—it amounts to $200,000 per annum on the Herald—and the type setter must come. He liked the Page machine better than any, but it would be sometime before it could be completed. The Rogers, the Merganthaler and the Thorne were all good ones, and there would be improvements from time to time until something near perfection was reached."

The St. John Typobar Company ask for the use of their machines, one dollar per day, and do not as yet offer any for sale.

Before leaving St. Paul for home we improved an opportunity to visit Minneapolis. It is also situated on the Mississippi river, only ten miles away and closely connected with St. Paul by steam and electric cars. We found there immense flour mills. One of the largest in the country, the Washburn, we visited and had the pleasure of examining the processes which the grain passes through, before it is completed, and the nice white flour is ready for shipment. The Washburn mill is very large and some seven stories in height, and the wheat passes from one room to the next, and so on, through many machines and processes, until at last it is completed in that excellent condition in which we now find it at our stores.

The best flour passes through fine silk, so fine that it would seem to one unacquainted with the business, to be impossible to sift it. A piece of the silk we brought home as a curiosity.

The Washburn mill is run day and night, and turns out 5,000 barrels of flour every twenty-four hours. We were informed that it took 40 hands to attend to it. There are twenty-six mills in the city, and when they are all running, the maximum capacity is 30,000 barrels per day. This one article of flour makes an immense freight for railroads, but the lumber business at Minneapolis is very extensive and the freight business enormous. G. W. P.

Here You Have It.

Here you have it, and in so plain English that all can understand it. In the Ohio convention of the People's party, the other day, a Texas delegate was cheered to the echo when he declared:

> If the government can take seventy-five cents worth of silver, stamp it and make it a dollar, it can take a piece of paper, stamp it and make it worth 100 cents; and that is what we propose to do.

In other words, the silver craze leaders propose to first make the unlimited free coinage of silver a fact, and then keep on to the legitimate conclusion of their theory by reinaugurating the old "fiat money" inflation dogma. Unlimited free silver coinage is simply the sponsor at the baptismal font of inflation for the degrading and debauching of the national currency. —Milford Journal.

An Impossibility.

Several ladies were sitting together the other day, when one of them began to rail at the unequal distribution of the favors of nature. "There is Mrs. ——, with no end of money, and a beautiful voice that would be a fortune to a poor girl. She never sings, and does not even keep up her practice. Why cannot her larynx be transferred to my maid?"

"That would be impossible," said one of the others present, who evidently knew something about sewing machines; "you can never make a Singer out of a Domestic.

To Send Flowers by Mail.

Cut flowers are constantly sent through the mails, but seldom in such a fashion as to preserve their bloom and freshness. To effect this, pack in a light wooden box, not using cardboard; line the box with wadding or cotton batting, laying over this a sheet of tissue paper; then lay the flowers, not on top of each other but in rows side by side, the blossoms of each row on the stems of their neighbors; pack closely, otherwise the flowers will be displaced and injured in the journey. Before packing, they should stand in water for several hours, in order to absorb moisture enough to keep them from withering. It is not well to sprinkle them too heavily after they are in the box, for without air this is likely to produce mildew.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, AUG. 29, 1891.

TELEPHONE 54-3, QUINCY.

Tax Rate $13.60.

The Assessors of Quincy have so far completed their labors as to give out the valuation and tax rate for 1891, and the result is very gratifying from whatever point viewed. Here are the figures which the PATRIOT has placed side by side with those of 1890 and 1889. The tax rate is $13.60 per $1000, the same as last year, and the number of polls 5160:

Total Valuation.

	1891.	1890.	1889.
Ward 1,	$5,138,000	$5,113,425	$4,446,775
Ward 2,	1,742,350	1,669,525	1,609,200
Ward 3,	1,838,775	1,757,450	1,615,950
Ward 4,	2,221,125	2,027,750	1,841,675
Ward 5,	1,962,500	1,719,550	1,521,975
Ward 6,	1 228,275	1,096,850	1,042,450
Total,	$14,131,025	$13,384,550	$12,109,425
Resident bank stock.	$ 295,805	$ 292,860	$ 209,820
	$14,426,830	$13,677,410	$12,319,245

The increase in the total valuation is $746,475 according to the Assessors' figuring. The figures for 1890 were those first announced and might have been increased a little by the supplementary list which explains the discrepancy. Ward One continues the wealthiest ward without a near rival although its gain was not as large the past year as some of the others, because of a removal of personal property.

Real Estate.

	1891.	1890.	1889.
Ward 1,	$3,542,625	$3,365,675	$3,216,900
Ward 2,	1,341,775	1,285,800	1,217,100
Ward 3,	1,500,050	1,442,200	1,336,975
Ward 4,	1,789,775	1,722,825	1,552,300
Ward 5,	1,799,825	1,592,050	1,408,050
Ward 6,	1,183,875	1,059,650	1,004,000
Totals,	$11,157,925	$10,468,200	$9,736,625

The increase in the value of real estate is nearly $700,000, it being the largest in Ward Five, with Ward Four second.

Personal Property.

	1891.	1890.	1889.
Ward 1,	$1,595,375	$1,747,750	$1,229,875
Ward 2,	400,575	383,725	292,100
Ward 3,	338,725	315,250	308,975
Ward 4,	431,350	304,925	289,375
Ward 5,	162,675	127,500	113,925
Ward 6,	44,400	37,200	38,450
Total,	$2,973,100	$2,916,350	$2,372,800
Resident bank stock.	295,805	292,860	209,820
	$3,268,905	$3,209,210	$2,582,620

The increase in personal was only about $50,000, but the Assessors inform the PATRIOT that the city lost in Ward One during the year nearly quarter of a million, by removal which has more than been made good.

Comparison of Valuations.

The remarkable growth of Quincy is shown by a comparison of the valuation for twelve years, and particularly during the three years of city government.

Year.	Real Estate.	Personal Property.	Total Valuation.
1880,	$5,580,860	$1,947,236	$7,528,096
1881,	5,614,780	1,945,601	7,560,381
1882,	5,842,725	1,651,144	7,493,869
1883,	6,071,660	1,665,278	7,736,937
1884,	6,332,795	1,765,691	8,098,486
1885,	6,604,975	1,884,490	8,489,465
1886,	6,887,800	1,931,266	8,819,066
1887,	7,434,350	1,950,370	9,384,720
1888,	7,825,250	1,932,710	9,757,960
1889,	9,736,625	2,582,620	12,319,245
1890,	10,478,200	3,209,210	13,677,410
1891,	11,157,925	3,268,905	14,426,830

Tax Rates of the Past.

The tax rate of Quincy has never exceeded $17.50 per $1000 (very few cities or towns can say this) that rate was as long ago as 1869. Only once since that year did it reach $17. With the exception of 1878 it has not varied very much as will be seen below:

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
" 1866,	13.00	" 1880,	15.00
" 1867,	17.00	" 1881,	12.50
" 1868,	15.00	" 1882,	6.00
" 1869,	17.50	" 1883,	14.00
" 1870,	13.60	" 1884,	15.00
" 1871,	16.00	" 1885,	13.60
" 1872,	13.00	" 1886,	15.40
" 1873,	17.00	" 1887,	15.80
" 1874,	15.00	" 1888,	16.70
" 1875,	15.00	" 1889,	10.80
" 1876,	14.00	" 1890,	13.60
" 1877,	14.00	" 1891,	13.60
" 1878,	9.00

It is no stretch of imagination to state that the tax rate of 1891 is a surprise, and not a disagreeable one either. Not a taxpayer, we venture to say, thought it would be less than in 1890, and many thought it might go as high as $15 or $16. That it should be no more than last year is very gratifying. It is also in the city's favor that Boston is the only city in the State which has a lower rate, and there we are told that the appropriations only cover nine months, instead of twelve. New Schoolhouse.

"Wanted—A schoolhouse to name" would be more appropriate just now than a name for the new schoolhouse.

In response to the advertisement for proposals to build, quite a large number of bids were received. They were opened last Saturday afternoon by Mayor Fairbanks and were as follows:

S. L. Washburn,	$32,487
James McNeil,	32,987
C. B. Huston,	34,720
Gooch & Pray,	34,765
J. E. Giddings & Son,	34,900
Mead, Mason & Co.,	36,620
Q. A. Faunce & W. S. Weston,	36,700
P. P. Kelley,	36,995
Connery & Wentworth,	38,146
Hascol Dodge & Co.,	38,523
Ira G. Hersey,	39,000
Cressy & Noyes,	40,347

Melville C. Grant,	41,098

The order making the appropriation authorized a loan of but $31,500. This it will be observed is nearly $1,000 below the lowest bid, while the highest is nearly $10,000 above the appropriation.

What will the City Council do?

It was represented that $31,500 would complete the building even to the grading, but the estimates are all above this and then don't include the Smead heating system or the blackboards, which will cost about $4000. Then there is the supervision, the grading, furnishing and extras. Accepting the lowest bid the building would cost over $40,000, and only $31,500 has been appropriated.

The John Hancock building could undoubtedly have been duplicated within the appropriation, but several extras are included in the specifications for the new building. First of all the large hall on the third floor, then the building was to be piped throughout for gas.

City Council.

When the City Council adjourned for its vacation it was until the first Monday in September. No thought was taken that that date was also Labor day, which is a legal holiday in this State. There is a question whether city business can legally be transacted on a holiday, but the meeting is to be held, and there will be hearings on the petition of the Quincy Electric Freight Company for a location, and on laying out Reardon street as a city way.

Mr. Frank N. Bates and family are at Cohasset.

Councilman Sherman has a large gang of men at work opening up the Marion street extension through Safford Terrace.

Mr. Edward L. Robbins and family have returned from the Vineyard, where they have been stopping this summer.

Drunken Time.

A gross scene of drunken blackguardism took place on and around a tennis court, located between Winthrop and Prospect avenue, Wollaston, Tuesday, from nine to about eleven o'clock. A party of hoodlums prominent among whom were two well known, secured several bottles of liquor and resorted to the above place to drink the same. For nearly two hours they created all sorts of disturbances, and at last, when their bottles were empty and their stomachs full, they trod down some of the flowers in Mr. Orcutt's garden and maliciously threw down a large iron vase full of flowers.

Mr. Orcutt himself watching the toughs from his own piazza, and being grossly insulted when he warned them to desist. Then they turned down Warren avenue rendering the air vile with their drunken brawling. At the corner of Winthrop and Warren avenues the disturbance was so pronounced that Mrs. Call who lies at the point of death, received quite a shock, which caused Mr. Call to go outside to ascertain the cause.

And now it looks as if the young Wollaston rowdies who recently distinguished themselves by acting the part of drunken hoodlums will be brought before the police court. It is understood that Lawyer Orcutt will take out warrants for their arrest. Such action as these young felons went through with a few nights ago should be rebuked by the stern hand of the law.

Their performances have been winked at long enough. Patience has ceased to be a virtue in their case. Because they come of good families is no reason why they should be shielded from prosecution. Young men with as good surroundings and good bringing up as these had, should have a sense of decency about them. Let the law take its course, a heavy fine or a short term of imprisonment would open their parents' eyes.

RODMAN STREET. Public convenience requires that Rodman street, in the south part of the town, be laid out as a public way, thirty-six feet wide, from Brooks avenue to Centre street. The owners of estates on said streets are notified by an advertisement in the PATRIOT today, that a public hearing will be given on Monday, Sept. 7th.

PRIVATE SCHOOL. The Greenleaf Private School enters upon its nineteenth year this fall. Especial attention is given to fitting pupils for Thayer Academy they being accepted from this school on the teacher's certificate.

POLITICAL. Among the excellent gentlemen mentioned for Lieutenant Governor, we notice the name of Arthur W. Tufts. He is the senior member of the Governor's Council, where he has served for three years. He has been a state senator for two years, and is a staunch Republican. Mr. Tufts is president of the Roxbury bank and stands high among Boston business men.

—Robert W. Carpenter, a lawyer of Foxboro, is missing.

QUINCY POINT.

Mr. D. Howard Bills is constructing a new lawn in front of his residence on South street.

Mr. T. B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school, has purchased, through the agency of G. H. Brown & Co., the new house on Edison street.

A Painful Accident.

Mr. James Harris who resides at Quincy Neck, and is employed at the city's stone crusher on South street, met with a painful accident on Saturday, in which he came very nearly losing one of his hands. Mr. Harris was employed in carrying logs to the top of the cliff where a blast was about to be discharged, when a large rock which had become loosened fell from the top of the cliff which is about thirty feet high, and struck Mr. Harris on the back of the hand causing an ugly gash. The cut was so severe that the blood flowed in a regular stream, and it was only after considerable difficulty that it would be stopped. Fortunately no bones were broken.

Shipping.

Arrived,—Aug. 26, Schooner Mildred Pope, Capt. Norton, from Calais, with 106,000 feet of lumber for B. Johnson.

Work on the new interlocking switch system for Atlantic has been commenced.

Miss Mabel Bass has gone to York Beach, Maine.

Henry Sumner and family of Bridgewater are to occupy the new house of Mrs. Hinckley on Newbury avenue.

Sunday afternoon a horse and buggy driven by Faxon Billings of Glover avenue, and a horse and carryall containing a Dedham gentleman collided on Hancock street. Both teams were smashed but the occupants were uninjured. Each blames the other for the accident.

A gang of hoodlums were about at Atlantic Sunday night. They took a large driveway gate from L. S. Carter's place on Squantum street, also a gate from Joshua E. Drew's place on Walker street and left them on the Memorial church steps. This may be fun but if they are caught at it they will sing another tune.

A party of Atlantic people sailed to Marblehead Wednesday.

George G. Melzard and family of Prospect street have returned from Sandwich.

Charles Bowman of Atlantic avenue moves his family to Cambridge next week.

What is to be done with the old stone fountain when the new one is completed? This question has been asked and the PATRIOT would suggest it be placed on the corner of Squantum and Hancock streets. At present there is no watering place between Neponset and Quincy centre and if the old fountain was located there it would be of great benefit to teamsters.

A CAT STORY. The Dedham Transcript tells the following: "A well-known citizen of the Upper Village drowned a cat one day this week and buried it; he took his shovel to the barn; on returning to the house he was almost paralized to see the cat sitting in the doorway big as life—it gave him an awful scare. Upon investigation, however, it seems that it was another cat precisely like the one he had drowned, one that he had never seen before. It was rather singular that it appeared on the scene just at that time and no wonder he was scared."

C. C. Vredonburgh of Jersey City will speak to the Christadelphians tomorrow.

Atlantic Lodge Gone Up.

Atlantic Lodge of the Golden Grail of Brockton, is no more, having followed the illustrious example of the lodges at Campello and Holbrook and perhaps other places, and gone to an early grave. The members of the various lodges lose, it is stated, between $20 and $50 each and consequently are not in the most amiable frame of mind regarding endowment orders and their golden promises.—Enterprise.

—Prof. C. H. Fernald, entomological adviser to the gypsy moth commission, is in high glee over the discovery of a parasite, which he thinks will eventually destroy the gypsy moth. Secretary Sessions of the board of agriculture thinks that the work of extermination will call for expenditures for the next five years. This is cheering news for those drawing pay from the state.

—Mrs. D. L. Sterling of Weymouth was seriously injured in that town Tuesday by being thrown from a runaway team. She was unconscious for some time.

HOUGHS NECK.

Thursday was a bad day for the grand illumination at Houghs Neck, and many were undecided whether to go down or not. A goodly number however did go, but were disappointed as it was decided shortly after 5 o'clock to postpone the band concert and illuminations until Saturday.

Part of the programme was carried out however. Something like three hundred children were treated to ice cream and cake in the Casino during the afternoon, and others were amused by Gordon's Punch and Judy, which gave entertainments at short intervals.

A representative of the band came down early in the afternoon, but the weather looked so dubious that it was thought best not to have them come, but they will be on hand Saturday if pleasant.

Mrs. H. H. Connor of the Brockton cafe met with quite an accident the first of the week, by letting a pot of hot coffee fall upon her foot, which was badly scalded.

J. F. Pierce, Miss Alice McLaughlin, J. E. O'Brien, Mrs. Sara and Anna O'Brien, William Kane, George Kane, Miss Tereasa Moynahan and Mrs. John Kane are guests at the Dooley cottage.

A large number of those who come to the beach make a practice of partaking of one of the Brockton cafe's famous shore dinners.

Band Concert.

The City Band gave an excellent concert at Merry Mount park Wednesday evening, which was listened to by a gathering of several hundred people, who promenaded hither and thither around the band stand, which was illuminated by an electric light.

The hucksters were out in full force, and their cries of "peanuts, five a bag, bag and all," "peaches all ripe," and the like, could be heard above the sound of the music.

Many of those present went down on the electrics, which were run at short intervals.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher celebrated the 79th anniversary of her birth on Wednesday last at her home in Brooklyn. She was born in 1812, a year before Mr. Beecher. Her birthplace was Sutton, Mass., and his Litchfield, Conn. They were married on August 3, 1837, the same year that the Quincy PATRIOT was started.

☞ Several of our Quincy friends, knowing what a fine church organist and tenor singer our young physician, Dr. George F. Brooks is, have applied to him for organ and vocal lessons. The doctor is giving, however, his whole attention here to the practice of medicine.

CITY OF QUINCY.

IN COUNCIL. July 20th, 1891.

WHEREAS, in the opinion of the City Council of the city of Quincy, the public necessity and convenience of the inhabitants of said city require that Rodman street should be laid out a way of the city, about thirty-six feet in width, from Brooks avenue to Centre street, and that the grade thereof be established, as shown on a plan in the office of the City Clerk: It is, therefore, hereby ORDERED, That due notice be given to Adams Real Estate Trust, Thomas Ferguson, William Clements, William McIntyre, William Sommes, Samuel Gibson, M. E. Finnegan, Peter Brady, M. A. Kenney, Francis Recchea, John Flynn, J. Garmony. Jane Currie, Edward J. Martin, Annie Grant, Agnes McNeil, William St. Pierre, M. Hubert, Martin Cook, Jabez Steer, John Lamb, and all others interested, that the City Council intends to lay out the same as a way of the city, and that MONDAY, the seventh day of Sept., 1891, at 7.30 o'clock P. M., is appointed as the time for a public hearing of any objections which may be made to said taking, at the City Council chamber, in the City Hall in said city of Quincy.

Passed July 20th, 1891.

Lodged in Jail.

Almy, the miserable scoundrel who murdered Miss Warden, has, after several days' delay been lodged in jail at Manchester, N. H. It is said to be a safe and secure place to keep him, but according to all accounts he is a hard ticket, and the sooner he is placed beneath the sod, the better for all good people.

It appears from investigations that he is none other than the notorious George H. Abbott, who has seen the inside of several jails for wicked deeds done in earlier years. But having an active brain he has managed to escape and defy the officers and the law. It is hoped this time that a sufficient watch will be kept over him until he is executed.

Abbott's mother died at his birth, and his father a few years since from grief occasioned by his wayward son. His relatives and friends have been disgraced, and the sooner the drama ends the better.

A Pleasant Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hall returned on Wednesday evening after a very pleasant outing of ten days. They rode several hundred miles in their carriage through Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, stopping at prominent cities and towns along the road.

The extreme northerly point reached was Chelsea, Vermont. On their way to Chelsea they passed through Hanover, N. H. on the day Almy was arrested; and Mr. Hall says there was the biggest excitement in that place for a small town of any he ever saw. The bells were ringing and the streets were full of people and carriages. He did not visit the farm on his way north, but on his return he stopped and had a good chance to examine Almy's hiding place.

—The Old Colony engine house at Hull was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Loss $2000.

—The steamer Teutonic has beaten all records across the Atlantic ocean. She arrived at New York Thursday, having made the trip in 5 days, 16 hours and 31 minutes this is 1 hour and 37 minutes faster than the time of her sister ship, the Majestic, on her last trip from Liverpool, which then made the fastest westward passage up to that time.

—Allen W. Swan, president of the New Bedford bicycle club, walked into the corridor of the Palace hotel at San Francisco last week Thursday night, having accomplished his journey across the continent on a bicycle.

MAKE SURE OF THIS.

WHENEVER a cooking receipt calls for baking powder, use only the "Royal." Better results will be obtained because it is the purest. It will make the food lighter, sweeter, of finer flavor, more digestible and wholesome. It is always reliable and uniform in its work.

A. FORTIN, Chef, White House, for Presidents Arthur and Cleveland: "I have tested many baking powders, but for finest food can use none but 'Royal.'"

CALL FOR Republican State Convention.

THE Republicans, and all other voters of Massachusetts, who intend to support the Republican candidates, are invited to send Delegates to a State Convention to be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, WEDNESDAY, Sept. 16, 1891, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various State offices to be filled at the next November Election.

Basis of representation: One Delegate for every one hundred and fifty votes and for every fraction as large as seventy-five cast for Republican Presidential Electors in 1888, in each town and ward of a city; but every town and ward of a city is entitled to at least one Delegate.

In order that a complete list of Delegates may be prepared by the Secretary, all caucuses for the election of Delegates must be held at least one week before the day of the Convention.

Admission to the hall will be by ticket, and each Delegate must be provided with a credential bearing only his name.

J. O. BURDETT, Chairman.
J. OTIS WARDWELL, Secretary.
E. A. BUFFINTON, Asst. Sec'y.

TRADE MARK

"COTTOLENE"

On account of the general and growing prejudice against the use of lard in cooking, and because of the discovery that cottonseed oil, a pure vegetable article, is far superior to lard and must supersede it. Messrs. N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., of Chicago, now offer to the public their own discovery

"COTTOLENE"

A VEGETABLE LARD as a substitute for the animal material.

Packing house lard as now manufactured is a highly objectionable food product. It is a question whether Hog Lard as ground out and melted up in our large modern packing houses located at the different stock yards in the United States, is either healthful or clean.

"COTTOLENE"

on the other hand is pure, refined, and clarified cottonseed oil with an admixture of choice selected beef suet. It contains no other ingredients, and is recommended and endorsed by the most eminent physicians and chemists as far more wholesome and digestible than lard. For further information about

New Moon, Sept. 3, 3.16 A. M.

Suburban Press Association.

The members of the Suburban Press Association enjoyed a pleasant outing on Monday. On the invitation of Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, they visited his beautiful summer residence at Nahant. Leaving Boston at 9.45 by the Nahant steamboat, on invitation of J. A. Flanders, general agent of the line, they had a fine, cool sail down the harbor, although it was very hot and muggy in Boston.

On arriving at Nahant they were met by Mr. Lodge at the landing, who escorted them to his fine residence on the bluffs at the southeasterly section of this beautiful town. Here we found it very cool and comfortable, although it was an unusually hot day. We should say that Mr. Lodge has one of the coolest residences anywhere within twenty-five miles of Boston, and the sea view is magnificent. Being nearly surrounded by water it matters but little which way the wind blows, it comes cool and refreshing across the briny deep.

After enjoying the attractive lawns, flowers and the dashing of old ocean's waves against the rocky cliffs which border his grounds, the members were invited to partake of a bountiful collation served in the large billiard hall. It was so attractive and nicely served that all greatly enjoyed the occasion. Some fifty members were present and partook of his hospitality; and although no public speeches were made by the congressman or members of the Suburban Press Association, still there was a feeling by all present that the happy hours that they had passed at the host's beautiful seaside resort, would be long cherished.

About half-past two the editors bade Mr. Lodge good-bye and took barges for Lynn, where they had been invited by Messrs. Hastings & Sons, of the Daily Item, to spend a few hours in viewing the various points of interest in that rapidly growing shoe city.

On arriving at Lynn they found two electric cars at their disposal. Upon these they were carried to the various parts of the town. First they visited the west end, the old part of the city, where are located the extensive electric works of the Thomson-Houston Company. On their return they called on the Daily Item, and were shown through this excellent printing office, which is one of the finest in the State outside of Boston and highly creditable to the management. The rapidity and excellency with which the mechanical part of the work was performed were greatly admired.

The members then took the electric cars for the Lynn Forest park, where the lakes are located which supply the city with water. On their return they stopped a few minutes to examine a rich floral design—"Gates Ajar"—at the entrance to Pine Grove cemetery; one of the most perfect pieces of work to be found in this State.

After riding two hours under the careful espionage of Mr. C. E. Foster, who has been for many years the successful manager of the Lynn street cars, we were left at the Revere Beach railroad station; whence we started for home. But on arriving at the Point of Pines about one-half of the members stopped over to enjoy the lovely attractions at this favorite summer resort, through the kindness of its managers, Messrs. Charles H. Thayer and A. A. Pocock. One of the finest fish dinners, we think, that was every served to a company was enjoyed at the Pines by the editors. Everything was of the first quality and cooked to a nicety. We can safely advise any of our readers who wish for a fish dinner to go to the Point of Pines. The managers understand the knack, and serve fish dinners to perfection.

New Schoolhouse.

The bids for the new schoolhouse for South Quincy, confirms the view which was taken by the PATRIOT a short time ago,—the total cost of the building, including the land, heating, furnishing, etc., would be over $40,000. The plans will now have to be changed so that the schoolhouse can be built for $31,500. It is hoped that they will be cut in such a way that additional appropriations will not have to be asked for a system of heating and also for furnishing the building.

So Does Quincy.

"No, these suburban cities are getting along very well by themselves. They are fully capable of managing their own local affairs. They like their names, their independence and the rights they now enjoy. As tails of the kite labelled Boston, they never would be happy."

Thus speaks the Somerville Journal regarding the proposition of Boston to absorb all the smaller places within a dozen miles of that hamlet. Waltham has a hard earned and world wide reputation which her people are not exactly anxious to give up, even for the honor of being ruled by the gang that controls the ambitious Hub. No, thank you. Waltham is very modest. It wants but little here below, but does want all to itself its spotless name and present pure government.—Waltham Tribune.

Come in Pears.

A Quincy lady was surprised the other day, by the remark of a little boy, who said: "The next pear I get, I am going to keep and let it rot." "And what are you going to do that for?" she enquired. "Because sister says rabbits come in pairs and I want some."

—The assessors of New Bedford report an increase of valuation of $1,500,000. The rate for 1891 is $16.30.

—Bunker Hill lodge and encampment, I. O. O. F., of Charlestown, will visit Plymouth on Labor day.

—Whitman's tax rate for 1891 is $18.20.

Quincy Yacht Club.

A pretty whole-sail breeze from the southwest greeted the Quincy yachtsmen Saturday in the club race for cash prizes and the sail off in the third class championship.

The first gun was fired at 2 o'clock and in five minutes the first class was under way, the Erin leading the way, being followed closely by the Posy and Adolph, the only two other boats to start in this class. The Erin had a good lead until after rounding the buoy off Hull when she fell into second place, the Posy coming to the front which she held, finishing with a lead of about three minutes.

There were but two entries in the second class, the Vision and Helen, who crossed the line in the above order. The Vision kept her lead and had an easy victory.

In the third class there were four entries the Flora Lee, Freak, Mab and Bess, who crossed the line in the above order.

The Flora Lee was doing good work and had a good lead when she parted her peak halyards and dropped to third place.

For the first time round the Freak and Bess were close together and at Sheep Island buoy each claimed a foul on the part of the other. The Freak however finished first and if the protest entered is not allowed will win the championship cup in her class, also the cash prize.

The judge was W. H. Shaw.

Championship Sail-offs.

The sail-offs in the first and second classes of the Quincy Yacht Club for the championship, occurred Tuesday afternoon.

The White Fawn, Erin and Posy had each secured legs in the first class and each was on hand to fight it out. The Erin had the best of it at the start, but the parting of her throat halyard blocks when off Princess Head caused sufficient delay to lose the race. The White Fawn then had a walkover, while the Erin had a brush with the Posy, beating her by actual time but losing on corrected time.

The Madge and Idler were on hand to contest for the honors in the second class, and the Helen was entitled to but did not put in an appearance. It was a very close race as the summary shows, the Idler winning the championship by only 29 seconds.

Coming Races.

There will be an open regatta at Lynn on Labor day. Good cash prizes are offered.

The Savin Hill club goes on its annual cruise, Saturday, Sept. 5. It will go into camp on Chandler's island off Downer Landing, making it the headquarters until the following Tuesday.

The Firemen's Game.

The two nines composed of members of Hose 1 and J. Q. Adams Chemical 2, played a return game of ball Saturday afternoon upon the St. John's grounds at Quincy Adams and although the Hose nine put up a much better game than the previous one they were defeated by a score of 7 to 6.

Previous to the game, Dr. Goff, the patent medicine man, who has a tent on the grounds, came forward and offered a handsome meerschaum pipe for the boys of the central station to contest for. The contest was the throwing of a base ball. Barry, Collins, Farrell and White entered but Jimmy Farrell was the lucky man throwing the ball some forty feet beyond the others. The distance thrown by Farrell was 330 feet.

The game was much more interesting than the first game, as the boys had a little more practice. Barry seemed to have regained his old time skill in handling the sphere and so effectual was his work that not a hit was made off him, and at one time it looked as though the central boys had things their own way, but poor base running lost them the game.

At the close of the game an adjournment was made to the central station where steamed clams, clam-chowder had been prepared, and as the game had sharpened their appetites the clams reached the spot. Cigars were not forgotten and the early evening hours were spent in a social manner. The score:

New High Schoolhouse.

A special town meeting was held in Rockland Tuesday evening, when a committee was appointed to present plans and specifications for a new high school building. It was voted to borrow $8000 to widen Union street, to place a clock in the Congregational church tower, and $1,500 was appropriated to settle claim of John Foster for damages.

Making Trouble.

Wednesday afternoon three men who had enough liquor down to feel like making trouble entered the laundry of Quong War Lee on Hancock street and inquired the cost of washing three shirts. The Chinaman gave them the desired information when they began to insult him by using hard names. This angered the celestial who struck one of them a powerful blow, knocking him into the street. He picked himself up and again entered, when the three started to do Quong up. He was game, however, and grabbed a hatchet and aimed a blow at them, which if it had struck one of them in the head would have laid him low. Mr. Jones here appeared upon the scene and ordered them out. They, however, seemed loth to go and would have doubtless made more trouble but for the appearance of the blacksmith from J. R. Wild's who had quietly appeared to back up Mr. Jones, seeing which the three roughs wended their way up Hancock street.

Burdett College.

"Nothing succeeds like success." This is an old saying which can well be used when speaking of the Burdett Business College, 694 Washington street, Boston. The proprietors, Messrs. C. A. & F. H. Burdett, are young men who from a humble and comparatively unknown beginning, made only a few years ago, have gradually brought their institution toward the front until it now stands in the very foremost ranks of similar colleges in the country.

The success of the Messrs. Burdett has been nothing short of phenomenal. Within five years, owing to vastly increasing business, they have been obliged twice to move to more extensive quarters. They have recently located at the corner of Washington and Kneeland streets, where they have secured nearly one-third of an acre of floor room, conviently arranged to suit the requirements of their business.

Bridgewater Normal.

The new building for the State Normal School, Bridgewater, Mass., will be dedicated on Thursday, Sept. 3. The exercises will begin at 10.30 A. M. The architects, Messrs. Hartwell and Richardson of Boston, will present the building to the Board of Education. His Excellency Governor William E. Russell is expected to be present.

An address will be given by the Secretary of the Board, Hon. J. W. Dickinson. The dedicatory address will be delivered by Richard Edwards, LL. D., of Springfield Ill. Short addresses by other speakers. Music by the Temple Quartette of Boston.

Still In It.

Henry M. Faxon is not to give up yachting just yet, as many were led to suppose when he sold the famous Rocket. He has purchased the new boat built by Henry Hutchins and she is being fitted at Lelois' yard, and may be in readiness for the Massachusetts regatta on Thursday.

The boat is 19 feet over all, 16 feet water line, 9 feet beam, and 16.03 sailing length.

Annual Meeting, G. M. A.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Granite Manufacturers' Association was held Tuesday evening and the following officers elected:

President,—Thomas F. Burke.
Vice President,—John Q. A. Field.
Secretary,—Fred Badger.
Treasurer,—Marshal P. Wright.
Executive Committee,—The President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer (ex officio), Thomas McDonnell, James Elcock, John Lavers, F. Barnicoat, Charles Badger.

The President's Salary.

President Harrison's salary is paid to him in monthly instalments of $4,166.67. The warrant is brought to the White House by a special messenger from the Treasury Department, and after the President has indorsed it as he would an ordinary draft his private secretary deposits it at the Columbia Bank. When the President is out of town the draft is mailed to him. The same method is pursued in paying the Justices of the Supreme Court.

HOUGHS NECK.

Sunday was a great day at Houghs Neck. The largest crowd of the season was there. It was difficult to get seats on the electric cars.

Wednesday afternoon a young lad named Dolan accidently fell off of Mears' wharf into the water and although a crowd saw the accident no one seemed to go to his rescue. The boy had gone down twice when he was rescued by Capt. Joe Veader and taken ashore in an exhausted condition.

Dr. Ripley and family of Brockton are at Racoon island, off Houghs Neck, this week.

Rock Island.

The islanders are enjoying this season very much, as the new road obtained by exchanging right of way over the Littlefield estate for one over the Prescott estate, with the Manet Land Company, gives them a much shorter route and enables the building of a permanent bridge over the creek.

Mr. Barker of Brockton has built a very nice 2 1-2 story house. Mr. Curtis of Canton a 2 story cottage. Mr. Humphrey of Dedham has put on a large addition to his cottage. Mrs. Goldthwait of Brockton, has built a double cottage. Mrs. Luther Belcher of Stoughton, who owns a large part of the island has sold several lots and more houses will be erected next season. This quiet retreat cannot help being appreciated by those seeking a site for a home cottage away from the vast crowds that go to the Neck.

Mrs. J. Walter Bradlee entertained the Milton Cantata club at her cottage last week. Sixty-five members came in four, two and one horse conveyances, to enjoy the sea breeze and partake of clam juice. Eighty-seven people sat down and partook of Mrs. Bradlee's shore dinner. Commodore Peter Turner was in his element as he took aboard his yacht, the "News Boy," so many ladies for a sail. The gentlemen played billiards, cards, etc. The ladies amused themselves with tennis. All were photographed and remained until about 10 o'clock, driving to Milton by moonlight, fully impressed with the beauties of Rock Island and the hospitalities of their hostess.

Death of Officer Kelly.

Night Watchman Joseph H. Kelly died at his residence on Quincy avenue Tuesday morning after a lingering illness in his thirty-ninth year.

He was born in this city and was the son of the late James and Mary D. Kelly, and has always resided here.

Something like six years ago he assumed the position as night watchman for the Centre district, and although he has been a sufferer from consumption for nearly fourteen months, he has stuck faithfully to his duty which his health obliged him to relinquish some few weeks ago, since which time he has been confined to his home.

He leaves a widow and an infant child but five weeks old.

The funeral of Joseph H. Kelley took place Thursday afternoon from his late residence on Quincy avenue, Rev. John Ramsey officiating. It was largely attended by his many friends. The police department of the city remembered him by sending a large floral pillow on which were the words "still watching," and the store keepers along his beat sent a handsome floral cross. The interment was at Mount Wollaston.

Boston's Public Garden.

The West Roxbury News, speaking of the Public Garden, says, "It is in finer condition this summer than ever before and its beauty and freshness attract crowds of admirers. The display of ferns, palms, cacti and other tropical plants is for this section really wonderful. The procession of flowers from early spring to late Autumn is an interesting study and under Mr. Doogues skilful hand the variety seems almost endless. The variety of conceits and devices, too, in the arrangement and display of the flowers seems almost endless. One of the most pleasing views in the garden is where the flowers are subordinate and the visitors gets a sweep of lawn and of water with graceful willows drooping on its border. It may be questioned whether the jungle of brilliant flowers at the base of the equestrian statue of Washington, is in accordance with the purest taste. The statue, one of the few in Boston that is entirely satisfactory, is large, and impresses with the idea of weight, and its massive base should not be concealed with tall growing flowers, which suggest a depth of soft and yielding earth. It is hard to over-estimate the esthetic value of this lovely spot."

Masonic Visitations.

District Deputy High Priest John A Fogg of South Weymouth announces that he will visit the chapter lodges in the seventh capitular district upon the following dates: Joseph Warren, Provincetown, Friday, Sept. 4; Harmony, Bridgewater, Friday, Sept. 18; Samoset, Plymouth, Thursday, Oct. 1; Orient, Hyannis, Thursday; Oct. 15; Pilgrim, Abington, Friday, Oct. 23; Sylvester Baxter (special) West Harwich, Friday, Nov. 6; Pentalpha, East Weymouth, Tuesday, Dec. 1.

Stamped out —blood-poisons of every name and nature, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It's a medicine that starts from the beginning. It rouses every organ into healthy action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses and renews the whole system. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. For Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands, Tumors, and Swellings, it's an unequaled remedy.

Don't think it's like the sarsaparillas. They claim to be good for the blood in March, April, and May. "Golden Medical Discovery" works equally well at all seasons. And it not only claims to do good—it guarantees it. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

You pay only for the good you get.

The National Conservatory.

The annual entrance examinations of the National Conservatory of Music, Nos. 126 and 128 East 17th street, New York, will be held as follows:

Singing—Sept. 24 and 25.
Violin, 'cello, contrabass, harp, and all other orchestral instruments—Sept. 28.
Piano and organ—Sept. 29.
Orchestra—Nov. 2.
Chorus—Nov. 4.
Operatic chorus—Nov. 2.

The object of the National Conservatory of Music being the advancement of music in the United States through the development of American talent, applications for admission into the classes of the Conservatory are hereby invited. It is expected that positive aptitude shall be shown by the candidates for admission, without regard to the applicant's stage of progress, and that his or her desire to receive the instruction imparted in the Conservatory shall be the outcome of a serious and well-defined purpose. The successful candidates will enjoy the tuition of the best teachers that can be engaged, and after graduation will be afforded opportunities of making known their accomplishments, thus securing engagement. Instructions in all branches will be given free to students whose talent and circumstances warrant it. The course embraces tuition in singing, operatic and miscellaneous, solfeggio, stage deportment, elocution, fencing and Italian, piano, organ, harp, violin, viola, 'cello, flute, oboe, clarionet, bassoon, French horn, cornet, trombone, harmony, counterpoint and composition, history of music, chamber music, orchestra and chorus. CHARLES I. PARDEE, Sec.

Fruits and Vegetables.

In the city, as soon as green vegetables are brought into the house, they should be thoroughly washed in cold water, and then laid in a cold, dark place, preferably in the ice-box or in a cool cellar. Celery and lettuce thus treated, thickly covered with a wet cloth, and protected from the air, will be excellent.

Fruits keep best in a cool, dry place. Dampness, which nourishes the freshness of vegetables, makes fruit mold. Changing temperature are injurious to all foods; in warm, damp summer days meats sometimes spoil in transit from market to the purchaser's ice-box; the same danger exists in summer, when to spare heat a cool oven is used for baking meat, just enough warmth being generated to taint it without cooking it.

A Lake Under a Cornfield.

A traveler who has visited Bibb county, Ala., says that near a place called Six Mile creek he came across a field of two or three acres which is over a subterranean lake. The soil is only three feet thick, and you can take a sharp pole and drive it through to the water beneath. Half a dozen men jumping up and down at once in any particular spot will make the cornstalks tremble for ten or twelve feet around.

In the driest seasons that patch of ground is always damp, not to say wet, and it can be distinguished from the rest of the field by the luxuriant dark green of the corn planted on it. In one place a well has been dug to the water, and they say a 100-foot line failed to reach the bottom. The water is clear and cold as that of an ordinary spring, but there seems to be no current.—New York Sun.

Would Save Trouble.

A prominent citizen was seen digging a large hole in his front yard.

"What are you doing?" some one asked.

"Making a pond."

"What, a pond in your front yard? What do you mean?"

"I am doing it as an accommodation. It was so much trouble for the boy who carries papers to throw them in a little puddle during wet weather that I concluded to make a pond for him. He is a gentlemanly fellow and I want to assist him all I can. This pond will save him much trouble.

Golden Plume.

When the midsummer wanes and the fields are loud
With pipe of crickets, and bees a-boom;
When the blackberries ripen along the hedge,
And the grass is brown at the thickets' edge,
When the rose that reigned by the roadside gray
Has flung her crown to the winds away,—
He comes, to rule with a lordlier sway,
Prince Elecampane of the Golden Plume.

The burdocks under his feet are bowed.
They crouch and cower to yield him room.
He turns from the reaching venturous vine,
The daisies that dim in his shadow shine.
He nods with a arrogant, easy grace
To the breeze that timidly fans his face.
He is lord of the realm for a little space,
Prince Elecampane of the Golden Plume.

The thistles he woos,—she is flushed and proud,
As she leans to her lord in the fragant gloom.
His heart is haughty, his hopes are bold,
The blood in his veins is a wine of gold.
He lifts his face to the cloudless sky,
And the summer wanes, and the days flit by,
And he scarce remembers that he must die!
Prince Elecampane of the Golden Plume.

The asters shine in a starry crowd,
The goldenrod breaks to her perfect bloom,
And the sumach marshals his banners red,
And crowns her queen in the prince's stead.
He feels astonished, his strength decline,
He fails, he droops by the blackberry vine,
And cold in his veins is the ebbing wine,
Prince Elecampane of the Golden Plume.

The spiders spin him a silvery shroud,
The bees go buzzing abroad his doom.
He trails in the dust his shriveling crest,
And the faithless thistle laughs with the rest.
His reign is over, his splendor is spent;
He yields up his life and his crown, content,
And the loyal breezes alone lament
Prince Elecampane of the Golden Plume!

Household Receipts.

RASPBERRY TARTS. One egg, three tablespoons thick cream, one cup raspberry jelly, sugar to taste. Beat the egg, add the cream, jelly and sugar. Fill tart shells and bake quickly.

BAKED BANANAS. Allow one tablespoon of sugar and one teaspoon of hot water for each banana. Peel the bananas, split them in halves. Put them in a shallow dish or platter. Melt one tablespoon of butter in the hot water, and pour it over the fruit. Mix a little salt and spice or lemon juice with the sugar, sprinkle it over the top and bake about twenty minutes, or until brown.

SALAD SANDWICHES. One cup cold chicken, one cup cold boiled tongue, one-half teaspoon cellery salt, one salt-spoon cayenne, Mayonnaise to moisten. Chop the meat very fine, then rub with a pestle till fine, like meal. Add the seasoning and enough cream of Mayonnaise dressing to make it moist enough to spread easily. Put it between thin rounds of bread. Roll soda-biscuit dough thin as pastry spread with butter, roll another layer and put on. Cut out and bake quickly. Pull apart and spread with the mixture.

SPICED BAKED PEARS. Select handsome, smooth-skinned pears, and pretty colored ones, wash clean and place them in a baking pan, and over them sprinkle one pint sugar and add a pint of water, then cover with another baking pan until tender. Have ready, boiling hot, one quart good, pure vinegar, into which one quart granulated sugar, teaspoonful each bruised cloves and cinnamon bark has been stirred. When the pears have been bottled, pour over the hot syrup and seal. If care is taken these pears will, when opened, look natural and tempting.

WATERMELON CAKE. White part: One half cup of butter, one cup of powdered sugar, whites of three eggs, one third of a cup of sweet milk, half a tablespoon of baking powder, and three half cups of flour. Red part: One-half cup of butter, one cup of red sugar, yolks of five eggs, one-third of a cup of sweet milk, one tablespoon of baking powder, two cups of flour and one-half pound of seeded raisins. Put the red part in the centre of the pan and the white on the outside. Raisins may be introduced in the red part to represent seeds. Red sugar can be had of the confectioner.

ADULTERATION OF FOOD. The Massachusetts state board of health finds that in a list of 20 of the most common articles of food, the adulteration amounts to 32 per cent. "Canned goods were the especial prey of dishonesty, only one-seventh of the specimens being worthy of the seal of approval. Milk was also found to be badly adulterated. Curiously enough eight of eleven samples of coffee were reasonably pure; also a majority of the samples of spice, cream of tartar, molasses, and drugs. The samples of tea, cheese and maple sugar were not adulterated." Canned goods are so generally used that laws ought to be enacted of sufficient stringency to protect the public if enforced. Why not be as severe in this case as in that of imitation butter? Danger lurks in the canned article of food, while oleomargarine is harmless.

Anecdotes.

Irate customer—You said this cloth was a fast color, yet it faded out in two weeks after it was made up.

Dealer—Well, I don't think you ought to expect it to fade any faster than that.

"Don't forget, Michael, to do that errand I spoke of in the morning."

"No, sur; but will ye please to remind me if I forget?"

"But I may forget to remind you."

"Then I'll remind ye to remind me, if both of us forget.

Mrs. Bleecker (of New York)—The law gives a widow her third in Illinois, I believe?

Mrs. Wiggery (of Chicago)—Oh, no! I had to hustle for my third, just as I did for my first and second.

Jack—So you proposed and she asked you to wait?

George—Yes.

Jack—Well, what are you moping about? She's beautiful, good tempered, and rich—certainly worth waiting for, is she not?

George—Yes, but confound it, how am I going to wait? I'm dead broke.

Wayfarer—You said that if I sawed that wood you would give me a square meal.

Drollboy—Well, there it is.

Wayfarer—That! That's nothing but a soda cracker.

Drollboy—Well, if you ever had a squarer meal than that, I'd like to know what it was.

A Man Can't Do Them.

There is always something comical about a man's attempt to do a woman's work. And the fun of the thing is that a man never realizes that he cannot do it properly. There isn't a man on the footstool who does not privately entertain the opinion that if he should only set himself about it he could do anything better than any woman. But he can't and all the women know it.

He means well, no doubt, but somehow he doesn't seem to have the faculty.

His wife goes on a visit to her mother, and he keeps house. Now, he will tell Brown that he can cook a meal as well as any woman that ever lived; but if he should see Brown and some of the boys coming up to his house to dinner he would bolt the door and lie low until they went away.

He never can touch a kettle without getting soiled. He can't handle the fire irons without burning his fingers. He never thinks to hang up any towels; he keeps them on the floor where they will be handy. A man cannot do two things at a time. A woman will broil the steak and see that the coffee does not boil over, and watch the cat that she does not steal the remnant of meat on the kitchen table, and dress the youngest boy, and set the table, and see to the toast, and stir the oatmeal, and give orders to the butcher, and witness the way her neighbor is hanging out her clothes—and she can do it all at once and not half try.

Is there a man living who can hold fifteen pins in his mouth, and fit a dress waist, and talk over the scandal about the new minister at the same time? Of course there is not, and yet a woman can do it easily, and enjoy it, too.

A man will work diligently half the forenoon to find a shirt button, and when he has found it it will be three or four sizes too large for the buttonhole, and then he will begin to thread his needle. And then he will squint, and take aim, and sweat and swear, and the thread will slip right by the needle every time, and if he ever does get the needle threaded, it will be such a big needle it will split the button clean in two, and he will find himself just where he started from.

Man has done wonders since he came before the public. He has navigated the ocean, he has penetrated the mysteries of the starry heavens, he has harnessed the lightning and made it pull street cars and light the great cities of the world. Oh, yes, we are willing to admit that man has done his part, but he couldn't pour castor oil into a colicky baby without spilling it all over the baby's clothes to save his life. —Exchange.

Why the Trains Wait.

It has probably puzzled many a traveler, who flitting impatiently in a train has waited for the draw of a bridge to close which has been opened to allow some snail-like boat to creep up the current, why the rapidly moving train was not given the precedence, as it could swiftly hurry away. It is not due to the excuse that the boat cannot hold itself against the stream, for it can and does do this frequently. It is simply the application of the old common law principle of easement. The boats had the use of navigable streams long before railroads were invented, and when the latter bridged rivers they did so subject to the former's interest therein, and for this reason railroad trains are today obliged to stand back while the boats pass ahead. All modern conditions would indicate that the locomotive should have precedence of the steamer, and the fact that it does not show the tenacious grip of custom.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Mystery of Fashion.

New fashions for spring and autumn crop up like mushrooms in a single night. But how are they made, and who makes them?

Men laugh at the caprices of an unwritten code by which the outward line of beauty has become almost as variable as the occult course of the female mind itself; yet, though conformity to custom in the matter of dress shows no appreciable weight if cast into the balance against life's serious responsibilities, time and time again does this simple little problem perplex the scoffer to the point of absurdity. A man may still be honest in a hat of last year's shape; but to insist upon wearing it is to go heavily handicapped; the odds are ten to one that, from looking askance at him, his fellows will proceed to charge him with eccentricity, and end by grave doubts about his reason. He finds himself suddenly forced, some fine morning, to set aside his own taste for that of the whole civilized world, which agrees in thinking his brim an inch too wide. How has the world precipitated itself so swiftly to this just conclusion? The process is as startling as any transmutation of the alchemists; it defies augury, like the philosopher's stone. —From Scribner.

Good Manners and Good Morals.

We have to fall back at last for the standard of good manners and good morals not upon the few but upon the many. The masses of the people are unquestionably more critical as to morality than any exclusive circle; and as to the essentials—of good manners they are to be found more securely among the many than among the few. We have the high authority of Mr. Bronson Howard for saying that a Bowery audience is far quicker than a fashionable audience to frown on anything really immoral in a play. More than one English nobleman has been forgiven in American drawing-rooms for conduct which should have caused him, if known, to be summarily ejected from a Rocky Mountain mining camp. Howells, with his usual penetration, selects a rough Californian as the man who patrols the sleeping-car to be the self-appointed protector of the ladies. An unprotected girl may travel by rail from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and meet with less of rudeness or unkindness than she might encounter in a single evening, even from her own sex, at some very exclusive ball. The little social circles have their value, and a very great value; they furnish a part of the education and experience of social life. Where they happen to be under the leadership of a really cultivated and high-minded woman—like the late Mrs. John Jacob Astor, for instance,—they afford not merely a school of deportment, but of life. Where they are—as is quite as likely—as a different style of leadership, the results correspond. "He despises me," said Ben Johnson, "because I live in an alley. Tell him his soul lives in an alley." In all parts of the world there are women whose forms are covered with diamonds, but who still carry the habits of the alley in their souls. In the long run, the safety of our national morals and manners does not lie in any of the little social circles, but in the average sense and breeding of the vast public from which those circles are constantly recruited.—Harper's Bazar.

NEGROES IN HEAVEN. "I knew an Irishman in Amesbury," Mr. Whittier said, his eyes twinkling at the remembrance, "who was very much opposed to social equality for the negro. I said to him: 'But there are many Catholic negroes in Brazil, the West Indies and other places. Thy church accounts of them as it does of thee. And thee'll have to come to it in heaven. Thee'll have to meet the negroes there on equal terms.' I thought that I had silenced him with an unanswerable argument. He sat musing for a moment, then looking up at me, 'And can't the lord make them white in heaven, Mr. Whittier?'"—Boston Pilot.

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The Hollis opens its doors to the public for the season next Monday evening, Aug. 31st. McNally's farcical comedy "A Straight Tip" is the opening attraction, and James T. Powers and his excellent company of comedians have been in rehearsal the past week. An unusually good performance may be looked for as everything is new and attractive. Tickets now on sale.

Boston Theatre.

"Tuxedo" has had a most successful run the past week, and will continue one week longer. George Thatcher and his minstrels appear in white faces in this play, which is quite a novelty as heretofore they have been associated in the minds of the public with burnt cork. Following "Tuxedo" on Labor day, will be given the first presentation of "The Old Homestead" with Denman Thompson and his entire original company in the cast.

Boston Museum.

The 51st dramatic season at the Boston Museum begins next Monday evening, Aug. 31st. It is conceded by all, that the Museum has the largest and most versatile stock company in the United States, and is noted far and near for its presentation of the "Glorious Old Comedies" and standard plays. For the opening attraction, is announced "Ye Earlie Trouble" a romance of '76 written by the American author, Henry Guy Carleton. The costumes are unique, in keeping with the spirit of the play, and the scenery is entirely new. The comedy is in four acts, and the place New York in '76. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and every evening at quarter of eight.

Tremont Theatre.

On Monday evening, August 31st, Mr. Geo. F. Marion will make his initial bow, as a star, before a Boston audience at Tremont Theatre, presenting his original farce comedy entitled "Mr. Macaroni." Mr. Marion is well known all over the country as a character actor and Italian dialectician of rare merit. His original recitations—the Italian's version of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus and the George Washington cherry-tree story are excruciating bits of genuine humor. Mr. Marion's part in the new play will permit a display of his great versatility, making several distinct character changes, including a light comedy, eccentric, and two types of Italian character entirely new to the stage; also, a strongly drawn negro part. Manager Ludlow has shown excellent judgment in his selection of the company to support Mr. Marion. The costuming of the play will be elaborate, the music entirely new and catchy. The general care with which the production will be made leaves little doubt that "Mr. Macaroni" will be a success. Seats can now be obtained at the box office.

More Time.

Busy people always seem to have plenty of time. Their day is only twenty-four hours long, yet out of that twenty-four hours—fourteen hundred and forty moments—they find space for an astonishing amount of work. They are never afraid to undertake a new thing. They have always a few minutes to give to a friend. They will secure an hour for some congenial occupation. It is to the busy men you go, asking can they take part in this new project. Certainly; state what you would like done, or how you wish it, and they will lend a hand. Why, if you so desire, they will take time to tell you just what you ought to begin, and how to manage it. And when one piece of work is accomplished they pass to the next with perfect readiness, and a calm confidence in their own ability.

Yes, strange to say, the people who never have time to do anything are those who never have anything to do. They would start this scheme, take part in that transaction, if they only had a little more time. They would be so glad to pay these calls, only too delighted to give that help, to learn a language, or to read a book, but they cannot make the time. And while they lament their lack of it, all the time they had is gone, and their plans are still unfinished.

After all, what more time have the busy than the idle? Has not each of us today? Has not each of us all the time there is?—Harper's Bazar.

It Was on the Drummer.

A Griswold street tailor was talking to a drummer when a nice looking young man came in, and after a few minutes' examination of the goods he ordered a suit of clothes and left.

"Nice young man," said the tailor.

"Looks like it," observed the drummer.

"I make all his clothes," continued the tailor.

"Good pay?" inquired the drummer.

"Never pays for anything," said the tailor.

"What in thunder do you want to let him beat you for."

"I don't."

"How do you get your pay?"

"His father pays for him."

"What a chump the old man must be. Who is he?"

"I am."

The drummer thought it was time to go then, but the tailor insisted on the drinks and then ordered a very nice bill at sixty days.—Detroit Free Press.

BOTANICAL GARDENS. Those who have never visited the botanical gardens of Harvard University, Cambridge, would find much to interest them for a day's outing. There may be found many queer botanical freaks such as the various fly and insect traps, pitcher plants, etc., which are great curiosities in their way. The gardens are open to the public, and many ladies and children spend hours on pleasant afternoons in wandering about the winding paths and studying the varied specimens.—Somerville Citizen.

Sphere of Influence.

"The Missionary Herald for March has an article on the American "Sphere of Influence" in Africa, showing how much the United States has done by the slave-trade and the liquor traffic to increase the woes of the Dark Continent, and what she is doing for its redemption. The slave trade has ceased, but the liquor traffic, though not prosecuted so vigorously as a half-dozen years ago, is still a source of corruption. It appears that about 275,000 gallons of distilled liquors were withdrawn from bond in the year ending June 30, 1890, for exportation to five ports in Africa, and that the whole of this deadly stream flows through the port of Boston. The article in Missionary Herald also contains a report of the missions of the several societies in the United States that are laboring in Africa, the location and extent of their work, from which it appears that nine societies have, between the Mediterranean and Cape of Good Hope, 207 missionaries, male and female, occupying 359 stations and out stations, and are expending in this work, in all, $237,077."—Cause.

UNIQUE RAILROAD. Georgia has a unique railroad train, which runs from Chamblee up on the air line road out to Roswell, a distance of only about fifteen miles. It consists of one car, which is divided into three compartments, an engine without even a tender, the wood being piled up in the cab. As soon as everybody gets on the train starts. There is no preliminary bell-ringing or warning from the engine, but you are off, bumping and rolling around at the rate of about nine miles an hour before you know it. At different places along the line, at a road crossing, in the middle of a cotton patch, or cornfield, or anywhere a passenger presents himself, the little train will stop.

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding town for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood-purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap Rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses

SULPHUR Bitters

The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied.

Get it of your Druggist.

DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

Poetry.

Climbing up the Hill.

Never look behind, boys;
  Up and on the way!
Time enough for that, boys,
  On some future day.
Though the way be long, boys,
  Fight it with a will;
Never stop to look behind
  When climbing up the hill.

First be sure you're right, boys;
  Then with courage strong
Strap your pack upon your back
  And tug, tug along;
Better let the lag lout
  Fill the lower bill.
And strike the farther stake pole
  Higher up the hill.

Trudge is a slow horse, boys,
  Made to pull a load.
But in the end will give the dust
  To racers in the road.
When you're near the top, boys,
  Of the rugged way,
Do not stop to blow your horn,
  But climb, climb away.

Shoot above the crowd, boys;
  Brace yourself and go!
Let the plodding land pad
  Hoe the easy row.
Success is at the top, boys,
  Waiting there until
Brains and pluck and self-respect
  Have mounted up the hill.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Miscellany.

Sarah Gurney's Sharp Tongue.

All the little Pennsylvania village crowded into the meeting-house as soon as it was known that Ralph Kirk would preach, and when the service was over the decorous family groups paced more slowly than usual homeward, down the shaded sidewalks, discussing the young minister. A knot of stout matrons who had put on dignity with their Sunday black silks and gold watch chains, gathered around Miss Atwater, a stranger who was visiting in the village, gossiping solemnly as they walked.

"I have heard of the young man before," she said. "He has a church in Harrisburgh. He is considered there one of the most eloquent and zealous ministers in our communion."

"He was born here," said Mrs. Peabody. "His mother lives just outside the town. Everybody is proud of Ralph. But he has not been here for three years. The fact is," lowering her voice, "he was attached to Jeanie Gurney, but her mother would not hear of it. She insulted him."

"I should think it an admirable match for any young lady," said the stranger.

"So we all did. We are all fond of Ralph. But the Gurneys hold themselves apart as if"—

"Hush-h!"

"The speaker paused abruptly and glanced around. Mrs. Gurney, a tall woman with an ivory white complexion and black searching eyes, was crossing the street toward her. Jeanie, a faded, anxious-looking girl, was beside her.

"What did you think of the sermon, Mrs. Gurney?" asked Mrs. Peabody when the hand-shaking was over.

"Sermon—ah?" she hesitated. "Oh, well enough—well enough—for a young man. Poor Kirk has, however, the family feature—thick lips, drooping eyelids—sure signs of a taste for liquor. I should not like a man with such tendencies to have charge of my spiritual concerns."

"Ralph Kirk has never shown such a tendency," said Mrs. Tiverton, indignantly.

"Not as yet," calmly rejoined Mrs. Gurney.

Jennie looked at her mother steadily a moment, and then, without a word, left the group and walked quickly homeward. There was an embarrassed pause. Arrabella Twiggs began to talk about the weather. She was a shriveled, birdlike little creature, who dearly loved peace; whenever there was a flash of ill temper among her companions, she fluttered chirping about trying to cover it over with straws of commonplace.

"Did you finish your currant jelly yesterday, Mrs. Gurney?" she said anxiously. "Remember I want to send you some of our raspberries. Don't you need some help with your cakes on Tuesday? I heard you were going to have the house full of ministers from the Presbytery at Oakborough."

"No doubt you heard it, Arrabella. Could a woman lose a button from a shoe in the town, and you not hear it? Yes; I am going to have six ministers, and I shall lay in a big store of provisions. It behooves me to do it. Your country clergyman may have grace or power in prayer, or he may not, but he always has an enormous appetite."

They had reached the corner now, and the ladies with one consent, chose one side of the street, leaving Mrs. Gurney to pursue the other.

"What a savage, rude woman!" exclaimed Miss Atwater.

"Oh, no," said Arrabella. "She is not savage, and she does not mean to be rude. She knows that everybody knows that Ralph Kirk is no drunkard, that the ministers are not gluttons, and that I am not a prying gossip. Her bark is worse than her bite."

"Everybody says that of Sarah Gurney," said Mrs. Tiverton. "But if she can put so much venom into bark, what would the bite be?"

"She is a kind, tender-hearted woman," interrupted Arrabella, hotly. "She nursed me through diphtheria when everybody fled from me. Why need I care if her tongue is bitter?"

"Arrabella is right," said Mrs. Peabody. "She would give you her last crust if you were hungry; but she would cut you to the quick with some ill-natured speech as she did it."

"I have heard my father say," said Mrs. Tiverton, "that her grandfather, old Peter Vibbert had a black drop in his heart of ill will toward every human being. It is in the blood, I suppose."

"The Gurneys are wealthy?" inquired Miss Atwater.

"No. They have a farm as most of us have. But this same old Peter left a sealed package or box in the vaults of the bank, not to be opened for seventy years, and it has always been supposed that it contains jewels of large value or the title deeds to estates which have increased greatly in value. It is this vague hope of great wealth which has given Mrs. Gurney the feeling that she belongs to a Brahmin caste among us. The time when the box is to be opened is very near—next week, I believe. If there had been no mystery and no hope of a great fortune, Jeanie would have been Ralph's wife long ago."

Mrs. Gurney meanwhile walked home down the maple-shaded street alone. Why? Why, she wondered, did her old neighbors avoid her more and more each year? Even her children unconsciously, she saw, shrank from her. As she thought of it, something in her veins seemed to swell and choke her, and the tears rushed to her eyes. She was a warm-hearted impulsive woman. She had been a fond mother and a generous neighbor.

"If they choose to take offence at my innocent jokes, let them!" she thought angrily. "My bark is worse than my bite, and they ought to know it by this time! There was no cause for Jean to turn pale and walk off when I said that the Kirks had a weakness for liquor. There is every indication of it in their faces. I can see into character!" She remembered how her sharp criticisms of her neighbors had been applauded even when she was a child. "Sarah," her father used to say, "sees through people. Her wit has a sting in the lash." What mattered the sting? Sarah had always been satisfied with the quality of the wit. She was considered now the "smart" woman of the village, and the crack of her whip was the terror of her friends. She had but little education, and this keen insight into the faults of her neighbors was her sole title to intellectual superiority.

Sometimes, however, she had uneasy qualms of conscience. She had them now, for example. Ralph's sermon had deeply moved her. She was a woman of strong, religious feeling. It had come to her as a cry from one human soul struggling toward God to another. And yet, before she had left the church-yard, she had uttered a bitter gibe at the lad. She had always liked him, yet years ago she had driven him away from Jeanie by her malicious sneers.

"What ails my tongue that it must always be wagging?" she thought. "If I have a sharper preception of character than most folk, cannot I keep it to myself?"

She went to bed that night with a feeble resolve to give up the habit. But in her petitions for the "welfare of Zion" and the "conversion of the impenitent and the Jews and the heathen," it did not occur to her to make this little canker in her own character a matter of prayer.

Wednesday came, the day that had been looked for by three generations of Vibberts. The box which had lain in the vaults of the bank so long was taken out that morning, and carefully dusted by the cashier himself, while the teller and clerks stood around eyeing it curiously.

"I'd like to be at the opening of that box," said the cashier. "Some say it'll make the Gurneys millionaires twice over. They are the only living descendants of old Peter now. It has got to go to them by special messenger, Bill.

The box was not delivered to Mrs. Gurney until afternoon. She had been in a state of high nervous tension all day. She was not an avaricious woman, but there was a keen delight in these hazy visions of the future, which might become reality when that mysterious chest was opened—silk gowns for Jeanie, Bob at Princeton, tea-parties for the neighbors once a week, a trip "East" for the whole family. Perhaps she could double her subscription to the church organ; and there were those wretched Fowlers—she might be able to build a cabin and give it to them free! She was a generous woman. In her plans for the spending of her wealth, she took thought for every one of her old neighbors. She made hundreds of presents, and invented countless delightful surprises.

Six members of the Presbytery were with her that day. She was up by dawn, baking. What a dinner that was, she placed before them! Corn soup and chicken pie, cherry puddings, fruit cordials, and all the other dainties which a skilful Pennsylvania housewife concocts out of the lavish abundance of that fertile state. Mrs. Gurney sat at the head of her table, red, smiling and kind, planning to herself how she could send a store of good things to the homes of each of these poor servants of God. Yet something within her saw a sign of weakness or vice in each, and when they were gone she began to chatter about it. She could not resist the temptation to show off her keenness to Jeanie and Bob.

"Did you hear old Father Storer's account of the Polynesian missionary? I wonder if he thought anybody believed it? The Storers all know how to put fringe on to plain cloth! How ridiculous it is for that young preacher from Greensburgh to carry such a watch! Couldn't have cost less than a hundred and fifty dollars! I call that sinful extravagance in a poor clergyman!"

"The watch was given him by his congregation last Christmas," said Bob, curtly.

Mrs. Gurney was silent for a moment. Bob never admired her keenness as she thought it deserved. But she was excited, and the impulse to talk was uncontrollable.

"I wonder what salary Dr. Home gets from the church in Pittsburg," she said. "He is a mean, close man, or his eyes belie him." When he preached at the Ferry he screwed a higher salary out of the people than they had ever given before."

Jeanie shifted her seat uneasily. Bob broke into a jarring laugh.

"Mother, you put me in mind of old Dr. Carson in the hospital, who, they say, used to rub his hands with delight when he would discover 'a beautiful cancer.' I'm not specially fond of preachers, but these men seemed to me to be a lot of sincere good old fellows. But you have found the sore spot in each."

He lounged out of the house. Mrs. Gurney stared after him as though she had been struck an actual blow.

"Does the boy think I have a bad heart—his mother? It is only my keen insight, Jeanie."

But Jeanie did not answer. The box came an hour later. Bob returned, and he and Jeanie waited without, while their mother opened it in her own room.

"If it makes us rich," said the girl, walking restlessly up and down, "it will do me no good. It is too late."

"There is no money in it," replied the practical Bob. "People in those days laid by gold and silver, and there is none in it. I hefted it as I carried it in."

Then they sat in silence for half an hour. Bob broke in with a remark upon the weather, intended to convey his careless indifference.

"By the way, Jen," he added airily, "I met that preacher Kirk awhile ago, and he asked if he might call this afternoon. I told him to come ahead—all right."

"This afternoon?" Jeanie sat quietly for a few minutes. Then she got up, walked quickly to the glass, and stared at the face which had suddenly grown colorless. The blood rushed into it as she looked, her eyes danced, her lips quivered. "How wild my hair looks," she said, patting down the curly rings with shaking hands.

She had forgotten the closed door and the fortune behind it. The door opened. Mrs. Gurney stood on the threshold with a dusty package in her hand. There was a strange, strained looked on her features, and her voice sounded unfamiliar to her children.

"Here it is," she said. "You will laugh. After seventy years—"

She held out the package, and then, as if the weight was too much for her, staggered to a chair.

"What is it? Deeds?"

Bob put his hand upon it. The boy tried to speak with a swaggering carelessness, but his heart stood still.

"Don't touch it!" almost screamed his mother. "It is not money nor deeds. It is nothing which can benefit any human soul. The old man has written down all the vile slanders and horrible facts about the people in this settlement and left them to be published now, to disgrace and ruin their descendants. The Tivertons, the Peabodys, Arrabella's folks—all our old neighbors—"

"The old scoundrel!" exclaimed Bob, with a nervous laugh, in which his fortune disappeared forever.

"He lays his commands on 'the child of his that shall open the box' to publish its contents on pain of his curse," said his mother. She sprang to her feet and, vehemently gathering up the dusty papers, ran to the kitchen fire, and threw them on it in a heap."

"Let the curse come!" she cried. Then she went back hastily to her own room.

"Mother is badly cut up about it," said Bob, taking up his hat. "I never expected anything."

"No, nor I," said Jeanie, absently, her eyes straining down the road.

Mrs. Gurney, in her own room, fell upon her knees. "To store up malice after he was dead! To try to ruin unborn men and women because he hated their grandfathers! God of mercy! What blood is in my veins! It is Peter's spirit that is in me—not intellect!"

The world had stopped for her. Her soul seemed to shudder with horror. This was why she had found the cancer spot in the nearest friend. The poor ministers, sincere and good men, who sat at her table—how she had gloated over the meanness, the little fault in each. Old Peter's blood was in her!

"Lord!" she cried, "remember not my offence, nor the offences of my forefathers!"

Mrs. Gurney did not leave her room until late that day. When she did and came down to find her children, there was a wistful, tender look upon her face new to it. She had dressed herself carefully, too, as for some day of rejoicing.

Ralph Kirk was sitting on the porch with Jeanie. The girl's face was pink and fresh as the roses overhead. They rose to meet Mrs. Gurney.

"Mother," said Jeanie, "Ralph—"

"Yes; I understand. Thank God, I did not ruin your life, my child!"

Her old neighbors wondered much during the months that followed what had happened to Sarah Gurney.

"She never says a smart, bitter thing," said Mrs. Tiverton. "Her heart seems to be full of love to every human being. It must be death far off, coming to her."

But it was not death; it was life.—The Congregationalist.

A Lawyer's Big Fee.

The late A. T. Stewart was harassed by a certain treasury decision which vastly increased his payments of duties. His lawyer called one day about another matter. Stewart spoke in an exasperated way about the treasury decision.

"Let me see the decision," said the lawyer.

After reading it through he said:—

"This law speaks of 'all-silk' garments. Why don't you have a thread of worsted run into these goods when they are made abroad?"

"Will that come within the new law!" asked the great merchant.

"Certainly."

"How much do you want for that opinion?" asked Stewart, a few months later.

"Fifty thousand dollars," said the lawyer. And he got it. He was modest, too, but a dollar went farther in those days than it does now.

Stewart years after told his legal adviser that the casual suggestion made that day had been worth over $1,500,000 to the merchant.

So the $50,000 fee was not high.—New York Press.

The Saving of Waste.

Mothers sometimes mistakenly insist that the child shall eat all upon its plate, to prevent it from being "wasted." It ought to be needless to remark that this is not to be commended. A child should early be taught not to waste food, nor should he ever be permitted to render valueless that which may be of use to others. But to eat food when one has had a sufficiency, to keep it from being "wasted," is not the way to teach a child frugality. To force into the stomach one ounce more of food than it needs is to overtax it; and frequent overtaxing will lead to the rebellion of stomachs as well as of people. Then the services of the physician must be had, and before we can dispense with them the value of a barrel of flour is gone to save an ounce of food. This is not economy, neither is it common sense.

It is better to help a child to food two or three times than to load his plate so that he be in danger of leaving any. Thus may health and frugality be secured at the same time.—Health and Home.

It is known that wasps' nests often take fire, supposed to be caused by the chemical action of the wax upon the paper material of the nest itself. This may account for many mysterious fires in barns and outbuildings.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 5.

The convention closed on Friday evening, and during the day arrangements were made either for returning home or for extending the trip to some desired point the next day. Many wished or felt compelled to turn homeward; while 350 accepted an invitation to visit Duluth on Lake Superior; and 160 decided to go to "hell and back in fourteen days," as one of the editors, writing about his visit to the Yellowstone Park, expressed it, and the writer was one of those who wished to go to the hot place. Arrangements were accordingly made with the Northern Pacific to take the editors and ladies from St. Paul to Livingston and back. In fact it is the only railroad that carries its passengers very near the National Park, as the principle entrance to it is from Montana on the north.

Our party, numbering 160, was too large for the railroad to handle easily on one train in addition to its regular through cars to the Pacific coast. Therefore the excursionists were divided. Two Pullman cars were attached to the regular morning train, and two to the evening express. Those that left in the morning arrived at Livingston on Sunday evening, and the others on Monday morning. The distance from St. Paul was one thousand and seven miles; about 250 miles in Minnesota, 370 in North Dakota, and the remainder, 387, in Montana.

A long journey to take, although those from Massachusetts, numbering some twenty or more, felt that they were more than half way to this wonderful place, and the Lord only knew when they would get so near that hot place again. All from Massachusetts were in one Pullman, and being near and dear friends, the readers can judge that the time passed very pleasantly. Some big stories were told by "Bill White" and Campbell, which kept the party in good humor.

In taking such a long journey, it makes one, living in the little state of Massachusetts, feel as though it was a pretty insignificant piece of territory compared with the great states and territories in the West.

The great Northern Pacific railroad is a grand developer of the States we passed through. We found small villages, twenty to thirty miles apart, of 200 or more inhabitants, to large cities, like Fargo, in North Dakota, 252 miles from St. Paul.

This city is set down as having 10,000 inhabitants; twenty-eight hotels, twelve churches, four banks, six newspapers, three daily and three weekly, several monthly publications, three public halls, a United States land office, opera house, theatre, a court house costing $100,000, street railway, water works, two brick school houses, one costing $80,000 and one $15,000, gas and electric lights, three grain elevators with capacity for 250,000 bushels, a planing mill, paper mill, 250 stores, manufactories and all the branches of trade which makes a thrifty and prosperous city. It is the commercial centre of the "New Northwest," being favorably situated on the Red river in the center of the rich agricultural belt of the Red River valley.

The Northern Pacific runs through two of the greatest wheat growing regions in the world. The first is the hard-wheat belt of northern Minnesota and North Dakota, extending from about the center of Minnesota westward to the western boundary of North Dakota. This belt is about 500 miles long and 300 miles wide, and includes the famous valley of the Red river of the North. Here is produced the best wheat in the world, known as "No. 1, hard," a variety that can be grown in no other part of the United States. This wheat contains a larger percentage of gluten than any other, and makes more flour to the bushel and better flour. It yields from fifteen to thirty-five bushels to the acre.

Stretching away as far as the eye could reach on either side of the railroad, without a fence and rarely a tree, and with only an occasional house and barn, the nodding wheat waved in the breeze; indications on every hand pointing to one of the largest crops ever known. We passed through one farm of 28,000 acres, all but 3000 acres of which was planted to wheat, while forty miles to the north, we were told, was a larger farm; both under the same management. What would the New England farmers think of farming on such a scale as that?

Among the things of interest along our route were the large herds of cattle. At one point on the bank of the Yellowstone river, in Montana there was an immense herd. One of our pleasant companions, Mr. Howard of Natick, said there were 10,000 cattle by actual count. When we asked how he knew, he said Mr. Proctor of Gloucester, had counted them, and his word was as good as his note.

After such a statement and our own vision of the immensity of the drove, we had no wish to doubt Mr. Howard's veracity; and should be inclined to believe that several thousand had been missed in Mr. Proctor's count. We learned that they had been herded by the cowboys for the purpose of selecting the fattest and best for shipment to the East.

To show our readers how promptly justice is served to criminals in the West, we will give the following incident. At Billings, a small town of some twelve hundred population, a murder was committed in a beer saloon the day before we arrived. An old and inoffensive bar-tender was knocked down and killed by a tramp. He was soon afterwards arrested and placed in jail. The citizens were so aroused that during the night a masked and heavily armed mob broke into the jail, seized the half stupid man, who had scarcely got over his drunk, and hung him to a telegraph pole. The next morning the coroner cut down the body and held an inquest, at which the jury returned the following verdict:

"That the unknown man there lying dead came to his death by hanging, on the night of July 23, at the hands of persons unknown."

A Boy's Love for His Mother.

Next to the love of her husband, nothing so crowns a woman's life with honor as this second love, the devotion of her son to her. We have never known a boy to "turn out badly" who began by falling in love with his mother.

Any man may fall in love with a fresh-faced girl, and the man who is gallant to the girl may cruelly neglect the poor and weary wife. But the big boy who truly loves and honors his mother at her middle age, is a genuine knight, who will love his wife in the sear-leaf autumn as he did in the daisied spring. There is nothing so beautifully chivalrous as the love of a big boy to his mother.

The Willard School.

The large and beautiful building at West Quincy, known as the Willard school, will be opened to the public on Monday next—Labor day—from 9 A. M. to 4.30 P. M. This handsome brick building has cost the city about $100,000, and should be a pretty nice schoolhouse, and our citizens should on this occasion visit the building, carefully examine it, and see if there are any silver dollars sticking out between the mortar.

At 2.30 there will be music by the band, singing by the school children, addresses by the Mayor and chairman of the School Board and other prominent citizens, at which time the keys of the building will delivered to the School Committee.

If it is a nice day it would be a very pleasant trip for those living in the different wards of the city to take the street cars and enjoy a pleasant ride. They go often and directly by the door, making it very convenient for many of our citizens.

No Council Next Monday.

After a long conference after the adjournment of the City Council, Wednesday evening, it was decided to hold no meeting on Labor Day, City Solicitor Hayes having given his opinion that such a meeting would be illegal.

President Thompson, by agreement, will go to the Council Chamber on Monday evening, and on finding no quorum present will adjourn to Wednesday evening, Sept. 9th.

The Waltham city government is in the same difficulty and will adopt the same course to get out of it.

School Committee.

The first regular meeting in September of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening. Messrs. Claflin, Corthell, Crane, Hall, Keith and Roche were present.

Ward Three Schoolhouse.

The first business was the adoption of the following resolution:

WHEREAS—It is reported to this board that the proposals for the school house to be erected in Ward 3 are in excess of the sum appropriated by the City Council for said building.

Therefore be it resolved:

That the Board of School Committee hereby approves of such modification in the specifications endorsed by the board on July 18, as will suffice to bring the cost of said building within the appropriation without essentially changing the character of the structure.

VOTED, That the Chairman of the Board be instructed to inform the City Council of this action.

Home Labor and Material.

The following communication from John J. Byron was received and placed on file:

QUINCY, Mass., Aug. 10th, 1891.

To the Chairman of the School Board, Quincy.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of the Central Labor Union of Quincy, representing 2500 members of organized labor. It was voted to request His Honor the Mayor, Commissioner of Public Works and the Chairman of the School Board, that all work done on the Public buildings of Quincy, whether in repairs or construction be performed by residents of Quincy, and the materials for the construction of said buildings to be obtained in Quincy if possible. Trusting the request herein contained will receive just consideration in the matter of future contracts from the officers having charge of such matters.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN J. BYRON,
Secretary of Central Labor Union,
Quincy, Mass.

Public Meetings.

The next business to be transacted was the passing of the following vote:

That in order that the meetings of this board may be open to the public, the chairman be requested to be present at the next meeting of the City Council, and request the use of Council chamber for the meetings of the school board.

Inspection of Willard.

The sub-committee of the Willard school was authorized to make arrangements for giving the public an opportunity to inspect the building.

The meeting then adjourned.

Republicans Active.

There is unusual activity in the Republican ranks in this city this year, and a determination to "get there" this fall if possible. Headquarters have been opened much earlier than usual and it is no secret that an aggressive and determined campaign has been opened.

The headquarters were dedicated Tuesday evening when the members of the Ward and City Committee after a business meeting sat down to a banquet with a few invited guests. Among the latter were Mayor Fairbanks, ex-Mayor Porter, President Thompson of the City Council, Councilmen Gray, Bass, Newcomb, Jones, Hammond, Roberts, Bryant, Rinn and Moxon; Commissioner Ewell, City Clerk Spear, Assessors Mitchell and Kimball, and others.

After the repast there were speeches by President Merrill of the committee and invited guests all urging harmony and united and individual effort for the success of the party nominees. There was no boom for either Mr. Allen or Mr. Crapo, and only one speaker expressed a preference. It was evident that either would be acceptable and that Quincy Republican will work heartily for the election of whoever is nominated.

The Organization

This year is a strong one, being composed of many representative citizens and earnest workers, as follows:

President,—John F. Merrill.

Vice Presidents,—Albert Keating, John Shaw.

Secretary,—Arthur W. Newcomb.

Treasurer,—John R. Graham.

Finance Committee,—John F. Merrill, John R. Graham, Arthur W. Newcomb.

Executive Committee,—John F. Merrill, Albert Keating, John Shaw, John R. Graham, Arthur W. Newcomb, and chairman of each Ward Committee.

Ward 1,—Chairmain, Wilson Marsh; Secretary, Evart W. Adams; John F. Merrill, J. C. McGowan, Eben W. Shepard, F. A. Spear, Charles Johnson.

Ward 2,—Chairman, John Shaw; Secretary, Arthur W. Newcomb; John R. Graham, Albert Keating, James R. Wilde, Charles H. Very, Edwin W. Newcomb.

Ward 3,—Chairman, George O. Shirley; Secretary, J. N. Kelly; George Bowman, C. H. Grindell, W. S. Williams, Joseph Trepanier, Thomas Carson.

Ward 4,—Chairman, Charles L. Hammond; Secretary, Nathan Ames; John J. Werme, Charles LeClair, John C. Kapples, T. F. Burke, William Teasdale.

Ward 5,—Chairman, Charles R. Sherman; Secretary, F. E. Litchfield; N. G. Nickerson, W. J. Thompson, Thomas F. Mitchell, C. F. Wilde, A. L. Baker.

Ward 6,—Chairman, Daniel McGrath; Secretary, Frank E. Badger; Faxon Billings, Alonzo Priest, John Ramsdell, Henry W. Reed.

The Quincy Republicans

Congratulate themselves that the Democrats did not make gains in this city last year in their tidal wave which swept the state.

That if the result had been as satisfactory elsewhere Mr. Brackett would have been reelected. The Republicans increased their gubernatorial vote 146, against 110 for the Democrats, a reduction of 36 in the Democratic plurality. The following tables have been compiled by a young Republican and furnish considerable food for study.

—The grand jury for Norfolk County will come in next Tuesday, Sept. 8.

Mrs. Samuel T. Hayden of North Weymouth and Miss Maggie Caldwell of this place sailed Monday from Boston to St. John, N. B. They will be absent a fortnight visiting relatives in that city.

Mr. P. P. Kittridge has finished painting his house and stable on Washington street, and the buildings owned by him on North street, and the several estates are much improved. Mr. Hjalmer Thysenius of Everett who did the work has executed the same in a most creditable manner.

One of the largest ships that has ever entered Quincy Point was the Charles E. Balch, a large four-masted ship which arrived Saturday night with furnace coal for J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

Although the mackerel have left the waters around the Point bridge, the fishing is no way diminishing, and every day black bass weighing from three to five pounds are caught.

The sloop, P. M. Hebbard, collided with the schooner Chas. H. Balch Wednesday, off Sheppard's wharf, but neither vessel sustained any serious damage.

The J. M. M. A., a Hebrew organization of Boston, held their picnic at Lovell's grove Wednesday; about three hundred people attending. Thursday at the same grove the Germans of Boston held their picnic.

An Accident Narrowly Averted.

What might have proved a bad smashup at Quincy Point, Monday afternoon, was narrowly averted by the presence of mind of Motorman McLane, of electric car No. 18.

The car was on its down trip, having left the depot at 1.50, and had just passed the Quincy Point post office when the large double team of J. Gearin, which is employed in carrying crushed stone for the rebuilding of Washington street, became frightened at the steam roller, and dashed madly on the electric car track, towards the rapidly approaching car. Daniel McLane, the motorman of the electric car took in the situation at a glance, and quick as a flash he shut off the power and applied the brakes, which had the desired effect of stopping the car. He was not a moment too soon, for the next instant the wagon passed like a flash within half a foot of the electric, Mr. Gearin having succeeded in driving off the track a few feet ahead of the car. Had not the motorman succeeded in stopping the car when he did, the result would have undoubtedly proved serious.

Shipping at Quincy Point.

Arrived Sept. 1st, schooner New Boxer, Captain Patten, from Ellsworth, Maine, with 80,000 feet of lumber for A. Keating.

Arrived — Aug. 29, schooner Mentor, Capt. C. E. Perry, from Kennebec with 103,000 feet lumber for B. Johnson.

Aug. 30, schooner Chas. E. Balch, Capt. Crocker, from Baltimore with 1350 tons coal for J. Sheppard & Sons.

Accident.

The 8.13 train from Quincy, this morning, was delayed about twenty-five minutes by the breaking of one of the connection bars on the driving wheel. The bar broke in half and smashed the fireman's seat into kindling. He jumped just in time to save himself. The engineer stuck to his post and brought tne train to a stop.

The New Fountain.

We have heard that the fountain will not be set in motion until the money is sent in to complete the fund. A little now, from those who have not given and who can afford to do so, will help. The paving will soon be done. Come, good friends, be on the right side in your generosity.

WOLLASTON.

The Wollaston Riding club will meet on Labor day morning at the fountain at 9 o'clock. This will be the club's first meet of the season.

E. E. Hewitson and family of Wollaston who have been visiting at Digby, N. S., are to return home next Wednesday.

The marriage of Miss Cora B. Upham and Mr. Wilbur L. Scoville of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, was solemnized at noon, Tuesday, Sept. 1, at the residence of Mr. Charles H. Backus on Arlington street, Wollaston. Rev. David H. Ela, D. D., of Cambridge, officiated. After a wedding trip to Saratoga and Lake George, Mr. and Mrs. Scoville will reside in Boston.

The Ward Five Republican caucus to elect the several lists of delegates will be held on Sept. 8.

Miss Maud E. Smith of Chester, Ill., attending Mt. Holyoke College, is passing her vacation with her uncle, Mr. Horatio N. Holbrook, at Bellevue Park, North Quincy.

Ethel Pauline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Parker of Belmont street, celebrated her seventh birthday last Saturday, by entertaining about twenty of her little playmates from two to five o'clock, and was the recipient of several very pretty presents. After a collation and games, the children dispersed having enjoyed a pleasant afternoon.

The Wollaston Citizens' Committee met Tuesday evening and investigated the drunken disturbance which took place on Tuesday evening, Aug. 25.

Camp Wollaston.

Situated on a high hill overlooking the lake in South Wolfboro, N. H., is Camp Wollaston, the summer residence of Mr. Frank H. Armstrong and his family. It is a beautiful spot and has been the scene of many a happy occasion this summer, as a large number of their Wollaston friends and many others can testify. The Armstrongs are entertainers in the truest sense of the world and are happiest when the Camp is crowded with friends, as it has been all the season. Mrs. Charles H. Bridgham is a member of the company and makes an able assistant to her sister.

Rev. Frederick E. Dewhurst preached at the Wollaston Baptist church, Sunday.

Seccomb, Kekew & Son's nine defeated the Rice Kendall Co.'s nine 25 to 20, at Merry Mount Park, Saturday afternoon.

What the Wards Pay.

Frequently, the criticism is heard that this or that ward does not get its share of the appropriations; that the people pay taxes but don't get the equivalent. These complaints are more common from the outlying wards, and yet should the figures be examined carefully we think it would be found that Ward One was not receiving its portion. Certainly Quincy Centre does not appear as "citified" as one would expect to find in the heart of a city of upwards of 17,000 population.

But it may be asked on what does the writer base his conclusions, or is it mere surmising. Well, here is a table of the tax levy of this year, giving the percentage and the amount which each ward is assessed this year.

	Per Cent.	Amount.
Ward 1	36.3	$69,876.80
Ward 2	12.4	23,695.96
Ward 3	13.0	25,007.34
Ward 4	15.7	30,207.30
Ward 5	13.9	26,690.00
Ward 6	8.7	16,704.54
		$192,181.94
Resident bank stock		4,022.94
		$196,204.88

It will be noticed that Ward One will contribute $69,876.80 or 36.3 per cent. This is twice as much as any other ward; as much as South and West Quincy combined, and also more than Wollaston, Atlantic and Quincy Point together. Readers may judge for themselves whether one-third of the money is spent in the Centre ward, either for current or permanent improvements; for schools, for highways, or in fact, any department. Not only this year, but for the last five, what permanent improvements has the Centre received? Ward One's turn should come once in a while.

Mrs. George L. Miller and Misses Addie and Annie Miller have returned from Camden, Maine.

West Quincy people are asking if it is not about time that the Board of Health did something toward clearing the obstructions in Furnace brook. They say that the season is nearly gone and if not soon attended to it will be too late.

Mr. James T. Collins, who is employed at Burns & McCormack's stone shed, is laid up with a very sore eye caused by a piece of steel entering it.

A number of the young people of West Quincy gave George Berry a surprise party Monday evening, at his residence on Willard street, it being the anniversary of his twenty-third birthday. Games, music, dancing and supper made the hours pass pleasantly.

A benefit party was tendered to Mr. Frank Turgeon Tuesday evening, at which something like fifty couples participated. John Frazier acted as violinist, and William Burton as floor manager. About $20 were cleared for Mr. Turgeon.

The West Quincy Improvement Society held an enthusiastic meeting Wednesday evening at Donaher's hall.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Mary Lavers of South Quincy has gone to Jersey City, where she has accepted a position as drawing teacher.

The Quincy Electric Light and Power Company are running a power line on Water street, which will be continued into the quarries and West Quincy.

Mr. Joseph M. Glover is at his residence on Payne's hill for repairs. He has worked faithfully and steadily for many years at Quincy Point, formerly for D. Howard Bills and recently for J. F. Sheppard & Sons as weigher and clerk at their coal wharf. He is almost completely used up and needs much care and attention to build him up again.

Miss Elizabeth Hayes of Mt. Pleasant is visiting at Salem.

The Owls will play the stonecutters at South Quincy this Saturday afternoon. Duffy Bros. will be the battery for the stone cutters, and Gray and Dunn for the Owls.

Fatal Accident.

South Quincy was shocked Thursday by a fatal railroad accident to an estimable young man, Mr. Wentworth T. Roberts. Mr. Roberts has been a resident of the city for five or six months, during which time he has been a driver and clerk for W. H. Doble. He boarded with Mr. A. I. Dixon, a fellow clerk.

Thursday they were going to work together. When they reached the railroad crossing on Water street the gates were closed to allow the passage of an outward express. Mr. Roberts went under the gates while Mr. Dixon remained back. The former evidently did not see the approaching inward express, and his companion and Mr. Minchin the gate tender were unable to make him hear, although they did their best to warn him. Mr. Minchin made a grab at him, but was not successful, and just before the outward express had got by, the inward express scooped down upon the unfortunate man.

He was struck and thrown ahead and a little to the left about fifty feet and then slid about twenty-five more feet on to a freight track. This was at 6.32 A. M. The unfortunate man was taken into the freight depot and attended by Dr. McLennan, but the injuries were fatal and he died at 7.20, and the body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms.

Medical Examiner Gilbert was notified and he made an examination, and found that his left thigh bone had been broken and he had a slight scratch under the chin, but no other bruises were found; death doubtless resulted from the severe shock received.

Mr. Roberts was in his 23d year. His people reside in Milton Mills, N. H., and a brother works for Norcross, Mellen & Co., of Boston. The deceased is highly spoken of by his employer, fellow clerks and acquaintances. His route was on the "Old Plains" at South Quincy and to Quincy Point.

Mr. Frank Roberts, a brother of the unfortunate young man who met his death at Quincy Adams, arrived in this city at a late hour on Thursday, having come from Gardiner, Me. Mr. Roberts seemed very much affected at his brother's death, and did not attempt to view the body until Friday morning. Arrangements were made to take them Milton Mills, N. H., yesterday, where funeral services will be held Sunday.

Accompanying the body was a wreath from Mr. W. H. Doble; also, one from the clerks in the store, and a handsome pillow from the Q. M. C. B. Association.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly Valuation Figures.

As was intimated last week, the small tax rate of $13.60 for 1891 came as a surprise to the taxpayers, most of whom thought it would be from $14 up. It is far below the average of the rate in Massachusetts cities, those of Salem and Chelsea being $18.

The Tax Levy.

It will interest many to learn just how the tax levy is made up, and the percentage each bears to the whole. It is as follows:

	Per Cent.	Amount
City levy,	72.2	$141,563.000
Notes maturing,	17.3	33,835.390
Interest,	5.0	10,000.000
State (less polls $5,160),	1.1	2,175.000
County (less polls $5,160),	1.5	2,969.340
Overlayings,	2 9	5,662.158
	100.0	$196,204.888

Where the Gains Occurred.

The discrepancy noted in the increase of valuation last week was occasioned by the Assessors not including in the total gain, the gain in resident bank stock. This was $2,945 making the total gain for 1891, $749,420, instead of $746,475 as announced. There is usually a supplementary list in December but it is generally too small to take into account.

The total gain is less than in 1890 when it was $1,358,165, but the average for the two years is over one million dollars, which is a very rapid increase. The gain the past year was larger than in Salem with a population of over 30,000 and Chelsea with a population of 28,000. It was only $21,000 less than in Holyoke, and $261,000 less than in the large city of Lawrence.

Ward Five showed the largest increase in total valuation, with Ward Four a good second, and Wards Six, Three, Two and One following in the order named. The position of Ward One is explained by an unusually large loss by removal of personal property.

When the past two years are added together Ward One is without a rival for the largest increase; Wards Five, Four, Three, Six and Two following is the order given. It was five times as large as Ward Two, and three times as large as Ward Three and Six.

Ward One and Three are the only wards which do not show a larger increase than in the preceding year: Comparing the increases for 1890 and 1891, that of Ward Six shows the largest gain; it being $87,000 more in 1891 than in 1890, while in Ward Five which is second in this respect it was $45,000.

The following summary shows the gain for the year ending May 1 last, for the preceding year, and for the two years combined.

	Gain the Past Year.	Gain in Previous Year.	Gain in Two Years.
Ward 1,	$ 24,575	$666,650	$691,225
Ward 2,	72,825	60,325	133,150
Ward 3,	81,325	111,500	192,825
Ward 4,	193,375	186,075	379,450
Ward 5,	242,950	197,575	440,525
Ward 6,	131,425	54,400	185,825
City,	$746,475	$1,275,125	$2,021,600
Resident bank stock,	$ 2,945	$ 83,040	$ 85,985
Total,	$749,420	$1,358,165	$2,107,585

Real Estate.

When it comes to real estate separately Ward Five still shows the largest gain, with Ward One a good second, Ward Six third, and Wards Four, Three and Two follow in order. The order is the same when the past two years are combined, as will be seen in the summary below:

	Gain the Past Year.	Gain in Previous Year.	Gain in Two Years.
Ward 1,	$176,950	$148,775	$325,725
Ward 2,	55,975	68,700	124,675
Ward 3,	57,850	105,225	163,075
Ward 4,	66,950	170,525	237,475
Ward 5,	207,775	184,000	391,775
Ward 6,	124,225	55,650	179,875
The City,	$689,725	$731,575	$1,421,300

Personal Estate.

In gain of personal estate Ward Four takes the lead the past year, not only heading the list, but showing a larger increase than all the other wards combined. Ward One which made a tremendous gain in 1890, is the only ward to show a decrease this year. As noticed elsewhere, this is owing to the removal of about a quarter of a million dollars worth of property from the city since the last assessment. This fact confronted the Assessors the first of the year. While there was a loss of this amount by removal, it was largely offset by a gain of about $100,000.

When the past two years are considered together Ward One is easily in first place with Ward Four second and Ward Five, Three, Two and Six following. The following summary tells the story:

	Gain the Past Year	Gain in Previous Year	Gain in Two Years
Ward 1,	*$152,375	$517,875	$365,500
Ward 2,	16,850	*8,375	8,475
Ward 3,	23,475	6,275	29,750
Ward 4,	126,425	15,550	141,975
Ward 5,	35,175	13,575	48,750
Ward 6,	7,200	*1,250	5,950
City,	$56,750	$543,550	$600,300
Resident bank stock,	$ 2,945	83,040	$ 85,985
	$59,695	$626,590	$686,285

Single and Property Polls.

The list of polls show a very good gain also, the total being 5,160 against 4,641 in the preceding year. Of the total of 5,160, there are 3,831, or 74 per cent., who will pay a poll only, while only 1,329 of the poll taxpayers have property, real or personal. The total number of taxpayers has not been ascertained.

Ward 4 has the largest number of polls, and Ward 3 comes second, and the position is the same in the subdivisions in the summary below:

	Single Poll.	Property Poll.	Total Polls.
Ward 1	696	246	942
Ward 2	556	196	752
Ward 3	981	249	1230
Ward 4	982	310	1292
Ward 5	335	186	521
Ward 6	281	142	423

Make two cakes, one with Cleveland's baking powder; the second with any other. Note the difference.

The Cleveland cake is fine grained, keeps its natural flavor and moisture; "the other" is coarse grained, as if the sugar was too coarse, soon dries out and becomes husky.

Cleveland's leavens best because its strength is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, not by ammonia or alum.

CITY COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the City Council was held Thursday evening. Sixteen members answered to the roll call, but others soon came in, and the absentees were Councilman Drake, Little, Morton and Pratt.

Traverse Jurors.

The first business was the drawing of three traverse jurors for the court which comes in at Dedham on Monday. The duty fell to Councilman Bass and he drew the following: Adam S. Vogel, Benjamin F. Crane and George Bowman.

The Proposed Schoolhouse.

The following communication was received from Mayor Fairbanks:

James Thompson, Esq., President of City Council:

SIR: The Council on July 27th appropriated $31,500 for the erection of a schoolhouse on Brooks avenue, according to the plans approved by the Council and School Board.

The Council also adopted an order that his honor the Mayor be requested to advertise for proposals. The latter order was carried out, and the proposals were opened at 4 P. M., August 22d, and ranged from $32,487 to $40,858, exclusive of blackboards and the heating and ventilating system.

A few modifications were then suggested in the specifications which would not impair the usefulness or general plan of the building, and new proposals were solicited, that the facts might be reported to the Council.

The new proposals were opened Saturday, Aug. 27, and were still in excess of the appropriation. I therefore return to the Council the plans of said building, and report that the order cannot be executed.

I would call the attention of the Council that a certain amount will be necessary for grading and employing a suitable person to see that any contract is faithfully carried out. Very respectfully,

H. O. FAIRBANKS, Mayor.

The School Committee also contributed the resolution adopted at its last regular meeting, which was reported in full at the time in the LEDGER.

Councilman Jones wished to hear from the Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings relative to the changes which had been contemplated in the plans. It was important that the building should be erected as soon as possible.

Councilman Gray moved that the communications be received and placed on file.

Councilman Fallon inquired if there were not other systems of heating and ventilating as good as the Smead at much less cost. Believed in giving other systems a chance to figure.

The communications were received and placed on file.

Councilman Moxon said he did not wish to be held responsible for a statement which he did not make: that the building could be erected for $26,000 or $27,000. He then spoke concerning alterations. Concerning the heating and ventilating system, there were only two or three that the State Board of Health would approve. The Smead was first in the field and was good. Others might be equally good. It was necessary in the plans that some system should be adopted as they were radically different. The Smead system for such a building would cost about $5000. The Fuller & Warren claimed to be equally good would cost less. As to other changes he was of the opinion that without making any exterior alteration or reducing the size, the cost of the interior could be reduced, to bring it within the appropriation. There were some improvements over the John Hancock building. The vestibule entrances were one which he hoped would stand, also the two teachers' rooms instead of one. The wainscoting of the rooms, the painting of the floors and other changes might be made.

Councilman Gray offered the following:

ORDERED,—That the order appropriating $31,500 for the erection of an eight room brick schoolhouse in Ward Three, approved by His Honor the Mayor, Aug. —, be and is hereby rescinded.

Councilman Jones thought such action would not be business-like. It was absolutely necessary to furnish accommodations and the Council had done wisely in making the appropriation. There was plenty of time in which to complete the building before next April. He moved an amendment to refer the whole matter back to the Committee on Public Buildings to modify plans.

Councilman Bryant called for the reading of the order making the appropriation.

ORDERED—That the sum of $31,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be and is hereby appropriated for the erection of a brick building of eight school rooms on a lot of land on Brooks avenue in Ward Three, and the City Treasurer is hereby authorized to borrow the sum of $31,500 in nine notes of the city of Quincy for $3500 each, the first note to fall due August 1st, 1893, and one note to fall due on August 1st of each year until all are paid, said notes to bear interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent. per annum.

Councilman Gray said he should claim that no changes could be made in the plans and specifications after the appropriation.

Councilman Warner opposed rescinding. He claimed the appropriation was not made to build according to any plans.

Councilman Gray said it was the understanding that the new building was to be similar to the John Hancock.

Councilman Moxon said the plans were substantially the same. Some changes were required by the introduction of the ventilating system.

Councilman Bryant thought it would settle the matter if the plans were changed and approved by the School Committee, so as to bring within the appropriation. That this might be done he moved to adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was put and declared lost. It was doubted and verified by vote of 8 yeas and 9 nays.

Councilman Gray said the Mayor has made an attempt to reduce the cost, but unsuccessfully. It was legal, right and the proper thing to do to rescind the order. He was further opposed to erecting a brick building in winter, and thought the city had seen enough of this folly in the erection of the Willard.

Councilman Duffield wanted to hear from Mayor relative to the legality of changing specifications, the power of the Mayor, School Committee and Commissioner of Public Works.

Mayor Fairbanks understood it to be the duty of the executive to carry out the wishes of the legislative. It was the opinion of the City Solicitor that the Mayor could not make any changes in the specifications without the sanction of the Council.

Councilman Fallon moved to amend the specifications, to include other systems of heating and ventilating.

The question, however, was on recommiting.

Councilman Jones believed the Mayor should be given authority to change plans and specifications.

Councilman Holden hoped that when the matter came up again that the Council would be informed as to the total cost of the building complete to the grading.

Councilman Bryant offered the following substitute.

ORDERED,—That the Mayor be authorized to make such changes in the plans and specifications of the new schoolhouse, as the School Board, and Committee of Public Buildings may approve of, to bring the cost within the appropriation; the Mayor to proceed when cost is brought within the appropriation.

The order to recommit took preference.

Councilman Jones favored the substitute of Councilman Bryant and was allowed to withdraw his amendment.

The question then came on Councilman Gray's motion to rescind.

Councilman Warner further opposed. Thought the cost could be reduced by using less costly brick, not concreting the basement, and leaving the hall unfinished.

Councilman Duffield wanted the Mayor to state whether he thought he could legally act under Councilman Bryant's motion if passed, and Councilman Sherman seconded the motion.

Councilman Moxon, Jones and Newcomb favored alterations in specifications.

Councilman Sherman moved the previous question, and it was voted not to rescind.

Councilman Bryant renewed his motion.

Minor amendments offered thereto by Councilman Moxon were accepted, and the order passed.

Adjourned at 9.12.

HOUGHS NECK.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock Monday morning some hoodlums broke the glass in the windows of the Italian fruit store on Bay View avenue and threw in some lighted matches which ignited the paper back of the counter. The occupants who were asleep up stairs were awakened by the dog barking and rushed down stairs and extinguished the flames, but did not before the showcase had been ruined. Twenty-five dollars will cover the damage.

A party from Boston came down Sunday in a small steam yacht, the Stella, and camped on Nut island, Houghs Neck. They started on the return trip about 6 P. M., but the storm drove them back and they lay at anchor near the wharf over night.

The captain of the gang of men engaged in breaking up the Brooklyn, next morning, heard cries of "Help, Save Me!" and hastening out found the yacht aground and the waves breaking over her. On top of the cabin sat the two gentlemen and three ladies of the party, each of the latter with a dog in her lap, weeping and crying for help. The party was rescued and took the train for Boston, leaving the yacht to be sailed home by an experienced sailor.—Brockton Despatch.

The Illumination.

Saturday was a red letter day at Houghs Neck, being the occasion of the annual illumination by the cottagers, and a beautiful day and evening they had. The public flocked down to see it and if they could not ride they walked, and it would be no exaggeration to say that fully five thousand people were congregated there.

Everybody within a radius of fifteen miles who owned a horse or had the wherewithal to hire one, made this their objective point. Vehicles of every conceivable description were there. Wagons with impromptu seats, hay carts and everything that had wheels was utilized by the owner in which to bring down his sisters, his cousins and his aunts.

The Manet Street Railway ran its cars every half hour and carried down hundreds, and turned away many during the early evening hours who were unable to hang on. Cyclers came down on their iron steeds, and many New England clubs were represented.

Afternoon Attractions.

The programme commenced early in the afternoon by a concert by Martland's Brockton band which was located near the yacht club house.

At 4 o'clock there was a series of sports which consisted of tub races and swimming matches for which cash prizes were offered which were captured as follows:

Tub race—first prize, $1.50, won by J. Moebs; second prize, $1.00, won by H. Moebs.

In the swimming match M. O'Connell, H. Moebs and H. L. Hoey captured the prizes which were $1.00, 75 cents and 50 cents.

With the gathering of

The Shades of Night

the cottagers began to hang out their lanterns and to light their candles; then it was that the beach assumed an appearance which viewed from Great Hill looked very beautiful.

Chief Ripley soon arrived with the Atlantic Chemical and a detail from the Hook and Ladder company, Deputy Manager of Police Langley and a squad of Quincy's finest.

The band took their position in the stand on the Plains and discoursed sweet music and everyone was happy and having a good time. Gallant youths and fair maids dressed in light summer suits, passed to and fro in the throng, while the old people looked on with smiling faces. Others sought the smooth floor of the Casino where a dance was in progress.

The delightful, refreshing breeze and the exhilarating ozone had a tendency to sharpen the appetites of the multitude, and but for the thoughfulness of the ladies many would have gone home hungry, as it was an utter impossibility for the hostelries to feed all who applied and many were turned away hungry.

The Illuminations.

Nearly all the cottages were trimmed with lanterns, flags and bunting.

On the Hill, the Moondyne, Guild's, Pleasant View, Lookout, Neversink, Nauset, Pink, Johnson & Doble's store, Yacht Club house and Stanley Mears displayed quantities of lanterns.

Capt. Boyd at the post office had his window prettily trimmed with flags and golden rod, in the centre of which was a large shield, on which were the words, "God Bless Our Country."

Thomas Downey, Jr., of the Globe had his cottage and grounds hung with lanterns and flags and candles burnt in all the windows. A transparency, 1891, was over the front gate surrounded with golden rod.

Mrs. Connor of the Brockton cafe made a good display with lanterns and had candles in all the windows.

The Idlewild looked very pretty with its streamers of red, white and blue and Chinese lanterns; a transparency, "1891," was also over the entrance.

The Mascot varied the scene by decorating with colored oil lanterns.

The Bayside displayed a Maypole of lanterns.

Mrs. M. E. Green of the LEDGER and PATRIOT had her cottage illuminated in a very handsome manner. In the windows were colored paper and candles, streamers of flags reached from the ridge-pole to the ground, and a pretty colored transparency, "Grand View Cottage," added materially to the effectiveness.

J. S. Murray had the grounds about his house strung with lanterns.

George Wilson showed a transparency "Harbor Light" and had his grounds brilliantly illuminated with lanterns.

John O. Holden's "Cedar Bluff" cottage looked very pretty with its lanterns.

Mrs. Emery of the Loretto had the front of her house covered with flags of all nations and colored streamers, while from the piazza hung hundreds of lanterns.

Other beautiful displays on the Plains were shown by the Bird, Daisy, Creber, Belle, Woodbine, Bijou, McDermot Castle, Winthrop Cafe, Sunset, Bay View, Porter, Tuckerman's, Florence, Danielson and Moondyne cottages.

James Maxim's and the Red Lion were illuminated by bright tar barrels which, however, did not outshine the brightness on the inside.

The Casino was covered from top to bottom with lanterns as was also Pierce's Hotel. Other noticeable illuminations in this neighborhood were the Beatrice, Little Jack, Whittemore, Furnald, Brady, Smith, Trio, Dooley, Robinson, Chiselhorst, Monopole, Schluewymer, Sunlight, Vogel, Webb, Chapman, Taber, Bullard and Veader cottages.

Many of the above cottagers besides illuminating had private displays of fireworks and one and all kept open house where refreshments were served.

Dr. George Frederick Brooks, the favorite tenor and well known concert organist has been engaged by Rev. Dr. E. Spaulding to give instruction in the art of singing to a large class of young ladies of his church. The doctor will have the valuable assistance of his young and beautiful wife, the popular and charming contralto (nee Miss Abbie T. Fuller), in his teaching.—Boston Herald.

Granite Fountain.

The grand and costly granite fountain in the Square is nearly completed, and will be dedicated when the small balance necessary to complete its cost has been paid in. The committee has by persistent efforts been very successful in raising funds. The following correspondence will show that money is not always forthcoming from the sources expected. It also corrects the impression that the design and details were unsatisfactory to Mr. Faxon, and shows why he has not contributed:

MR. CLAFLIN'S LETTER.

QUINCY, Jan. 22, 1891.

FRIEND FAXON: I learn with regret that your name is not associated with the work of erecting a fountain for Quincy.

In the days to come your home in the centre will be pointed to as that of the Faxon who for many years waged warfare against the indiscriminate sale of intoxicating drinks and the grand fountain so near your home, the stranger will say, is the monument of your victory?—Oh, no, says the truthful chronicler, he had nothing to do with that, he was appealed to, to aid its erection, but in its details it was not just as he would have it, and the influence of his name was against it, etc.

Now you do not desire that addendum to the encomiums on your good name, and why will you not show yourself broad minded enough to cast aside petty matters of difference and send a hundred dollars in their hour of need to the committee and place a worthy name in the scroll of enlightened Quincy citizens of whom it may be said that "to do good" was a part of their religion.

To me this matter is less by far than to you. I sink into an obscure place when this world's battles are over, but you will long be remembered as a man who was the "people's friend" and why not add, and the "dumb beast's friend" as well.

You should not pass this by as of small moment for the fountain will endure almost like the hills from which the rock was quarried.

I am on the committee and can tell you that the way is long and not strewn with roses, that the valiant few have travelled in getting the dollars for this worthy work.

You of all men should not fail to smooth the way, and lend a smile and give a dollar (100 or so) to keep the workers in heart and pocket.

Reconsider all your reasons for standing aside, and instead step out into plain view as the man noble enough to appreciate the efforts of your fellows to ornament our city, preserve our reputation and refresh our beasts of burden.

Truly yours,
R. F. CLAFLIN.

MR. FAXON'S REPLY.

QUINCY, Jan. 26, 1891.

DEAR MR. CLAFLIN: Your letter is at hand, soliciting a contribution toward the erection of a fountain near my home. You are wrong when you intimate that some of the details of the design are not satisfactory to me. I am perfectly reconciled to all the arrangements, and would also say I am delighted with the perseverance shown by those who have the matter in charge.

But, Bro. Claflin, you must remember that I gave three fountains to the town, and vandals demolished two of them; the town authorities making no effort to prevent the mischief or to punish the scoundrels who did it.

The fact is that when a public-spirited man erects a monument, there are many jealous people whose hearts are gladdened to see it defaced, and after my unfortunate experience, I am willing to forego any pleasure which might come from a share in the honor of providing the fountain now proposed.

Again, you must remember that the calls upon me for charity and temperance are frequent and urgent, and my surplus funds are very burdensome.

Another fact to bear in mind is that although "King Alcohol" has been dethroned in Quincy, it requires constant watching and expenditure to keep his Satanic majesty from again establishing a foothold here.

You refer to what people may say when my life's battle is ended. I sincerely hope that no glowing eulogies may be delivered on account of the good deeds I have not done, as is often the case over departed souls.

All I ask is to be remembered as one who conscientiously tried to do his duty when expending the income of the fortune with which he was blessed.

My desire is that the arduous work of the committee may be crowned with the success so justly deserved, and I trust that they will be enabled to realize the small amount required to complete the work without again appealing to

Yours truly,
HENRY H. FAXON.

PERFECT and uniform success in making finest food is more certain with Royal Baking Powder than with any other. Use it in every receipt calling for baking powder, or for cream of tartar and soda, and the lightest, purest, most wholesome and appetizing food is assured.

MARION HARLAND: "I regard the Royal Baking Powder as the best in the market. Since its introduction into my kitchen I have used no other."

MISS MARIA PARLOA: "It seems to me that Royal Baking Powder is as good as any can be. I have used it a great deal, and always with great satisfaction."

MRS. BAKER, Principal of Washington, D. C., School of Cookery: "I say to you, without hesitation, use the 'Royal.' I have tried all, but the Royal is the most satisfactory."

M. GORJU, Chef, Delmonico's, New-York: "In my use of Royal Baking Powder, I have found it superior to all others."

Cottolene

is a digestible, nutritious vegetable cooking preparation for use in all kinds of shortening, such as bread rolls, biscuits, cakes, cookies, and gingerbread, and for making every variety of pastry. Persons who have been unable hitherto to eat pies, tarts, and other similar food because of its indigestible qualities when prepared with lard, can now enjoy such delicacies without limit and without fear of disagreeable consequences.

Cottolene

is the best cooking material ever devised for frying anything and everything in the way of food, oysters, fish, meat, eggs, griddle cakes, doughnuts, croquettes, &c. There are imitations of Cottolene—get the genuine.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding town for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

A Trip to the Northwest.

The opportunity of a cheap trip to the West, offered by the National Encampment at Detroit, Michigan, was accepted by the writer and several other G. A. R. boys. We started on train No. 2 from the Fitchburg station at 12.02, three trains starting at about the same time. It looked lively and not unlike war times.

I was in the car with the New Bedford post, who were to act as escort to the Massachusetts Department with the New Bedford Band. Here I found several comrades not unknown to me, among whom I may mention Comrade T. Stoddard, and Senator Stevens, of Post 87, Braintree; and Col. Benj. Lovell of Weymouth. They were guests of John A. Andrew post 15, Boston. Last but not least Comrade Crain, of East Braintree. Also Mr. Hayward and Mr. Bowditch, of East Braintree. The only lady on the car that I knew was Mrs. Couchier, of Wollaston.

We had a lively time all the way to Montreal. Bands were at the station at Fitchburg, Bellows Falls, Rutland and St. Albans, Vermont. We crossed the Victoria bridge at about 10 o'clock. Our stop at Montreal was of but two hours duration, and, though we should have been pleased to have seen that city by daylight we did not fail to see what we could of it in two hours from the train. Some of the boys got out of the cars for lunch but the police looked quite sharp at them.

We expected to get to Niagara Falls at about noon but did not until 6.30 P. M., which gave us a very short time to view the Falls. We took it all in however and had a fine view of the Falls from the Canada side, a sight long to be remembered. Several spots of historic interest were pointed out by an old resident. One spot where it was said that a person pushed his wife over the bank into the river 160 feet below.

We took the train again at 11, arriving at Detroit at about 7 P. M. We marched across the city three miles, under escort of the Italian band, to a hall engaged by Post 15, where we had a good chance to wash up, and go out and see the city.

Detroit is the best laid out city that I was ever in; very wide streets with shade trees and fine residences. The city has a good water supply from the lake. It is lighted by electric lights on iron poles 200 feet or more high, too high I think, for the light they give. A man has to climb fourteen of these poles every day to fix the carbon; they burn all night.

I will not write very much about the parade. We had to wait as usual, about three hours, before starting, but when we once started we kept up the tramp for about three hours. The city was finely decorated, the arches were finer than at Boston last year. The eastern posts took the cream for personal appearance and marching, Ohio as to numbers, but all seemed glad to stop.

Detroit would not let the boys go dry; they opened all the hydrants and had dippers attached. Plenty of lager at the saloons on every corner, 5 cents a glass. It is a great beer country out west. What a waste of grain; but one thing I must say, I saw very little drunkenness.

After the parade many of us had private excursions. I took a trip across the state to Grand Haven, then across the lake to Milwaukee, then by lake to Manitowoc Wisconsin, and found friends with whom I stopped two or three days. I then went north 200 miles, to the woods of northwest Michigan; made my home among more friends, in a log cabin; only one house in sight. A dismal looking country, having been burned over last spring, and tall, burned trees and stumps are seen in every direction. The first part of the season was cold and dry; potatoes being the only good crop. The principal business in this section is getting out posts for telegraphs and other purposes. There are many rich copper and iron mines a few miles north of here. I met here my friend, N. Q. Bachelder, and he accompanied me to Wisconsin on my way home. I stopped at the town of Menomonee, Michigan. This is the largest lumber place in this section. Twenty large saw mills in full blast sawing 600 to 800 logs each, daily; using all the improved saws, such as the endless band saw for the best lumber, gang saws and double circular saws, using up all the lumber into boards, shingles and laths, the waste being burned up in a furnace for that purpose. A gentleman told me the lumber in this section would last about ten years, then the mills would have to be removed.

I found most of the farmers threshing out their grain, most of them having great grain crops; but not many apples.

I came home over about the same route with the exception of Port Huron to Montreal. Arrived home in due time thinking old Massachusetts about as good a place to live as anywhere. CRANK.

Two Wants.

HIS DESIRE.

Wanted: a wife who can handle a broom,
To brush down the cobwebs and sweep up the room.
To make decent bread that a fellow can eat,
Not the horrible compound we everywhere meet.
Who knows how to boil, to fry, and to roast,
Make a cup of good tea, and a platter of toast.
A woman who washes, cooks, irons, and sews,
And mends all the rips in a fellow's old clothes,
And makes her own garments—an item that grows
Quite highly expensive, as every one knows;
A common sense creature, and still with a mind
To teach and to guide,—exalted, refined,—
A sort of an angel and housewife combined.
—Cape Cod Item.

HER DESIRE.

Wanted: a man who can handle an axe;
Will chop up the kindlings, and take out the tacks;
Will make lots of money, give half to his wife,
Not the miserly fellow so common in life,
Who knows how to white-wash, to plant and to plough,
Harness up his own horse and milk his own cow.
A man who mends furniture, patches old shoes,
And trims his own whiskers to save barber's dues.
Neither smokes, drinks, nor gambles—all items which grow
Quite highly expensive, as all of you know;
A jack-of-all-trades, yet a strong-minded, clean,
Refined, cultured gentlemen,—dignified mien,—
In short, then, a man who has never yet been.

Household Receipts.

PEACH MARMALADE. Pare and cut up the peaches in small pieces, and to a pound of fruit add a pound of sugar. When the sugar is dissolved set it over the fire, and let it boil till it is a smooth paste. Stir it all the time it is boiling. Put it in jars while warm, and paste them over the next day.

TOMATO CATCHUP. Slice the tomatoes, boil until soft, then strain and measure. To one gallon of the tomatoes add one-fourth pound salt, one-eighth ounce cayenne, one-eighth ounce cloves, one-fourth ounce celery-seed, one-eighth ounce cinnamon, one-half ounce allspice, one-eighth ounce ginger-root, one-fourth ounce garlic, one pint of vinegar. Use whole spices. Boil all together until reduced to a thick pulp. Strain it, and, when cool, bottle and cork tightly.

PICKLED PEACHES. Select ripe cling stone peaches. To one gallon of good vinegar add four pounds of brown sugar; boil this for a few minutes, and take off any scum which may rise. Rub the peaches with a flannel cloth, to remove the down, and stick a clove in each; put them in glass or stone jars, and pour the liquor upon them boiling hot. When cold, cover the jars and let them stand in a cool place for a week or ten days, then pour off the liquor and boil it as before, after which return it, boiling, to the peaches, which should should be carefully covered and stored away for future use. If your peaches are very hard, boil them in water till tender before you pickle them, and they will be fit for use almost immediately.

GRAPE JELLY. Select grapes that are not quite ripe. Remove the stems, and, if they are gritty, wash and drain them. Mash them until they are all broken then boil about ten minutes. Drain through cheese-cloth and flannel, but do not squeeze it. Measure the juice and put it in a granite kettle. Put the same measure of sugar into a bowl with a lip. Boil the juice ten minutes, remove the scum as fast as it forms, then pour the boiling juice into the sugar, stir quickly, remove the froth, and as soon as the sugar is all dissolved, pour it into the glasses. It will thicken immediately.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES. Arrange layers of pared and sliced tomatoes and grated bread-crumbs in a baking-dish. Season with pepper, salt, and a little powdered cinnamon, and dot with bits of butter. Bake in a hot oven till brown on top.

NASTURTIUM SEED PICKLE. To pickle nasturtium seeds throw them into cold salt and water, changing this daily for three days. Make a cold pickle with white wine vinegar, shallotts, pepper cloves, nutmeg, mace and horse radish. Pour this on the seeds, and cork and seal the bottles. A simpler plan is to gather the seeds on a fine day, leave them in the sun for a day or two, then boil some good vinegar with spices to taste, and pour it boiling on the seeds. Cork and seal well, and keep for some months before using.

TO COOK EGGS. For salad they should be put into cold water and allowed to cook ten minutes after they come to the boiling point, and, as soon as cooked, should be put into cold water until they become cold. By this mode they do not turn black.

The Church and Pulpit.

A chain of linked logic as strong as that which binds the universe together binds our subject upon the conscience of the church and the pulpit.

The first link in the chain is the incontrovertible fact that the liquor traffic is the greatest curse of Christendom, and a stupendous obstacle in the way of the Christian church. I will not insult your intelligence by any array of sickening statistics to prove this proposition. The intelligent world knows the fact. At home and abroad, wherever the church of Christ attempts to prosecute its holy mission, it is confronted by this personification of evil—the liquor traffic. The ships that bear our Christian missionaries and Bibles to save the heathen, go laden with Christian rum to damn the souls which the church seeks to save. This first link in the chain is an adamantine fact that may well crimson with shame the face of every Christian man.

Link second.—This great enemy of man and deadly foe of Christ's Kingdom will only be conquered by the agency of the Christian church. It is vain to expect the devil to strike down his strongest ally. It is useless to hope that the world will undertake the overthrow of a moral evil that the church and pulpit hesitate to attack. It reflects honor on the church to say that the world expects and awaits its leadership in this as in all the moral reforms, and therefore this foe will go down only before the assault of the church. There is no flaw in this link.

A third link in the chain invites our scrutiny. The church can cope successfully with such a foe as the liquor traffic only when its forces are thoroughly massed. A united foe, a divided church. This one sad but truthful sentence tells the story of our long defeat, tells the story of the heart sickness of our ranks and the hopelessness of our cause, if we will not learn a higher wisdom and unite for victory. There is no sadder sight on earth than to see the liquor forces rallying around a common standard, irrespective of party or creed, or personal relations, and massing their forces to protect any imperilled point and beat back any assault, while the temperance forces are hotly contending about measures and methods, and, for the most part, practically aiding the combined enemy. Can there be any intelligent questioning of the fact that the duty of the hour is to unite all the forces that acknowledge loyalty to Christ, and march in soldierly order and serried ranks against the common foe? The church has made a great but natural mistake inspired probably by more by a false philosophy than by a faltering courage. The doctrine of individualism has been emphasized at the expense of unity.

She has depended almost entirely on the power of Christian principle in the individual for the spread of Christ's kingdom, the single regenerated heart against the unregenerated world. There is a vital and important truth here but it is only hemispherical; individualism needs to be supplemented and strengthened by combination and concentration—a principle equally Christian and by no means antagonistic to its counterpart. In the developement of Christian civilization and especially in a government whose laws and life are largely the expression of the aggregated opinions of the individuals composing the mass, vast increments of power will come to the kingdom of Christ by massing the units of Christian loyalty and utilizing them for the overthrow of evil and the enthronement of right.

The reign of Christian principles in the individual heart is indeed the basis of the triumph of Christ's kingdom in the world, but the practical form and concrete shape which these principles take in determining laws and forces and customs which govern vast masses of people in our complex society need direction and unification to accomplish the best results. To give this direction and so to make manyfold more practical and potent the isolated units of Christian life is the work of the Christian church and the Christian pulpit. The practibility and power of this work the church is beginning to more fully realize. Let it but assume the leadership which is its right and duty, and unite its scattered forces, and scarcely an evil now fortified by respectable custom and entrenched behind law but would soon surrender to its united attack. And this most shameless and most gigantic foe of society—the liquor traffic—is the most fitting one on which to begin this new crusade in the name of Christ and all who claim loyalty to him. The time is ripe. The call is imperative. —C. H. Payne, L. L. D., Corresponding Secretary Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DON'T DEMAND THE EARTH. If you go to the country, says the Ladies' Home Journal, don't look for all the city conveniences. There is a vague idea that country people pay little or nothing for many things; therefore the stranger expects a great deal for a small expenditure. While it is quite true that the actual cost of living is much less on a farm than in town, still there are items of expense greater in the country. City improvements when grafted on country life, become expensive luxuries, just as irreproachable cream, butter and eggs are the most costly items of city housekeeping. We would feel justly hurt if some farmer folk boarding in our New York home should expect a large tennis court, quantities of flowers, fruit and rich milk, without seeing that these made a drain upon the household finances. So exercise a little common sense yourself.

Anecdotes.

Friend. I suppose everything is settled in regard to the marriage of your daughter?

Stoakley. Well, yes; everything but the bills.

A.—"Is land dear in Italy?"

B.—"No, but the ground rents are awful."

"What's the cause of that?"

"Earthquakes."

"What is the nationality of this person you refer to?"

"That is what we don't know."

"What's his name?"

"Smith."

Simply. Aw, beg pahdon, ladies, were you talking of me?

"No indeed—far from it, Mr. Simply. We were discussing "The Perfect Man.""

He—"Why do you run away and leave Mr. Winkle?"

She—"Because he's too stingy and mean. Why, he won't even laugh at his own expense."

"Did your daughter marry well," Mrs. Goodsense?" asked a visitor.

"Lucy didn't do so badly, but Clara has disgraced us."

"Whom did she marry?"

"Lucy's husband is a street-car driver, but Clara married an Italian count."

First Tramp—"Buzz that old chap for a dime—work upon his feellings."

Second Tramp—"Work upon his feelings, eh? Any work to be done, do it yourself."

Little Bella—"Mr. Squire, do drink your tea. I am awful anxious to see you drink."

Mr. Squire—"What makes you anxious, dear?"

Little Bella—"Oh, ma said you drank like a fish."

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Following "A Straight Tip" at the Hollis comes "Blue Jeans" the great success of last season. It is said to be even better than when first presented here and already seats are in demand. Labor afternoon an extra matinee will be given, besides the regular ones on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Commences every evening at quarter of eight, and afternoon at two.

Grand Opera House.

"My Jack" returns next Monday to the Grand Opera House, for one week's run only. This will be remembered by many as a drama, with the most elaborate scenic effects, produced in Boston for many seasons. So popular did it prove then that the brief run now of only one week is sure to draw full houses, at each performance. Tickets for the matinees and evenings are now on sale at the box office.

Boston Museum.

"Ye Earlie Trouble" met a most hearty and enthusiastic welcome Monday night at at the Museum, a large and fashionable audience being present. The applause was frequent and the members of the company repeatedly bowed there acknowledgments. "Ye Earlie Trouble" is a patriotic play, strong and stirring, representing the starved rebels forces of 1776, under George Washington. An extra matinee will be given on Labor day afternoon. Do not let this play go by without every one seeing it.

Boston Theatre.

"The Old Homestead" is with us at last for on Monday, Labor day, the first performances will be given, one in the afternoon at two, and in the evening at eight. It ran four years in New York City, and was as great a success at the close as at the beginning of the engagement. Mr. Denman Thompson will be remembered by many as "Josh Whitcomb" and so pleasantly that "The Old Homestead" is sure of success in Boston. Mr. Hamill, has furnished one of his largest church organs to aid in giving the full effect to the Grace church scene and Mr. F. M. Bernard has been engaged for the solos. All lovers of a good, wholesome play should see "The Old Homestead."

Tremont Theatre.

Next Monday night, Sept. 7, the Tremont's stage will be taken possession of by a great Boston favorite. There are few artists on the stage so well known and so thoroughly well liked, both in and out of the profession, as jolly little Fanny Rice, who comes at the head of her own company of singers and comedians in a new musical comedy, "A Jolly Surprise."

Miss Rice has been on the stage some eight or nine years, and has been unusually successful both in musical comedy and comic opera. For the past three years she has held the position of principal comedienne of the New York Casino, where her successful rendering of such widely different characters as Nadjy in the opera of "Nadjy," Fragetallo in the "Brigands" Molly in "Poor Jonathan," and other characters, gave her the reputation of being the most versatile and vivacious artiste on the American stage.

During the play Miss Rice will make many different changes of costume. Several of her imported modern dresses are said to be perfect dreams of the dressmaker's art. In fact, the costumes of the company as a whole (which have been made by Mr. Herman, costumer for Daly's New York Theatre) will far surpass in point of elegance anything often seen in a musical comedy.

An Exaggerated Account.

To the Editor of the Patriot:

In the issue of your paper of August 29th, there appeared a distorted and extremely exaggerated account of certain riotous proceedings in Wollaston, by a lot of drunken loafers, so stigmatized; and from the tenor of the communication would lead the community to understand that the village had been invaded, and at the mercy of a mob under no control.

Now in strict justice to those concerned in this unfortunate affair, and which is deeply regretted, there are a few facts which should be brought out. There are several accusations without foundation which are evidently founded on imagination or malice. No grounds were maliciously tramped on, no property destroyed, and in alluding to a sick party being seriously disturbed, would say that at no time were the felons, so called, near the premises designated.

Now as to the matter of intoxication, it may be an open question as to what constitutes drunkeness. An empty wine bottle and a few lemons would hardly be cause enough to call the boys felons.

Yours respectfully,

JESSE G. SWIFT,
WALTER C. BADGER,

Any boy or girl who reads a newspaper and takes the trouble to look up and familiarize himself or herself with the location of all the places mentioned, will have a pretty thorough knowledge of geography by the end of the year, without having worked very hard for it. Postal Currency Needed.

Business men would like it if the government would issue some kind of fractional currency which would make the present postal note unnecessary. For remitting small amounts of money by mail some kind of paper currency is needed, and the postal note is largely used, but it has no advantages over the old-style fractional paper money, while it is more expensive to business men. A postal note affords no safeguards against the loss of money in the mail. It may be cashed by the holder anywhere, without question, and there is no way of tracing it, if it is stolen or lost. It costs the sender three cents at least, even if his remittance is only ten or twenty-five cents, and if it is not cashed at some post-office within three months it gets out of date and a new note has to be obtained at an expense of three cents more and a good deal of bother besides. The government undoubtedly makes a profit out of the postal note in spite of all the extra labor and book-keeping which it necessitates, but nobody else does, and it seems unfair that the public should be taxed in this way for the support of the postal service. If the government would issue fractional paper currency of the denominations, ten, twenty-five and fifty cents, in connection with the fractional silver currency, the postal note would soon become a thing of the past, and business men would be better satisfied. It would not be quite so easy to remit odd amounts by mail, but postage stamps in small amounts could be used in making change, with very little trouble. The postal currency would probably get into general circulation, but even that would not be an unmixed evil. The old fractional currency got dirty after a while, and it was easily torn and lost, but it was handy to have in the house in spite of all, and a good many people would like to see it in circulation now.—Somerville Journal.

Remarkable Cure of Paralysis.

Mrs. M. F. Martin of Dorchester, for the last 18 years has been a great sufferer from paralysis, being incapacitated from attending to any of her household duties, was recently, through the influence of others who had been cured of nervous diseases at the Boston Paralytic and Nervine Institute, 208 Tremont street, Boston, induced to place herself under their treatment, and is now after a few week's treatment, able to walk and enjoy life to her heart's content. Mrs. Martin was, some 18 years ago, taken with an extreme nervousness or restlessness, which was attributed by her physicians to her age. After a few months a weakness of her arms and legs presented itself, which resulted in general paralysis, which was treated by the family physician as well as others, without benefit. Recently, through the persuasion of others who had been cured of paralysis, epilepsy or nervous diseases, she consented to place herself under treatment as her last effort for recovery. After 18 years of suffering she finds herself, after a few weeks' treatment, in the enjoyment of health and vigor which for a lady 66 years of age is remarkable, and her only regret is, that many years ago, she had not learned where she might have been cured, and not suffered such torments, which she regards as lost or wasted life.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.

Poetry.

September Days.

From September's misty grass,
Growing on the furrowed ground,
Comes the cheery cricket sound;
While from twisted browning trees
Apples fall.

And the warm and dusty winds,
Turning white the roadside weeds,
Whirl the leaves and thistle seeds.
From the mellow hazy air,
Blue jays call.

O'er the meadows aftermath,
By the August rains made green,
Harvest spider-webs are seen,
Showing wet, like fresh drawn net
Spread to dry.

Threading from the Summer's woof,
Golden-rod September weaves,
Binding in with crumpled leaves,
Sparrows trailing flight from trees
Through the sky.

Butterflies with snowy wings,
Rising from the asters white,
Look like petals in their flight,
Or as souls of summer flowers
Passing by.

Miscellany.

BABY WENT TO SLEEP.

Engineer Bob had no intention of adopting the baby, or any other for that matter. To use his own graphic language, he "hadn't never had no ties worth speakin' of." He was considered the best engineer on that part of the road, and besides his regular trips he was called on to take out many a special. The "main guys," as Bob called the chief dignitaries of the road, never felt so safe as when Bob was in the cab, and it began to be considered that Bob must take out every fast train if they wanted a smooth, safe run.

Bob took his honors stoically, only saying sometimes in that grim way of his:

"It's better for me to go than any of you fellers. If you get killed there's your wives and the kids, but if ever I go down nobody's hurt."

One day, as his train ran in beside the depot of a Texas town, motionless among the crowd on the platform was a poor, thin, forlorn-looking woman, with a baby in her arms, and every one could see that her eyes were red with crying and that she was getting the worst of it in her battle with the world.

"Anything the matter?" asked a new comer, moved by curiosity and on the alert for a sensation.

"Nothin' much," was the idle reply of a man perched on the outer edge of the platform, swinging a large pair of shoes in the space below. "Woman wants to go to the city and ain't got money enough. You can hear sech as that ever' day."

"You bet. The woods is full of 'em," exclaimed the questioner, going about his business with his curiosity satisfied.

The conversation had gone on with the amiable disregard for the feelings of the poor that is sometimes shown by charitable people. Suddenly the woman broke out in a helpless way, fresh tears running down her cheeks:

"But, oh, if I could only go there, perhaps I could get work, and I can't get any here, I have tried and tried. They won't even let me cook for them unless I can give references and dispose of the baby, and what can I do?"

A dignified and prosperous-looking gentleman turned away, fingering his gold watch chain.

"The same old cry," he said. "Anybody that wants work can get it in this country."

Into the silence that fell after this speech came a clear voice, saying with some emphasis:

"Here's my pile!"

And looking up they saw the engineer in the cab just above them going down into the pockets of his greasy overalls, and bringing out what silver they contained. The next minute he had climbed down, taken the astonished and half-dismayed woman by the arm and was leading her down the platform and helping her into a coach. When he had placed her in a seat, and poured his money into her lap, his courage suddenly deserted him, and it was with quite a shamefaced air that he touched his cap, stammering:

"Good evenin', ma'am. Hope you'll have a pleasant journey."

And so the tides bore them apart, and they met no more.

Actions like this were not so rare that Bob held any of them in special remembrance. Indeed, he had forgotten all about this event when, about three years later, a portly woman, wearing a straw hat with bedraggled plumes and clad in a cheap green dress, walked suddenly up to Bob as the train was about to start, leading by the hand a tiny bit of a girl with long, fair hair.

"Air you Engineer Bob?" asked the new comer. "Because if ye air, I've brought ye this child as was left for ye by its mother when she died at my house night afore last. That was her last will and testament. She said that you was to have the child on accounts of your giving her money to come here with, a matter of three years ago, and mighty glad I am that she give the young un to you, for I've got six of me own, and that's enough to keep one woman a-hustlin'."

And having delivered this extraordinary speech, she at once took herself off.

I am sorry to say that Engineer Bob stood still and stared down at "the last will and testament" as disconcerted and speechless as though some eccentric friend had made him a present of a white elephant, or a roc's egg, or perhaps of the roc itself. With her hands behind, the little creature stared up at him in turn; but her survey ended sooner than his. No vexing question of "What will he do with it?" disturbed her reflections, and she held up one tiny hand towards his large and brown one, saying with a self-possession orators might envy:

"Howdy, Bob?"

She was in his arms next minute, accepted as a gift from the dead, and it was with a queer, soft feeling tugging at his heart-strings and making a foolish moisture in his eyes that Bob climbed into the cab with her and put her up on the seat beside him, thanking his stars meanwhile that none of the "main guys" were around.

"For they wouldn't allow it, that's a fact," he said to himself. "An' yet the Lord only knows what I'm going to do with her. Maybe I'll think up somethin' after a while, but I can't now to save me."

He was very inconsiderate, this Engineer Bob. He did not stop to inquire whether this child had any ancestry, or, if she did, whether it was quite correct. He took her as she was, bringing no family record, not even graced with a name. When he came to enquire, he found that she was "Baby," and Baby she remained, the sweet diminutive falling tenderly, if a little awkwardly, from the lips of this man who had never felt the love of wife or child.

All day long Bob pondered over his perplexing problem, and came no nearer a solution. He caught himself a hundred times staring helplessly at his small charge, only to be met with the calm look of the three-year old philosopher, whose problems other people must solve.

Between stations she swung her little feet and sung baby songs in some strange tongue Bob had never learned, or had perhaps forgotten, and she made friends with the people at stations, and shouted "By-by" at them, and threw airy kisses as the train rolled away.

It would be difficult to tell how many hearts Baby made captive during that ride. As night approached, while the train was at a station, Bob took her in his arms and slipped around to his particular friend, the mail agent.

"See here, Lane," he said, with some embarassment, "I wish you'd put this kid in there on some of the mail sacks, an' let 'er sleep till the train gets in. You see, I don't know jest what to do with her."

"Toss 'er up, Bob," said Lane, cheerily, leaning out to catch her, and Baby, being tossed up and caught, kissed her hand and called back, "Dood night, Bob."

Bob went back to his post, and having brushed his eye with his grimy hand was ready to go on. It began to matter a little with Bob whether anything happened to him, and he never had been so watchful or so careful as he had been that night.

What a pleasure it was when they were in at last, and he could go and get the sleepy little creature and carry her to his room at the boarding house. She roused up and ate supper with him, and was quite merry when bedtime came. Bob had just undressed her, his big, awkward fingers making slow work of it, and had tucked her under the cover, but when he was about to follow her example, she suddenly struggled up.

"Bob," she cried imperiously, "tome say your prayers!"

"I don't know any prayers, Baby," said Bob, after a moment's astonished silence.

"Den tome here, and I teach you one," she commanded.

Bob slowly, and with a very red face, came around on the other side. She made him kneel, and saw that his hands were properly clasped and his eyes shut. She had almost left off her baby lisp, but prayer had been learned so long ago that she said it now just as she had learned to say it first.

"Now I'm zay me downer s'eep," dictated the little teacher, perched up on the side of the bed.

"Now I lay me down to sleep," murmured the brown and bearded giant kneeling before her.

Ah, Engineer Bob, how many years since you said that last? And where is the little mother that bent over you while you said it!

When the lesson was finished and Bob had tucked the baby in again he went back to his place with a curious moisture in his eyes, and was half-impatient with himself about it.

And then began a strange era in Bob's life; a time when this child was always in his thoughts, and seldom away from his side. She grew to be a "train baby," and every man was her obedient slave. Bob was still debating with himself what he could do with her, and in the meantime he did nothing but keep her with him. It was such a strange thing to feel the tiny hand clasping one of his brown fingers, when on his day off he walked about with Baby. It was such a wonderful affair altogether to be compelled to kneel down every night and say the prayers dictated by this small tyrant.

When an entire week had passed, and the prayer had still to be dictated, Baby expressed her sentiments with all the candor of candid baby-hood.

"Bob, you is awfully dull," she said; "you ought to be as'amed of yourself."

Torn by conflicting feelings, knowing that he was daily in danger of discharge, Bob was leading a miserable life enough, and yet the light that never was on sea or land was shining upon his life and transforming it.

One morning she sat beside him in the cab, when one of the "main guys" passed. Bob's heart gave one or two triphammer blows and then stood still. Now would come his discharge. No railroad superintendent that ever lived would stand this. But the awful dignity, after a comprehensive glance in Bob's direction, turned his head and looked the other way with such evident inattention not to see anything that Bob understood and was overwhelmed with gratitude. For did not all the "gang" know all about Bob's infatuation? And had not the "main guy" heard?

As for Bob, his life was changed, and the haunts that once knew him, now knew him no more. When he walked about town could he go into saloons or gambling dens with that little figure beside him? Like the angel of the old stories she hovered about him and kept him from harm. Bob, the most profane of railroad men, would utter no oaths now, because the Baby would hear; and the one or two that made use of language more forcible than elegant in the presence of Baby found themselves in serious trouble. The little white soul given over to Bob's keeping, had the atmosphere of purity around it, and made Engineer Bob begin to wish he were a different man.

A very few weeks had passed when Bob, going to the mail car one night after baby, found her feverish and a little inclined to wander in what she said. Like one distracted he rushed to his room with her and sent for a doctor. Wild with anguish he sat beside her all night and gave medicines, but the next morning she was no better.

Somebody else took out Bob's train; he neither knew nor cared who. Wholly forgetting all the rest of the world, wholly absorbed in the child that was more to him than life itself, he sat silently there and watched while her own faint little life slowly ebbed away.

The railroad men came, one after another, bent over Baby, and pressed Bob's hand, telling him to cheer up, and went away wiping their eyes. The superintendent came and sat down by the bed, smoothing the pretty, tangled hair and chafing her little hands as tenderly as a woman. These things were hard to bear, he said, and he was not good at consolation.

But suddenly, at last, Baby clasped her tiny hands and began to murmur.

"'Now I'm zay me downer s'eep'—Tome say your p'ayers, Bob."

"Oh, yes, Baby, I'm here," cried Bob falling upon his knees beside the bed.

"I pa'yer Zord my soul to teep;
If I s'ould die before I wate—"

"Is you sayin' your prayer, Bob?"

"I p'ayer Zord my soul—to—take."

"Oh, take mine, too, Lord; take mine, too!" was the helpless cry wrung from the strong heart of Engineer Bob.

And then as night had come, and the evening prayer was said, the Baby went to sleep.

* * * * *

A little withered old woman stepped down from the cars a month later and into the arms of a strong, grave man.

"O Bob," she cried trembling, with her arms about his neck, "just to see you once again, after eighteen years. And you really sent for your poor old mother, after all?"

"Mother," said Engineer Bob, with a quavering voice, "I've got a home ready for you, an'—if you can forgive what's past—I'll make you a good son yet."

And out under the shadows of lonely trees in the cemetery the little one slept, with the marble shaft above her bearing no other name than "The Baby," and the simple inscription below. "A little child shall lead them."—Philadelphia Times.

A Bill of Particulars.

That old diaries resurrect strange things was once more proven last week when Lawyer Simon Stevens, in making his yearly overhaul of treasure records, came across a curious reminder of a visit to England some twenty years ago. It was a copy of a bill from a painter to a noble lord, a professed connoisseur and large collector of pictures, for repairs to the noble lord's art gallery. While not claiming to have affidavits from his lordship or the painter, Mr. Stevens says that he has no doubt the bill is genuine.

It is itemized as follows:—

To filling up the chink in the Red sea and repairing the damage of Pharaoh's host.

To cleaning six of the Apostles and adding an entirely new Judas Iscariot.

To a pair of new hands for Daniel in the lion's den and a set of teeth for the lioness.

To an alteration in the Belief, mending the Commandments, and making a new Lord's Prayer.

To new varnishing Moses' rod.

To repairing Nebuchadnezzar's beard.

To mending the pitcher of Rebecca.

To a pair of ears for Balaam and a new tongue for the ass.

To renewing the picture of Samson in the character of a fox hunter and substituting a whip for the fire-brand.

To a new broom and bonnet for the Witch of Endor.

To a sheet anchor, a jury mast, and a long boat for Noah's ark.

To painting twenty-one new steps to Jacob's ladder.

Norwegian Cheese.

Arranged in a series of little dishes around us were sardines, sausages, raw smoked mutton—which is really very good —and several kinds of cheese. There is a terrible kind of native cheese, says Murray's Magazine, called "mysost," which is made of goat's milk; it is brown in color, and served in the shape of bricks, done up in silver paper. The initiated shave this into thin films, and make it into a sandwich with black bread and butter. This cheese is really made from the whey after proper cheese has been manufactured. All the water is then boiled out, and the remainder is compressed into these brown bricks which taste sweet and gritty. Love of this cheese would take some time to acquire; the opportunity is not lacking, for it appears at every meal, from breakfast onward. There are several native cheeses. Another terrible one, "pultost," is made with carraway seeds, and always smells as if it had gone bad. Mysost has no smell, fortunately, only a terrible aspect and taste. Dr. Julius Nicholyson told us he wanted to send a few Norwegian delicacies to a friend in Germany, and among others he put in a piece of the native mysost. His friend wrote and thanked him for the salmon, etc., and then continued: "The soap is very nice, but we find great difficulty in making it lather." This was the cheese!

Well Answered.

A man and woman left the Shirley family of Shakers, married and settled down in Groton. Two ladies of that town called and interviewed them. One of the ladies, after many questions, from the answers to which she got very little information, said to the wife:

"I suppose there are a good many things among the Shakers which the world's people know nothing about?"

"Yes," was the reply, "there are; and it isn't necessary that they should know."

This reminds one of the Quaker's reply to a prying questioner. He was a very rich and much respected friend, and he lived in Providence many years ago. He was one day visited by an inquiring brother who said to him:

"Friend William, when people ask me how many farms thee has got, what shall I tell them?"

"Friend Thomas, thee may tell them that thou dost not know."—Boston Transcript.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 6.

One of the most notable features connected with the great Northern Pacific railroad, is the elegant dining cars, which were built at the Pullman Car Works, being marvels of luxury and of the most elegant design and finish. In these cars we could sit down to a bountiful "spread," comprising all the delicacies of the season on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, as well as the fish and game obtained from the country through which the road passes, for which we paid the modest sum of seventy-five cents per meal.

We arrived at Livingston on Sunday evening, and found many of the stores and saloons opened. It is a lively western town of some three thousand inhabitants, with four hotels, three banks, 100 stores, one daily and two weekly newspapers, two schools and seven churches. Although there appears to be an overabundance of land, there is, as in all lively western and southern towns, a real estate boom, and small house lots near the main street were selling for several hundred dollars per lot.

On Monday morning the editors and ladies left Livingston in their four Pullman cars over the Park branch for Cinnabar, which was fifty-one miles directly to the South. The railroad follows the Yellowstone river, the entire distance. Three miles from Livingston the road passes the canyon of the Yellowstone, or gate of the mountains; forming a natural entrance to the upper valley. The canyon is one mile long, just wide enough to comfortably admit of the railroad and river, the mountain walls rising some 2,000 feet on either side. Passing through this canyon Paradise valley is entered, which extends some thirty miles up the river and is from seven to twelve miles wide.

Arriving at Cinnabar we took coaches or wagons, made at Concord, N. H.. and considered the safest and best for travelling over rough roads of anything manufactured on this globe, for Mammoth Hot Springs hotel some seven miles away. The coach ride is especially pleasant, contrasted with the necessary long railway journey to reach this region. In the distance we could see the snow clad mountains; and in going these few miles we ascended nearly 2,000 feet, and on arriving at Mammoth Hot Springs we found ourselves 6,387 feet above sea level. Although at this great elevation it was warm and delightful during our five days' stay; and during some of our trips in the park we went over mountains 10,000 feet high.

On arriving at the Mammoth Hot Springs we found a very large and nice hotel which would accommodate about three hundred persons, and was probably never full but once, and that was the day before our party left for home. There never has been so many visitors to the park on one excursion as there were in our party, (one hundred and sixty), and there were probably not more than seventy in the hotel when we arrived. Before we left the park a Raymond excursion party came in and the large house, for once, got crowded.

Although the National Park is sixty-five miles long and fifty-five miles wide, embracing an area of three thousand five hundred and seventy-five square miles, there are not more than twenty-five houses in the whole territory; and the larger number of these are at the Mammoth Hot Springs, where our tourists make their first stop. There are scattered at other attractive points, a few large hotels, not over six, we think, in all; and one of those was built this season.

At the Mammoth Hot Springs we found stationed a company of United States Cavalry, the commanding officer being superintendent of the park. During the summer months cantonments are scattered throughout the park, consisting of a non-commissioned officer and two or more cavalry men; whose duties are to protect the various objects of interest from vandalism, and to see that no hunters enter it; as the killing of game is prohibited. The park is free from questionable characters, owing to the rigid enforcement of the orders of the commanding officer. Several scouts are employed by the Government, who roam over the entire area, to put out fires and protect the game. Among the wild animals said to be found in the park,—although we saw very few—are the buffalo, elk, deer, antelope, bear, mountain lion, wolf, fox, beaver, otter, mink, muskrat, rabbit, hare, squirrel, etc. Among the birds are the grouse, owl, hawk, eagle, vulture, duck, goose, brant, swan, etc.

What a Glove Tells.

From the shade one can judge whether the buyer has an eye for beauty and has selected what is appropriate for the costume worn with it. If the shade does not exactly match, it must at least harmonize. Then, if a woman is of dainty tastes, the glove is of the finest suede, fitting like a second skin.

If she is slightly more practical, glace kid is worn with the same perfect fit, which does not mean so tight that the fingers are all cramped and the hand distorted. If the wearer be exact in all things, the glove is drawn on so as to have every seam straight and just where it should be.

The delicate odor wafted to the observer tells the wearer's favorite perfume which is used in her glove-box. If particular in small details, the style of glove will exactly suit the occasion upon which it is worn, as, for example, an eight-button suede mousquetaire will be worn for visiting or at the theatre, a four-button glace for church, and a Biarritz or heavy pique stitched glove, having large buttons, for shopping, travelling, or walking.

If the wearer has a nervous disposition, it will appear in a habit of occasionally pulling or stroking the gloves. If she has pretty hands, the occasional downward glance and careful, though apparently unstudied, arrangement of the hands will notify a keen observer of the fact.

If the hands are held up and turned around for inspection, one may risk a wager that kid gloves are a rarity with the wearer. A torn or ripped glove shows an untidy woman. A slightly soiled glove is allowable without betraying the sloven. —Dry Goods and Fashion.

The Resignations.

Miss Pfaffmann of the High will enter the Harvard annex.

Miss Leban of the Adams is transferred to the Washington.

Misses White, Clark and McQuestion of the Coddington have gone to Waltham.

Miss Wallace of the John Hancock has gone to Providence, R. I., Miss Sills resigned, and Miss Brooks was transferred to the Quincy.

Miss Page of the Quincy school resigned to pursue her studies in a special branch, and Miss Beal of the same school goes to Rockland. Miss Parker has taken a higher grade in the same building.

Miss Higgins of the Washington has gone to Somerville, and Miss French resigned because of ill health. Miss Worcester takes a higher grade.

The resignation of Miss Baker is the only change in the Willard corps.

The New Teachers.

Miss Winnifred P. Stone, the new assistant at the High, is a graduate of the Maine Wesleyan Seminary and Female College and has taught in the Bridgton academy in that State.

Miss Marcella Pierce the only new teacher at the Adams is a Quincy young lady, a graduate of our high school and the Bridgewater Normal, and has taught two years.

Of the new teachers at the Coddington, Miss McGinley of Boston, was in last year's training class; Miss Forsaith comes from New Hampshire; Miss McDonald is a Quincy young lady who has been in the training class; Miss Carpenter is from Foxboro, and a graduate of the Framingham Normal.

Misses Underwood and Thayer, former teachers at the John Hancock, have returned once more; Miss Sullivan is a graduate of the Quincy High and Bridgewater Normal.

Miss Brooks of the Quincy was transfered from the Coddington; Miss Parker takes a higher room; Miss Haley is a graduate of the Quincy High and Bridgewater Normal, and has been an assistant two years.

Miss Sargent at the Washington is a resident of this city, and Miss Leban is transfered from the Adams.

Miss Gardner is the only new teacher at the Willard.

The only new principal this year is at the Wollaston school. Mr. Kingman is a graduate of the Bridgewater Normal, and a teacher with several years' experience. Miss Thompson the other new teacher in this building is a graduate of our High and the Bridgewater Normal.

Misses Delvin and Hernan of the Adams were unable to assume their positions at the beginning of the term.

The New Scholars.

The LEDGER of Friday contained a list of the new primary scholars; those who begun their school life this week.

The list included over 200 and will be further increased by addition, as new scholars may enter the first two weeks of the term. The new Willard has 74 new ones; the John Hancock 57; the Adams 24; Coddington 24, Washington 21, Wollaston 17 and Quincy 15.

These in themselves make quite a school army, but is only a part of the number who enter in a year, as there are three terms.

Brockton Fair.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the races at the agricultural fair at Brockton. For more full particulars of the premium list, order of the day, etc., send to the Press Agent, E. M. Thompson, Brockton.

—The new lodge of Odd Fellows at Hyde Park will be dedicated Sept. 28.

A Pretty Party.

Miss Lilius L. Nash entertained a party of her friends at the residence of her sister, Mrs. A. B. Smith Granite street, Thursday evening, previous to her departure for her home in Rockland, Me.

The early part of the evening was devoted almost wholly to whist and after a series of remarkably scientific games the ladies' prize was awarded to Miss Badger and the gentlemen's to Mr. Smith. Refreshments were served at 10 o'clock and the remainder of a delightfully pleasant evening was spent in playing various games. A prominent feature of the evening's entertainment was a wonderfully strange exhibition of mind reading by Miss McPhail and Mr. Merrill, which was rewarded with unstinted applause.

The company bade their hostess adieu at an early hour, delighted with the evening's pleasures. Those present were Miss Badger, Miss Perry, Miss McPhail, Miss Campbell, Miss Nightingale, Miss Pierce, Mr. Merrill, Mr. Mitten, Mr. Badger, Mr. Milne, Mr. Bent and Mr. McDonald.

Fire Alarms.

Little sleep did the firemen have Sunday night, for just about the time they were ready to retire and after some had retired they were aroused by an alarm at 10.40 o'clock from box 43, which is located on the corner of Copeland and Common streets. The department responded in good time and when they arrived at the box, it was found that some hoodlum had smashed the glass over the key, and given a false alarm, and as there was no fire, a recall was sounded and the firemen returned to their quarters.

Three hours later or at 1.40 o'clock, they were again called out by an alarm from box 46, and this proved to be a genuine alarm. When they arrived in the vicinity of the box, a lively blaze was in progress in the large house on the west corner of Copeland and Cross street, owned by the heirs of the late Henry Doble.

The fire was discovered by the Italian bakers across the street who gave the alarm, and although the department responded in remarkably quick time, the interior was one mass of flames before it arrived. It quickly got to work and soon had the fire out, but not before the interior had been badly gutted.

The building had not been occupied for some months, but there was some furniture in one of the rooms owned by Mrs. Alvira Doble. This was badly damaged and the loss on it will probably not exceed $150.

As stated elsewhere, the building is owned by the heirs of Henry Doble, and was damaged about $800, insured for $1200 in the Dedham Mutual.

The fire was doubtless of incendiary origin.

At 12.35 o'clock Tuesday the firemen were again aroused from their slumbers by an alarm from Box 35, located at the corner of Hancock and School streets. The department made quick time, but found on their arrival that, like the alarm from Box 43 Sunday night, it had been rung in out of pure deviltry.

Weddings.

Mr. Henry T. Brown, Jr., the popular and well known driver of the Hook and Ladder truck at the central station, was united in marriage Wednesday at St. John's church, to Miss Bridget E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Horan of School street. Mass was celebrated by Rev. F. A. Friguletti in the presence of a number of the friends of the bride and groom.

Miss Ellen O'Connor of Lowell, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Michael T. Sullivan, a cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

The bride wore a handsome costume of white China silk, with a tulle veil caught up with brides' roses. She also wore a corsage boquet of roses and carried a bunch of the same flowers in her hand.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Brown returned to the residence of the bride's parents, where a reception was held in the evening, the firemen and friends gathering en masse. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have gone to St. Paul, Minnesota, on a brief tour. When they return they will take up their residence on Chestnut street, in this city.

The members of the Hook and Ladder company acted as ushers and music during the reception was furnished by a number of ladies and gentlemen among whom was the veteran Mr. Galen Vinton Bowditch who rendered in a masterly manner, the selections "Good-by Sweetheart," "The Bridge," "Beautiful Isle of the Sea," and "Remember Me."

A wedding supper was served at 10 o'clock, after which the festivities were continued until a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown received many costly and valuable presents from their host of friends. That from the members of the fire department and friends connected with the department was a handsome and costly plush parlor set with which to beautify their new home.

Mr. Brown is well known in this city and has a large circle of friends who unite in wishing he and his fair bride a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.

Nicol—Garrity.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's church, West Quincy, Wednesday, Mass being celebrated by Rev. Fr. Cuffe. The contracting parties were Mr. Charles G. Nicol a member of the police force of Quincy, and Miss Alice M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Garrity.

The bride was becomingly attired in a rich helitrope cashmere cut decolette, with a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms. She also wore a corsage bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Mary McGowan was bridesmaid and Mr. Martin H. Garrity a brother of the bride was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicol received their friends in the evening at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 17 Centre street.

Mr. Martin H. Garrity, a brother of the bride was usher, and the bride was assisted in receiving by Miss Lizzie McGowan. Music during the reception was furnished by the Bijou quartette of Boston, and Mr. Galen V. Bowditch.

At 10 o'clock a wedding supper was served by Caterer Wales.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicol will be at home a 21 Gay street, Thursdays and Sundays, after September 15.

Mr. Nicol has been a member of the Police force since Quincy became a city, and is well known as an efficient and painstaking officer.

Mrs. Nicol has been the leading soprano at the St. Mary's church for the past two years, and is held in high esteem by all her associates in the church.

GOLDEN WEDDING. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Furnald, for many years residents of Quincy, but now residing in Nottingham, N. H., celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their home in Nothingham this Saturday evening. Quite a number of old friends in this city received invitations, many of whom have accepted and will be pleased to meet Mr. and Mrs. Furnald, and congratulate them on this golden anniversary. Among those from this city intending to be present, are Mrs. Joshua Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Prescott.

Granite Cutters to Parade.

Chief Marshal James Grant is daily in receipt of applications for positions in the line of the A. B. T. C. parade in Boston Saturday. Among the latest sent to Mr. Grant are those of the United Garment Workers, the Steamfitters' union, the Carpenters' union of Waltham and the granite cutters of Boston and Quincy.

The Washington School.

The year of '91 and '92 has opened most favorably at the Washington with a good corps of teachers and 269 pupils, as follows:

The A Grammar class has 24 members; B Grammar 32, with one new pupil, Harold Crane; C Grammar numbers 36, with one new member, Lelia Sturgis. The D Grammar class has 37 pupils, two new members —Nellie Voorhees and Williams J. Pitts; A Primary numbers 31, with Annie Sturgis as new member; B Primary 39, and C and D Primary each 35 members. Of the latter, 21 are entering school for the first time, and are published below.

The school has lost one of its best teachers in the resignation of Miss D. C. Higgins, who on Friday last accepted one of the numerous offers she has had during the past year, and is now teaching in Somerville. She will be missed much on account of the fathful work she has performed at the Washington during the past ten years.

Y. M. C. A.

An enthusiastic meeting of about 75 gentlemen was held in the Probate Court room in the Adams building, Wednesday evening, to organize a Young Men's Christian Association. Quincy has been the only city with one exception in the State, without such an organization. The Young Men's Committee had paved the way for a successful association, however, during the past year and a half, during which time they have agitated it.

The following Board of Directors was chosen which has organized:

Edward F. Southworth, President,
Wendell G. Corthell, Vice President,
George H. Brown, Recording Secretary,
George A. Sidelinger, Treasurer,
Charles F. Cummings, Herbert W. Pinkham, Edward Hewitson, Rev. Luther Freeman, Theophilus King, T. Henry Wason, Dr. John A. Gordon, Rev. C. F. Paulson, George O. Shirley, Alexander Clarke, Jonas Shackley.

The association starts with a membership of 250, which includes many of the leading citizens from all the wards of the city.

The directors will take immediate steps to open rooms and a committee will be appointed to select a general secretary.

It is the intention of the association to secure suitable headquarters in the Centre, which will contain a reception-room, reading-room, secretary's office, a hall for meetings and a gymnasium which will be fitted with the most modern apparatus and appliances.

The membership fee has been fixed at $2 including use of gymnasium $5.

Young Men's Republican Club.

A number of the Republicans of Quincy met at headquarters Thursday evening to take steps for the formation of a Young Men's Republican club.

The first part of the evening was taken up by Maj. J. Henry Gould, who spoke briefly of the aims and objects of the organization, which are to strengthen the Republican party and to promote by legitimate agencies the success of the party and its candidates, thereby exerting the most potent influence in behalf of good government.

The club is not to be used in any way to further the interest of any candidate for office previous to nomination, but reserve its force to be exerted in behalf of all candidates nominated by Republican conventions.

Any person over 18 years who is a Republican, and in hearty sympathy with the principles of the Republican party and a supporter of its candidates, shall be eligible to membership.

At the close of Maj. Gould's remarks, John F. Merrill was chosen chairman and Warren H. Rideout, secretary.

The club was then organized and a constitution adopted which embodied the above objects.

The meeting then adjourned to next Friday evening, at 7.45 o'clock, when organization will be perfected and officers will be elected.

—The annual meeting of the order of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held in Park street chapel Wednesday, Sept. 16, at 2 o'clock P. M. Mrs. Isabella C. Davis of the Central council, New York, is expected to be present.

WOLLASTON.

There is some talk of organizing a Republican Campaign club at Wollaston.

Miss Florence G. Roberts has returned from a visit to New Brunswick.

An appropriate wedding present: a basket of pears.

The Wollaston tennis tournament which was to have been held Labor day has been postponed to this Saturday afternoon.

The Steadfast Ten, Kings Daughters, gave an apron party in the vestry of the Congregational church, Monday evening. The first prize was won by Mr. E. H. Brock and the second by Mr. W. P. Gould.

The newly made pair were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts. Their wedding tour will be spent in New Hampshire.

Rev. Edward A. Robinson of the Wollaston Congregational church extends an invitation to everyone interested in botany, to inspect the collection of wild flowers which will be on exhibition at the vestry of the Congregational church on Saturday afternoon, from two to four o'clock.

It is rumored that one of Wollaston's wealthy residents has a surprise in store for the young people of that place. There will probably be a course of musical and literary entertainments given on a plan similar to the one on which the famous Lowell Institue course of Boston is conducted.

A large derrick mast, eighty-two feet long, got stuck at the corner of Brook and Farrington streets early Sunday morning. It blocked traffic on those two thoroughfares Sunday and Monday. The spar came from East Boston and was going to the Reinhalter Brothers of West Quincy. Mayor Fairbank had a policeman and one of the teamsters stand guard over it Sunday night to prevent accidents.

Rev. Luther Freeman, pastor, will preach in the Methodist Episcopal church, Wollaston, at 10.4 o'clock, Sunday morning. his subject will be, "Lost." Praise service at 7 o'clock followed by sermon by the pastor. Subject, "A Basket of Summer Fruit." Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock. The newly elected officers of the League are President,—Mr. Chas. W. Johnson.

First Vice President,—Miss Rena M. Chamberlin.
Second Vice President,—Mrs. Flora W. Campbell.
Third Vice President,—Miss Emily C. Bjorkman.
Fourth Vice President,—Mr. W. Campbell.
Secretary,—Miss Bertha Baker.
Treasurer,—Mr William I. Powell.

Delegates as follows have been chosen to attend the big convention to be held in Portland the last of the month: Rev. Luther Freeman Mr. Chas. W. Johnson, Miss Emily C. Bjorkman and Mr. Newell O. Parker.

The W. C. T. U. of Wollaston will meet in the M. E. church Friday, Sept. 18, at 3 P. M.

Mr. Chas. W. Johnson and family, have returned from Newfound lake, in Bridgewater, N. H., where they spent three weeks most delightfully.

Wedding at Wollaston.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Prince, 26 Brooks street, Wollaston, was the scene of a very pretty and pleasing wedding Wednesday evening, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Flossie L. Prince to Mr. Edward A. Westcott of Malden.

The marriage took place at the M. E. church and was performed by the Rev. Luther Freeman. The bride was dressed in nun's veiling with low cut neck trimmed with white lace. Miss Ada E. Jacobs and Mr. William Westcott had the honor of standing with them. Miss Jacobs' dress was light dove color with low cut bodice filled in with white Persian lace.

After the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Where the Wollaston Girls are Going.

Miss R. Adelaide Witham of Wollaston will attend Smith college, Northampton; Miss Gertrude Sherman, Lassell Seminary, Auburndale; Miss Marion Sherman, Chauncy Hall, Boston; Miss Kate L. Lincoln, Dana Hall, Wellesley; Miss May A. Lincoln, Wheaton Seminary, Norton; Miss Sadie D. Badger, Colby Academy, New London, N. H.; Miss Lela Pinkham, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Miss Maude E. Polson, Bradford Academy, Bradford; Miss Mamie E. Bates, Dr. Enebuske's Swedish Gymnasium, Boston; Miss Mazie V. Hastings, Thayer Academy; Miss Edith V. Jennings, English High School, Boston; Miss Lora M. Noyes, Colby Academy, New London, N. H.; Miss Bertha V. Jameson, Thayer Academy; Miss Marcia Ray, English High School, Boston; Miss Belle Gannett, State Normal School, Bridgewater.

Quincy Clerks Organize.

If you noticed that the clerk who called at your house on Friday looked sleepy do not be surprised, as they were out at an all-night session, made necessary by the institution of a council of the Independent Order of Clerks.

The meeting was held at Doble's hall, the ceremonies of the institution and installation of the officers being performed by the following officers of the Supreme Council of Lynn:

Past Supreme Clerk—H. R. Jacobs.
Supreme Clerk—C. A. Parker.
Vice-Supreme Clerk—C. A. Webb.
Supreme Chaplain—E. W. Bacon.
Supreme Marshall—J. F. Parker.
Supreme Treasurer—J. H. Merchant
Supreme Financier—F. Martin.
Supreme Recorder—C. A. Ruggles.

There was also present Chief Clerk John Scamman and Past Chief Clerk George W. Ledger of George B. Tolman Council, No. 1.

After the ceremonies the clerks adjourned to the banquet hall where they partook of a banquet prepared by Caterer Nash.

This over the following officers were elected and installed:

Past Chief Clerk,—Robert E. Foy.
Chief Clerk,—James Rapson.
Vice Chief Clerk,—Joseph P. Prout.
Chaplain,—A. H. Kirnan.
Financier,—A. I. Dixon.
Recorder,—H. L. Boutin.
Treasurer,—J. L. Ferguson.
Marshall,—Fred Goss.

The new council starts off with a membership of fifty and will be known as Quincy Council No. 3.

Masonic Visitations.

Rt. Wor. H. A. Belcher, district deputy grand master of the twenty-fourth Masonic district, which includes Quincy and surrounding towns, has announced his official visitations as follows:

Satucket lodge, East Bridgewater, Sept. 22; Puritan, Whitman, Sept. 30; St. George, Campello, Oct. 7; Paul Revere, Brockton, Oct. 13; John Cutler, Abington, Oct. 21; Fellowship, Bridgewater, Oct. 28; Rural, Quincy, Nov. 5; Norfolk Union, Randolph, Nov. 18.

Asa P. French will act as district deputy grand marshal.

Accident at South Boston.

The derailing of a passenger train at South Boston Friday morning on the Old Colony delayed all outward trains nearly two hours. The accident is said to be a serious one, but whether any one was injured is not known.

WEST QUINCY.

The Misses Gilson of Portland, Maine, are the guests of the Misses Harris on Reardon street.

The flying horses that were at Houghs Neck this summer have been located on the corner of Copeland and Miller streets.

The Epworth League connected with the West Quincy Methodist church, will hold its first meeting since the vacation, next Monday evening, when a full attendance is desired.

Charles H. Riley of Dedham, the inspector appointed to visit the post offices in this county, visited Station A, Thursday to see what could be done to facilitate the mail service at this station.

Miss Emma J. Fuller, of West Quincy, has been appointed secretary of Norfolk County of the International Order of the "Kings Daughters and Sons." Will circles who have not reported at the State Headquarters, Boston, kindly send name to the County Secretary.

C. S. Jose, clerk at E. H. Doble & Co.'s is away on his vacation.

James Mason, hostler at E. H. Doble's has resigned his position.

Miss Jennie F. Smith of Concord, N. H., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. M. J. Sullivan on West street.

Mr. Frank Fuller, who has charge of the property of the Henry P. Doble heirs, was in town Tuesday and does not consider the house damaged by fire worth much. He will try to have the house condemned, when it will be torn down and the land put on the market.

The laying of the corner stone of the new Catholic church at Needham, over which Rev. T. J. Danahy, formerly of this city, is pastor, has been postponed to Sunday, Sept. 20. The lot on which the church is to be erected contains 27,000 square feet and cost $2,600. The basement will be stone-work with brick underpinning on which the wooden building, 40 by 50, will rest. The structure will cost about $15,000.

James Simmons is visiting friends in Maine.

Miss Annie Foley has returned from a three months' trip.

William Flanders of Portland, Me., is visiting with his mother on Willard street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan of Vinal Haven, Me., are visiting Mrs. Sullivan's parents.

There are 759 pupils in the new Willard school. The total number of desks is but 879. Some rooms are crowded.

MILTON.

Mrs. E. L. Williams of West Quincy will conduct the Gospel meeting at Washington hall, East Milton, Sunday at 3.30 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

The all-day Gospel services at Washington hall Labor day were a decided success, although many were detained at home through the inclemency of the weather. The afternoon service led by W. H. West was specially interesting, his subject being the "Casting out Satan from Heaven and the sending of Jesus Christ to destroy his work on the Earth." The evening service under Mrs. E. J. Storms and Rev. T. W. Plummer were profitable and helpful to many. Mr. D. C. Wright presided at the piano and sang a solo.

Mrs. Caw, of Albany, New York, will speak at the East Milton Baptist church, on Sunday morning at 10.30.

The house so long known as the "Blue Bell," now known as the "Old Oak," is soon to be opened as a private boarding house. Mr. C. H. Mitchell, proprietor of the Mitchell House, North Scituate beach, is to rent the house.

The East Milton Baptist church have purchased of Mrs. Cunningham a lot of land on Edge Hill road, and have appointed a building committee to secure plans, etc.

The East Milton Congregational church are talking of raising the necessary funds to build a vestry to their church in which to hold prayer meetings and for the ladies to hold their meetings, a want which is greatly needed. The church has already a sum for this purpose, but not enough, as the cost is estimated to be nearly $1000. The ladies have become interested in the matter, and when once they get at work the vestry is sure to come.

Miss Bella Sage has returned from her visit to friends at Hartford.

Miss Fannie Kemp and Miss Grace Aldea, two of last year's graduates from the Milton High school, have successfully passed the examination for the State Normal School at Bridgewater.

Mr. and Mrs. George Loud are receiving congratulations on the advent of a little daughter.

Gridley Beals and family have returned from their sojourn at Rock Island.

S. Egbert Alden, surveyor at Lethuber's lumber wharf in Boston, is at home on his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woods have gone to Denver, Colorado, for Mr. Wood's health.

Eugene Clapp is quite sick.

The Republicans held their caucus for the purpose of nominating delegates to the several conventions and the choice of a town committee Thursday evening at the Town hall.

Joseph Pierce, clerk at T. L. Pierce's store, is away on his vacation.

Leonard L. Elden expects to occupy his new house on Washington street about October 1.

George Van Horn has gone to California and the West on a five weeks' business trip.

John Martin and John Burns have completed the cellars for their new houses on Squantum street.

THE PULLING of false alarms is becoming too frequent, and something should be done to put a stop to this kind of work. Either the city should offer a reward for the conviction of the party who gives a false alarm, or take some other method.

The city ordinances say that the chief engineer shall prosecute all persons who shall give a false alarm.

The Public Statutes cover this crime in Section 13 of Chapter 206 which reads:

> Whoever, without reasonable cause, by outcry or the ringing of bells, or otherwise makes or circulates or causes to be made or circulated a false alarm of fire shall be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars.

ATLANTIC.

Preaching at 3 o'clock Sunday in Music hall by Rev. Wm. Full. Prayer meeting at 7 and Sunday School at 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sanborn will occupy their new home by the first of the month, and as it is one of the handsomest places in Atlantic they can well feel proud, but the question is will it be large enough to hold all of their friends the first night.

The firemen of Atlantic are to hold a ball in Music hall Friday evening, September 25, dancing from 8 to 2. The object of the ball is to raise funds for a pool table for their hall.

Sanford Small, of the firm of Timberlake & Small, is away on his vacation.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of Atlantic, met in the new vestry for the first time Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Mable Burr has returned from York Beach, Me., where she spent two weeks.

Mr. D. S. Fletcher, attorney-at-law of Chicago, Ill., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clare.

Mrs. Bell Mosely has some of the most beautiful beds of helitropes ever seen in Atlantic.

Miss Mamie Webster has returned from Fall River.

John Morrison is the new and popular clerk at Timberlake & Small's.

The Sunday Herald, without going into sensationalism, seems to have found things rather unpleasant for Boston's poor at the pauper institutions at Long and Rainsford Islands. With the demon of "politics" or rather impolitics dominating everything of a public nature connected with the large cities, the wonder is that the cities' wards obtain as good treatment as they do. The man or woman who is given up to the tender mercies of attendants at city institutions for the poor, is a creature whose fate is to be deplored and to be regarded with something like horror. Abuses, only differing in importance, appear to exist at nearly every institution that may be investigated. —Brockton Enterprise.

Hominy Gems.

BY MRS. D. A. LINCOLN,
Author Boston Cook Book.

Mix 2 table-sp. fine, uncooked hominy, ½ tea sp. salt, 1 table-sp. butter, and ½ cup boiling water. Place this over the tea kettle until the hominy absorbs all the water. Pour 1 cup boiling milk on 1 scant cup fine yellow corn meal; add 2 table-sp. sugar and the hominy. Let it cool slightly, then add the yolks of 2 eggs beaten to a light froth, then the whites beaten stiff. Stir in 1 level tea sp. Cleveland's baking powder and bake at once in hot buttered gem pans, about 20 minutes. A scant cup of cold boiled hominy may be used instead of the fresh hominy. It should be sifted through a squash strainer, to free it from lumps.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council went through the form Monday of holding a meeting, but when the clerk called the roll only Councilmen Bass, Gray, Hammond and Thompson responded.

President Thompson then said, only four members having responded to the roll call, being less than a quorum, no business can be transacted, and a motion to adjourn will be in order.

Councilman Gray then moved that the meeting and also the hearings advertised for that date be adjourned to Wednesday evening, Sept. 9, at 7.45 o'clock.

The motion prevailed and within three minutes the Council stood adjourned.

It was pre-arranged that no quorum should be present, as it was a legal holiday and no business could be legally transacted

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held Wednesday evening with 20 members present. The absentees were Councilmen Bryant, Fallon and Morton.

A Question of Legality.

An opinion was received from City Solicitor Hayes on the question propounded by the City Council.

He decides that it is legal for the City Council to take preliminary action upon an order authorizing the erection of a schoolhouse before the approval of the plans have been certified to the Council by the School Committee. Communication placed on file.

Rodman Street.

The advertised hearing on the laying out of Rodman street was held at 7.50, but no one desired to be heard.

The hearing was closed and it was voted that the matter be referred back to the Committee on Streets, to report an order laying out said street 36 feet wide.

Electric Freight Hearing.

Because of the adjournment of the Council from Monday to Wednesday evening there was some misunderstanding as to the time of the hearing on the petition of the Quincy Electric Street Railway for a location. The petitioners were not prepared to proceed, and it was finally voted to adjourn the hearing to the regular meeting on Oct. 19, at 8.15 P. M.

School Committee Meetings.

An application of the School Committee was received requesting the use of the Council Chamber for its meeting.

Councilman Jones moved that the request be granted, and spoke in favor of public meetings of that board.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Teal Pond Again.

The Board of Health asked an appropriation of $200 with which to abate the Teal Pond nuisance. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Bridge Assessment.

The Mayor notified the Council of an assessment levied by the trustees of the Hingham and Quincy Bridges. Quincy's proportion was $125 which must be provided by a new appropriation. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Public Works Plant.

The Mayor forwarded a communication of the Commissioner of Public Works relative to the establishment of a permanent plant for crushing stone for road building purposes. The Mayor deems the recommendation most important, not only that the work on the streets can be done more satisfactory, but also at a reduced cost. He hoped that the Council would give the recommendation their early attention, for if a plant is established this year, it can be in operation early next season, accumulating the crushed stone, and having the proper material ready for the necessary repairs on our streets early in the spring.

The communication of Commissioner Ewell appeared in Friday's LEDGER. It advocates the purchase of land, and the establishment of a plant to cost $4,500; also the purchase of another steam roller at a cost of $3,800. Referred to joint committee on Finance and Streets.

Monthly Statements.

The Auditor's statements for August 1, and Sept. 1, and also those of the Treasurer's were received and referred to the Finance committee without reading. The expenditure according to bills approved up to Sept. 1, is $145,866.11 out of total appropriations of $242,478.82, leaving a balance of $98,435.86 for the last four months of the year.

Claim for Damages.

Peter Cunniff petitioned through his attorney to be allowed compensation for damages to his estate on Hancock street by change of grade. Referred to Committee on Claims.

Applications.

Applications for State aid were received from William Simons and Thomas Brady; for increase of State aid from Theodore W. Fowle; all of which were referred to Committee on State Aid.

H. D. Brown made application for a common vitualler's license. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

Petition for Light.

Charles H. Richards and many others petitioned for an electric light at the corner of Brook and Centre streets.

A motion of Councilman Jones to refer it to the executive department provoked considerable opposition as similar petitions had been laid on the table this year. Councilmen Hammond, Gray and Powers were among the opposers.

Councilman Little requested the attendance of the Mayor, and asked his opinion relative to such petitions, to whom they should be addressed, and whether if referred to his department there was any way of granting the petition.

Mayor Fairbanks was of the opinion that all petitions should be sent to the executive department, and when this was done would make a recommendation.

Councilman Moxon did not understand that the Council should refer all petitions received to the executive. Petitioners might address them to the Mayor.

Councilman Sherman objected to the motion and it was voted down, and the petition referred to the Committee on Lights.

Bills of 1890.

Auditor Hall forwarded bills against the city contracted by various departments in 1890, aggregating $326.46. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Amendment to Rules.

Councilman Sherman presented an order to amend Rule 1, making the hour of meeting 7.50 instead of 7.45, so that the Ward Five and Six members who arrive at 7.48 by train might be present at roll call.

Councilman Duffield favored 7.15.

Action deferred until next meeting.

Water Street Widening.

Councilman Jones moved to rescind all action on the widening of Water street, the Committee on streets having been instructed to report an order calling for a forty foot street. He believed there had since been a change of sentiment in favor of forty-five feet. The damages he had been informed, for the forty foot street would be $4,787.75. He thought the cost for the extra five feet would be about $1,725, making a total of $6,560.

Councilman Moxon raised the point that the Council should not take action before requesting committee to report.

Councilman Warner opposed rescinding. He had been an advocate of forty-five feet but did not believe a vote could be obtained for that width either this year or next. He thought the executive department was opposed to forty-five feet. He therefore favored holding on to what had been done.

Councilman Jones said the gentleman was mistaken; he knew the executive to favor the wider width.

Councilman Warner said the executive must then have changed its mind.

Councilman Little and Newcomb favored rescinding that road might be built forty-five feet.

Councilman Sherman moved to lay motion on table, as some who had led the majority to vote for forty feet were abesnt.

Councilman Bass said he had voted for 40 feet on the statement of Engineer Whitman that the damages on a 45-foot road would be four or five times as much as on a 40-foot road. He wanted time to further consider, and favored laying on table.

Councilman Jones said it would cost about $25,000 to build the street 40 feet, and about $6000 more for five additional feet. Damages to be extra.

Commissioner Ewell said the figures were substantially correct.

Councilman Moxon thought 40 feet would answer if street was paved so all could be utilized.

The motion to lay Councilman Jones' motion on the table prevailed.

Calendar.

The order granting Prout Bros. permission to run wire guy across Water street was passed to be engrossed.

Adjourned at 9.17 to Sept. 21.

Willard School Dedication.

The severe storm of Monday did not prevent the citizens of West Quincy from turning out in good numbers to participate in the jollification of the formal opening of the new Willard school building on Copeland street, thus establishing a precedent which will doubtless be followed at the completion of all other buildings for like purposes that may be erected in the future.

The building was opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and all through the day many citizens from all parts of the city availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect this, one of the finest and best appointed school buildings in the country. As there are many who have not and perhaps will not have an opportunity to inspect the interior, a brief description will not be out of place.

Both entrances to the building are on the west side. Entering at either door we pass through a short entry-way into a hall with tiled floors. These halls lead into a long corridor which runs north and south through the centre of the building. In this corridor are two faucets, one at each end, which supply water for drinking purposes; there is also a large soapstone sink, which sets in an alcove near the centre. Two stairways lead to the play and sanitary rooms in the basement, one for the use of the girls and one for the boys, and at each end of the corridor are broad stairways which lead to the second floor.

On the right of the first entrance from Copeland street is the master's room from which communications are had by means of electric bells and speaking tubes with every room in the building, and a teacher in one room can also speak with any other teacher in the building without leaving her desk, as all she has to do is to call the master's room where by means of a flexible tube connection is instantly made with the teacher desired.

From the master's room connection is had electrically with the bells in the play rooms and the large eighteen-inch gong in the cupola which calls the scholars in.

On the same floor there is also a good sized room for the use of the other teachers which is provided with clothes-hooks and a wash-bowl.

Besides the rooms on the first or street floor already mentioned are seven schoolrooms of sixty desks each, and one of fifty desks and eight cloak rooms.

The corridor on the second floor is provided with drinking places and sink like that on the street floor. On this floor there are five rooms of fifty desks each, three of forty-five desks and one of twenty-four desks, making seventeen school-rooms in all and 879 desks.

On the second floor there are also nine cloak rooms, a laboratory and a large store room for books and papers.

At each end of this corrider are also stairways which lead to a large hall whose dimensions are 53 x 121, on the sides and ends of which are four good sized unfinished store rooms.

All of the finishing of the building is in ash with the exception of the floors, which are hard pine. The ceilings are sheathed and the walls tinted slate color. Each room is lighted by large windows and is also wired and piped for electric lights and gas. A wide blackboard extends all round each room and there are also closets for books, etc.

At each end of the corridors there is a three inch water main with gates and couplings on each floor, which will be used for fire purposes. A further protection in case of fire is had by iron sliding doors, by which, in case of fire in one part of the building that could be shut off from the others and thus be confined to a small space.

The doors throughout the building open outward.

The Dedication.

Just before 2 o'clock in spite of the rain which was falling quite fast the band marched from the depot to and into the building to the hall where they gave a concert, meanwhile the celebrities arrived and took a look at the building. Among the first to arrive were Mayor Fairbanks, Commissioner Ewell, and Auditor John O. Hall, and shortly after Deputy Manager of Police George O. Langley, Chief Engineer Walter H. Ripley, Representative James F. Burke, President James Thompson of the Council, Rev. F. A. Roche and Elijah Hall of the School Board, B. Frank Thomas of the Board of Health, Councilmen Fallon, Newcomb, Hammond and Little, ex-Councilman Shea and Graham, Engineer White and others.

While the inspection of the building was in progress an impromptu platform had been put up at one end of the hall upon which were seated Mayor Fairbanks, Commissioner Ewell, President Thompson, Rev. F. A. Roche, Mr. S. F. Willard and Mr. Suckling.

The band played "Hail Columbia" and the exercises were opened by

Commissioner Ewell,

who said, as the building had been completed according to the plans and specifications he took pleasure in turning the building and keys over to His Honor, the Mayor.

Mayor Fairbanks

in accepting the keys said:

MR. COMMISSIONER: One of the most arduous duties devolving upon the Commissioner of Public Works, is supervising the erection of public buildings, and today, in receiving from you, the keys of this building, thus publicly notifying me of its completion, allow me to thank you for the interest you have taken, the care you have exercised, and the faithfulness with which you have discharged the important duty of hastening the completion of this much needed structure.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The citizens of Quincy have ever taken a just pride in her schools, and in framing the charter under which we live, ordained that her interests would best be served by placing them in the control of those who would devote their special attention to this most important question, while the mere erection of the outer building was placed in another department.

Rightly it has been said, that there are three influences at work, moulding the child into the upright intelligent and patriotic citizen. These are, the home, the school and the church. In this work, each, in a certain sense is distinct and independent, but all are intimately interwoven while they are contributing to the one grand result.

Our forefathers wisely believed in the system of a free public education as being necessary to the life of the nation, and the history of our country proves that its citizens have ever encouraged the efforts of those who were devoting their attention to the education of those committed to their charge.

The public schools of our country know no caste, or peculiar rights due to one because of birth, wealth or social position. The child of the rich and the poor sit side by side within its walls enjoying equal advantages.

The child born in this city, and the one whose birthplace was across the sea, may read from the same text book, participate in the same exercises, and receive the same kind treatment from the teachers and the honors of the class are open alike to all.

Here the children will learn the true dignity of manhood, a willing obedience to authority, the knowledge that one has the same rights as another. Their lessons will come to them as they make their progress through childhood, fitting them for the sterner realities of life.

It is eminently fitting that over this free public school, the flag of our country which is a symbol of liberty should float today, and may those who gather here from day to day, revere and respect it for the lesson it conveys, and cherish the memories of those who risked their lives to maintain its supremacy.

And so Mr. Chairman, having been informed that the duty confided to the executive department has been completed, I hereby resign to your keeping the building; may it serve its noble purpose for many years to come, and bring a wealth of comfort and happiness to those who are privileged to enter its doors.

Rev. F. A. Roche.

I accept the trust confided to us and thank the people in the name of the school committee. To the Mayor and Mr. Shackley who have hastened the completion, the citizens owe a debt of gratitude.

S. F. Willard

Was then introduced as a descendant of Solomon Willard stock. Mr. Willard turned to Mr. Suckling, the principal of the school, and presented him with a handsome flag to float from the flagstaff of the building and remain in the care of the school.

The flag was received with cheers and the band played the Star Spangled Banner.

Principal Suckling

In behalf of the teachers and pupils thanked Mr. Willard most heartily. He further said the story of the Star Spangled Banner was too old to repeat at this time, but we shall endeavor to give the children the instructions that will cause them to ever love and cherish it.

James Thompson,

The President of the Council, was then introduced as a graduate of the Willard school. Mr. Thompson said he recognized among the ladies and gentlemen present many old schoolmates. It was here he spent many happy hours of his boyhood days. More than thirty years ago when he first entered the school the teacher asked him his name, age and where he lived, and then told him the school was full and there were no seats. In this respect history seems to have been repeated, for we are now told that the capacity is still overtaxed. He was pleased to congratulate the people of West Quincy in the possession of a building without an equal in Quincy or in this County of Norfolk.

President Thompson's remarks called forth the familiar air, "Auld Lang Syne," from the band.

Jonas Shackley

Was called upon by Chairman Roche, who said the people knew more about the building than he did. Mr. Shackley told of the condition of the building when he took it, saying the snow came in at the roof and there was a skating pond in the cellar. He had done his best to forward the work and you now see the result.

Representative James F. Burke

Said he did not intend to speak, but as the sun has shone its rays on the edifice he would. The best monument a man can leave to the world is one left through his hands and brains to enrich the world.

Willard has a meaning which the old scholars will long remember. We have on the platform today a descendant of the Willard who left as a monument this lot of land. Mr. Burke then briefly outlined the life of Solomon Willard and closed by saying that if he could be here with us today in spirit he would think this a grand jollification.

Mr. Lewis Badger

Was then introduced as being the oldest surviving member of the school board of Quincy.

Mr. Badger spoke briefly of the early school days and the changes that have taken place. Here we have accommodations for 800 scholars and yet it is not large enough. When the old Willard was built it was intended to accommodate the scholars for all time. He would like to have Mr. Willard come here and see this building. In closing Mr. Badger congratulated the city on the completion of its new building.

The exercises then closed with America by the band.

It was Mr. Willard's intention to raise the flag at the dedication, but halliards had not been provided and this was dispensed with. Mr. Willard however, went to West Quincy Wednesday morning and raised the flag for the first time.

At 8.45 o'clock the teachers and scholars assembled in one corner of the yard and as Mr. S. F. Willard hauled the flag to the mast head one and all gave three rousing cheers.

It was at first thought to have the children sing the Star Spangled Banner, but as they had not been together for some time this was abandoned. The teachers, however, talked to their scholars after school opened about the history of the flag.

Prohibition Caucus.

The Prohibition party held their caucus at Faxon hall, Quincy, on Saturday evening. The meeting was called to order by the secretary of the city committee. Mr. W. W. Marple was chosen chairman and Henry Chubbuck secretary. The following delegates were elected to attend the state convention to be held at Worcester, Sept. 9:

A. W. Sprague, W. W. Marple, Henry Chubbuck, Charles H. Johnson, Rev. J. H. Yeoman, W. F. Lakin, David Badger, Charles B. Tilton, Nathaniel Nightingale and Joseph W. Whiting, 2d.

Voted that the same delegates are authorized to attend Councillor, Senatorial, County and Representative conventions.

Charles H. Johnson, who was elected a delegate, authorizes the PATRIOT to omit his name from the list as he is a Republican.

District Court, Quincy.

Thomas E. Bramley of Holbrook was arraigned for assault on Maggie Burke, and continued until Thursday morning.

William Foy of West Quincy, for disturbing the peace, was fined $8.

Sarah E. Sheldon of Everett for the larceny of a singing book from the Methodist church at Atlantic was discharged.

George N. Caldwell of Atlantic was arraigned on a warrant charging him with adultery with Sarah E. Sheldon and continued to Friday morning.

Thomas Doran of Weymouth for disturbing the peace, fined $10.

Honorah Sheahan of Braintree was arraigned for keeping a disorderly house and continued for hearing until Saturday morning.

The continued case of George E. Caldwell for adultery with Sarah L. Shelton came up for hearing this morning and finding probable cause to believe him guilty he was held in $500 for the grand jury next December.

Waltham and Elgin Watches $5 to $10, Williams, West Quincy jeweller.

Want Their Money.

Twenty-one members of the local lodge of the Golden Grail have entered a suit against the Imperial officers to compel them to pay the value of their certificates which matured June 15 and 30. Their case has been placed in the hands of Sherman L. Whipple, Esq.

These members have paid all demands upon them, and have waited patiently for their money which although frequently promised has not been forth coming.

Norfolk County Post Offices.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has instructed Charles H. Riley, postmaster at Dedham, to personally visit each of the seventy-four post offices in Norfolk county, and has instructed him as to what questions he must ask of each postmaster. He will commence his task at once and devote to it what time he can spare each day without neglect of his own office duties. His report must be completed by Oct. 15th. The object in view is a movement looking to the improvement of the mail service in the county. The Norfolk county offices will receive a rating based upon Postmaster Riley's report, and be divided into five grades—perfect, excellent, good, fair and poor.

—A petition is in circulation in Revere asking the Selectmen to call a town meeting to take preliminary steps toward a city government. The town now has a population of 13,000.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy."

Don't Delay

trying Cottolene, the new, popular, successful vegetable Lard. Don't wait for your neighbor to tell you about it. It is the first duty of the housekeeper to provide wholesome food. Everybody recognizes the unpleasant effects of the so-called "richness" of food prepared with lard. The "richness" is nothing but grease; the housekeeper knows that its presence in food is unsafe and unfit, but now science has discovered

COTTOLENE

Its success is unbounded. It will enter every kitchen and increase many fold the varieties of food which may be enjoyed. The housekeeper need no longer hesitate in the use of shortening in catering for those who are delicate. The problem is solved. Use Cottolene. Sold by all grocers.

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Heirs-at-Law and others interested in the estate of

WILLIAM E. CROUCHER,

late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

Greeting:

Whereas, George W. Morton, executor of the will of said deceased, has presented to said Court his petition for license to sell the whole of the real estate of said deceased, for the payment of debts, legacies and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the third Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this Citation, by publishing the same once a week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy PATRIOT, a newspaper printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this seventeenth day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

Watertown, South Dakota.

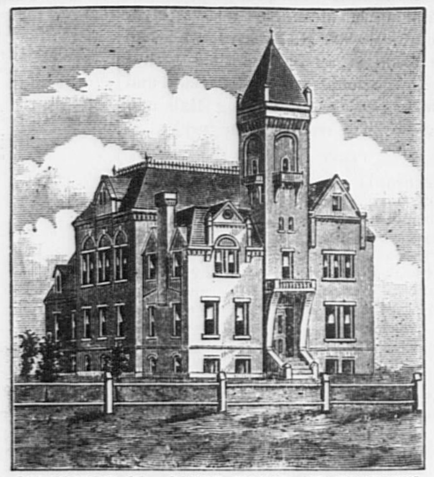
A natural centre and distributing point. The following extracts from a response to an address of welcome from Governor Millette, of South Dakota, to a party of Boston business men, presents a vivid picture of the resources of South Dakota, and the future of its destined capital.

"South Dakota, geographically speaking, is an empire herself, her head in the Rockies, jewelled and bedecked in ice and snow, her feet in the rich, warm valley of the Sioux adorned with summer harvests and fragrant with prairie roses. South Dakota is a country capable of producing from her soil everything necessary for the comfort and the blessing of the human life."

Thirteen years ago not a white man within 125 miles of where I stand; to-day a beautiful city rising, as by magic, from the lap of your lakes and from your virgin and verdant soil.

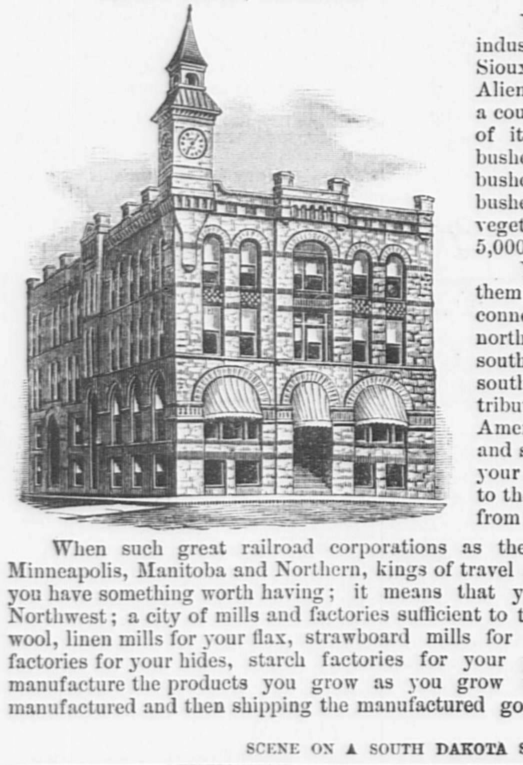
Everything about your town suggests business and social permanency; your public buildings, your mercantile houses, your pretty homes, your water-works, your electric light and gas plants, your motor lines, are what we might expect to see in a city of 50,000 inhabitants.

While you have done nothing to boom WATERTOWN, but have quietly builded your homes, made beautiful your streets, your parks, and your drives, the wealth of your surroundings and the natural laws of trade and enterprise have done much for you.



CODINGTON CO. COURT HOUSE, WATERTOWN.

GRANITE BLOCK, WATERTOWN.



Your country has been settled by stalwart and industrious farmers, who are rapidly making your rich Sioux valley, which for richness of soil equals Aguas Alientes of Mexico, and vies with the Nile and the Ganges, a country of incalcuable wealth and of great beauty. Think of it, the infant State of America yielding 22,000,000 bushels of wheat, 10,000,000 bushels of oats, 4,000,000 bushels of barley, 5,000,000 bushels of flaxseed, 25,000,000 bushels of corn, 3,000,000 bushels of potatoes, lesser vegetables in proportion, 10,000,000 pounds of wool, 5,000,000 head of horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs.

You have a great system of railways, and to reproduce them would cost upwards of $210,000,000. You are connected directly by your railroads with Duluth on the north, Minneapolis and St. Paul on the east. Chicago southeast, Omaha south, the sheep prairies of Wyoming southwest, Bismarck, the Northern Pacific, with its tributaries, northwest, and the Black Hills, the centre of American tin, and the centre of many of the largest gold and silver mines in the country, in the west. So peculiar is your railroad competition that you can ship your products to the East and Europe as cheap as they can be shipped from Minneapolis, though you are 226 miles farther west.

When such great railroad corporations as the Chicago and Northwestern, the Rock Island, the Minneapolis, Manitoba and Northern, kings of travel and trade, pounce down upon your town, it means that you have something worth having; it means that you are to have a city which will direct the trade of the Northwest; a city of mills and factories sufficient to take care of your grain and fibre—woolen mills for your wool, linen mills for your flax, strawboard mills for the million tons of straw you annually waste; shoe factories for your hides, starch factories for your potatoes, sugar mills for your beets; it means mills to manufacture the products you grow as you grow them, instead of freighting them 2,000 miles east to be manufactured and then shipping the manufactured goods back to you.

Tax Rates.

The PATRIOT has made an effort to get the tax rate of all the cities of the Commonwealth and the list below probably includes all where the assessors have concluded their labors, leaving only Holyoke and Marlboro.

Eight cities have a rate between $15.00 and $16.00 per $1,000, and in four it is between $16.00 and $17.00. In Pittsfield and Northampton the honors are even at $17.00 and Salem and Chelsea are a tie at $18.00.

Here is the summary of all the Massachusetts cities:

Chicopee	$12.50
Springfield	12.50
Boston	12.60
QUINCY	13.60
Somerville	14.00
Lynn	14.60
Worcester	14.60
Lawrence	14.80
Newton	15.00
Malden	15.00
Gloucester	15.40
Cambridge	15.50
Lowell	15.60
Woburn	15.70
Haverhill	15.80
Newburyport	15.80
Marlboro
Waltham	16.00
Fitchburg	16.20
New Bedford	16.30
Taunton	16.40
Northampton	17.00
Pittsfield	17.00
Fall River	17.20
Brockton	17.50
Holyoke
Salem	18.00
Chelsea	18.00

The average rate of the 26 cities reported is above $15.00 per $1,000. Quincy tax payers with a rate nearly $2.00 below the average, have no cause to complain.

I would, O sea, thy destinies were mine
To shape for one short day. I'd give to thee
The rest which I am sure thou'dst not decline,
If thou to have thy way were wholly free.

This endless beating on the sandy shore,
This constant undulation on the deep,
The never-ceasing din of thy dull roar,
Do testify the vigil thou dost keep.

Methinks if thou couldst in quiescence lie
For one full day 'twere better for mankind—
For them that dwell the sounding coast hard by,
For them that homes unfathomable find.

And so I'd say, had I the sovereign power,
Were all that is subjected to my will
For but one day, one minute, or one hour,
"Whilst I am reigning, Sea, do thou be still."

Household Receipts.

CHICKEN PATTIES. Take the breast of a large, boiled chicken, cut fine, put half a pint of the water in which it was boiled in a sauce-pan, with a thin slice of lean ham chopped fine, let simmer; melt a tablespoonful each of flour and butter together; stir half a teacup of milk into the broth and pour over the melted butter; when smooth and thick, add the chicken, let boil five minutes; take from the fire and stir in the beaten yelks of two eggs. Have ready little patty shells, and fill with the mixture.

APPLE PUDDING. One pound of grated apple, half a pound of butter, half a pound of sugar, six eggs, half a pint of cream, the juice and grated rind of one lemon; grate your apples; beat the butter and sugar very light, whisk the eggs and add to it, add the apples, cream and lemon. Stir all together, line your pie plates with rich paste, pour in the mixture and bake it. A few currants may be added.

RICE DUMPLINGS. Put your rice in a stew pan, and pour on each cup of rice one gill of milk; stand it near the fire where it will keep hot but not boil. As soon as it has absorbed all the milk, pare your apples, take out the cores, and put the rice around them instead of paste. Boil them until the apple is soft. They should be tied in dumpling cloths.

SARATOGA POTATOES. Peel the potatoes, slice them with a cold-slaw cutter and throw them into ice-water; let them lie in it several hours, even for a night, and wipe quite dry; have ready a skillet, with boiling lard quite deep in it; throw the potatoes in, and they will brown quickly; lift them out with a perforated skimmer, and drain on a dish spread with soft paper.

POTATO RIBBON. Peel the potatoes and lay them in ice-water for an hour; then pare with a small knife, round and round, in one continuous curling strip; drop into boiling lard; drain, and arrange neatly on a hot dish. They can be placed around the edge of a dish upon which beefsteak is served.

Peel fine ripe tomatoes, cut them up in small pieces, and put in a pan a layer of bread crumbs, then a layer of tomatoes, with pepper, salt and some pieces of butter; then put another layer of bread crumbs and tomatoes, and so on till the dish is full. Spread some beaten eggs over the top and set it in the oven and bake it.

Anecdotes.

Housewife—"Go 'way from this door. What do you want, anyway?"

Seedy-looking man, starting off—"I wanted to make you a call; I'm the new minister.

Closefist—"No, I do not. What would you do?"

Pebble I. Timbertoe—"I'd be just as mean as you are."

Mrs. Jaysmith (to grocer)—"Ten pounds of sugar."

Grocer (as customer walks out)—"I beg your pardon, but you didn't pay for the sugar."

"Mrs. Jaysmith—"Of course not. Sugar's free now. I read the papers, I do, and you can't fool me."

"I like this dress very much," said Ethel. "It is just too delightfully tight. But where are the pockets?"

"Here they are," said the dressmaker, handing her two small silken bags. "You'll have to carry them in your hands. There's not room in the dress for them."

RISING YOUNG WESTERN CITY.

Attractions of the Metropolis of the Sioux Valley.

In the Midst of the Most Fertile Region of South Dakota is Watertown, with Eight Railroads and Teeming with Life and Activity,—Its Many Advantages.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WATERTOWN, S. D., Aug. 20, 1891.—Here I am on the shores of Lake Kampeska, where the Indians claim that Gitche Maniton, the "Great Spirit," has addressed the Sioux Indians for many ages. This is said to be the most beautiful lake in the country—an inland ocean of fairy charms. The lake is fed by artesian springs from subterranean seas.

Beginning on the northern shore of this lake, and running in the shape of a V, is the great Sisseton reservation, the lingering home of the Sisseton and Wampetan Indians and comprising 3,000,000 acres of the choicest and richest blue grass land in the known world. This reservation will be opened to settlers within the next sixty days, and it is safe to say that within the next six months thousands of families will have secured homes at settlers' prices, which in three years' time will be worth from $50 to $100 per acre, and which will yield every year the value of the farm in the rich products of the Northwest.

The government agent is now paying the Indians for this land, and thousands of men, women and children are gathering on the border, waiting to cross over into the promised land.

In this great Sioux valley, crops never fail; here they have never known a drought. The average yield brings the farmer nearly the value of his land every year, and this is some thing which can be said of but few locations in the world.

The old chief of the Dacotahs said, in addressing his braves, a few days ago: "Brave Dacotahs can no longer hope to hold beloved Kampeska."

At the south point of this reservation, in Lake Kampeska, is a huge rock known as "Prophet Rock." There has been from the birth of time among these Indians a legend that, so long as this rock remained above the water so long would the Indians retain the land, but that when it should sink beneath the waves the white man would possess it and hold sway. Strange as it may seem, this rock has been gradually sinking for the past ten years, and now as this reservation is being opened up by settlers and the Indians' title is being extinguished, this rock has sunk beneath the water.

"Sing, O, song of Hiawatha,
Of the happy days that followed
In the land of the Dakotas,
In the pleasant land and peaceful,
Sing the mysteries of Mondamin,
Sing the blessings of the cornfield.
Buried is the bloody hatred,
Buried is the dreaded war club,
And the war cry is forgotten.
There is peace among the nations."

These are the waters of which Longfellow wrote, Mrs. Sigourney poetized and Nilsson sung her sweetest song:

"Fascinating Lake of the heavens,
Waves of the setting sun,
Springs from an internal ocean
Whither go you and from whence did you come."

Lake and country of poet and poetess, singer and songstress soon to be a valley fit for gods. On the shores of Kampeska, a

City is Arising as by Magic.

Twelve years ago not a white man within 125 miles of Kampeska; today, in a rich and prosperous agricultural valley of the richest land in the West, and on the shores of this lake is Watertown, a city of 6000 inhabitants, and a better built city than I have ever seen in the East of three times its size.

As a manufacturing city, Watertown is destined to rival Minneapolis and Omaha in a very few years. It is in the centre of the richest farming country of the West, a country which has made thousands of farmers wealthy in one year.

A Professor of the State University, writing to a Detroit paper a short time ago, said:—"I am standing on the porch of the house of an old friend who left Michigan five years ago for Watertown, S. D. He arrived in this country with a team of horses, six children and less than $100 in money. Today he owns 1200 acres of the richest and most beautiful land man's eyes ever rested upon. He doesn't owe a dollar, his land is worth $60 to $70 per acre, he has in his granary 8,000 bushels of last year's wheat, will harvest this year 17,000 bushels more, and his fields are covered with the finest stock. From where I am siting I can see half a dozen other farmers as prosperous as he. In this country the farmer is monarch, the toiler of the soil is king.

Recently a syndicate was formed composed entirely of eastern men (though several prominent western men are interested in it,) called "The Watertown Land and Improvement Company." Its offices are in this city, and in the Equitable building, Boston, Mass. This company purchased in June last nearly half of the city of Watertown, and several thousand acres adjoining land, and control the shores of Lake Kampeska and Lake Pelican.

This company offers every inducement to manufacturers to come to what promises to be a second Chicago. Five railroads are said to be in the deal. Several of the car shops are coming here and nearly a dozen factories have been arranged for.

Books, maps, and charts of Watertown and the Sioux valley are furnished upon application at the Company's office in Boston. They have already aided numerous farmers in getting homes in this richest of all lands. Their plan is to make Watertown, at the earliest possible day, a city second to none in the Northwest.

But it must not be forgotten that Watertown is already a city of the finest buildings in the State, a city of great wealth and prosperity, a city of manufacturing institutions, wholesale houses, motor lines, lighted by gas and electric lights, a city of beautiful residences, churches, streets, parks, avenues and drives, magnificent school buildings, hotels and mercantile houses.

A banquet was given on the 18th of last June to a delegation of New England gentlemen by the citizens of Watertown, and the address of welcome was delivered by Hon. A. C. Mellette, Governor of South Dakota. The Governor's speech was replied to by one of the party, who took for his toast, "The Three Dakotas—the Past, Present and Future." The following extracts from his speech will give the reader an idea of the Wealth of this New World.

Gov. Mellette, Ladies and Gentlemen: "I poorly express the feelings of my associates and myself when I say that we are glad to meet in these splendid Dakotas so many prosperous and happy men and women.

* * * *

Think for a moment what you have: South Dakota, geographically speaking, is an empire herself, her head in the Rockies, jeweled and bedecked in ice and snow, her feet in the rich, warm valley of the Sioux, adorned with summer harvests and fragrant with prairie roses. South Dakota is a country capable of producing from her soil everything necessary for the comfort and blessing of human life. Twelve years ago a population of 30,000 inhabitants, and most of these tenting on the plains, today a population of 450,000 men, women and children in comfortable homes, surrounded by plenty, happy, contented, and growing rich. Thirteen years ago not a white man within 125 miles of where I stand: today a beautiful city, rising, as by magic, from the lap of your lakes, and from your virgin and verdant soil. Think of it, the infant state of America yielding 22,000,000 bushels in wheat, 10,000,000 bushels of oats, 3,000,000 bushels of barley; 5,000,000 bushels of flaxseed, 25,000,000 bushels of corn, 3,000,000 bushels of potatoes, lesser vegetables in proportion, 10,000,000 pounds of wool, 5,000,000 head of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. The indications now are that your harvests this year will be double to what they have ever been. The picture is nothing less than a transformation scene, yesterday a wild prairie roamed over by the Indian and the coyette, today a rich and prosperous field, inhabited by the best civilization of the western world.

"You have a great system of railways, and to reproduce them would cost upward of $210,000,000. You are connected directly by your railroads, with Duluth on the north, Minneapolis and St. Paul on the east, Chicago south-east, Omaha south, the sheep prairies of Wyoming south-west. Bismark, the Northern Pacific, with its tributaries northwest, and the Black Hills, the centre of American tin and the centre of many of the largest gold and silver mines in the country, in the West. So peculiar is your railroad competition that you can ship your products to the eastern states and Europe as cheap as they can be shipped from Minneapolis, though you are 226 miles west of Minneapolis. When such great railroad corporations as the Chicago and Northwestern, the Rock Island, the Minneapolis, Manitoba & Northern, kings of travel and trade, pounce upon your town, it means that you have something worth having; it means that you are to have a city which will a city of mills and factories sufficient to take care of your grain and fibre—woollen mills for your wool, linen mills for your flax, straw-board mills for the million tons of straw you annually waste; shoe factories for your hides, starch factories for your potatoes, sugar mills for your beets; it mean mills to manufacture the products you grow as you grow them, instead of freighting them 2,000 miles east to be manufactured and then shipping the manufactured goods back to you.

"Why should not Watertown become a great city? Your climate alone should induce thousands to visit your city every summer and autumn: your lakes, your fields and landscapes thousands more. Statistics show that where the death rate throughout the United States is 160, the death rate in South Dakota is but 66. No pestilence or scourge has ever visited your fair shores, nor has malaria, the curse of so many western and southern states, ever by its poisonous breath, affected one of your homes—a country of vigor in its brain, health in its bosom, and energy at its feet. In a word, South Dakota is the most healthy northern climate on this continent.

* * * * *

The boon has struck the city; people are arriving on every train from all sections of the world; work is progressing of every nature, and here and there streets and parks are being made

I understand

An Excursion

Will leave Boston, Sept. 28, for this city, under the auspices of Raymond & Whitcomb. This will be a great opportunity for New Englanders to visit this land of wealth and beauty, of golden sun and Indian summers—the most beautiful country in the great Northwest.

South Dakota will sell upwards of $100,000,000 of produce this year.

While writing from the observatory on Capital Hill, I see five trains departing and four arriving; I see thousands of stacks of grain in all directions, and long lines of wagons over nine roads, hauling the products of the season; I hear the sportsman's gun as he pursues the trail of the wild chicken; the motor cars are filled with excursionists, picknicking on the shores of the lake; I can see for forty miles in every direction, and as far as the eye can reach is a great harvest of wealth.

The finest hotel in the State is the Arcade Hotel, the finest business block the Granite block, the finest school building the High school, all of Watertown.

There are more pretty women in Watertown than I have ever seen in any town of its size, except Paris, Ky. It is a city of schools and churches, and educational attainments rank high.—Boston Herald.

Boston Theatre.

"The Old Homestead" has been with us one week and delighted thousands of people have nightly filled this large playhouse. The impersonation of the genial old New Hampshire farmer by Denman Thompson is a whole souled piece of acting and he is loved by his whole audience. Manager Tompkins has had the play most elaborately staged, no expense being spared to make this the best presentation ever given. For a good, wholesome play, typical of New England country life, this play has no equal and cannot fail to leave a good impression on the minds of all its hearers.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The great success of last year, "Blue Jeans," has been revived for a two weeks' run at the Hollis Street Theatre, and today brings the first week to an end. All the original scenery is used and the big saw mill continues to quicken the pulses of the audience. The play is beautifully staged; full of fun and pathos, and calculated to please all theatre-goers, being so realistic as to hold the attention of the audience from beginning to end. Mr. Robert Hilliard, the original Perry Bascom in New York city, makes his first appearance in Boston, while the rest of the company is much the same as when presented here last winter. "Blue Jeans" will continue through next week.

The Duty of the Pulpit.

The toleration of the liquor traffic is the greatest anachronism of the nineteenth century—the greatest crime of Christendom, the greatest shame of the Christian church. Thirteen million communicants of the Protestant Christian church in this Christian nation and this traffic of hell unchecked. Thirteen million Christian men and woman in Protestantism, and six million more in the Catholic communion, all helpless and palsied in the presence of this oligarchy of Satan. Nineteen million Christians and one hundred thousand Christian ministers, and the saloon, according to the New York Times, has more power in the politics of the country than all the churches, all the ministers, all the membership, all the colleges and schools of the nation combined.

If anything could stir the heart of the church it is this appalling sight. And this sad spectacle too in the presence of the fact that a united effort on the part of these churches would speedily overthrow this throne of iniquity. Could not these millions of Christian people outlaw the liquor traffic, if they would? Could they not stop its legal manufacture and sale for drinking purposes, if they would? Could they not prevent the United States government and the government of every individual state from having any further complicity with this iniquity by licensing or legalizing it in any form, if they would? Could they not force every legislature to put this fruitful source of crime in the category with other crimes that exist only in defiance of the law, and with no respectable support, if they would? Beyond question all this is far within the power and the province of the Christian church.

Is there any question that it is the duty of Christ's church thus to unite to overthrow its most conspicuous and most successful foe?

Link four. The pulpit is the legitimate, divinely ordained agency to mass the forces of the Christian church and to lead them on to victory in this holy crusade against the liquor traffic. It would be stultifying to affirm that the church could and should undertake any work in which the pulpit might not properly act its part of helper and leader. Its voice must ring out clear and strong and unequivocal, the rallying cry calling the forces of Christ to battle. To deny this function and this duty to the pulpit is to affirm that the pulpit must be dumb in the presence of society's greatest curse, must be helpless in presence of man's greatest need, must be the slave of custom rather than its liberator. If it be said that the pulpit should teach temperance to the individual, but leave unrebuked the tariff, reform the drunkard, but spare the drunkard maker, then you ask the pulpit to belittle its own work, in the eyes of all manly men by openly confessing its puerility and pusilanimity. You ask the pulpit to rescue the sufferers from incendiary fires, but be careful to speak no word against the incendiaries themselves, to bury the slaughtered victims of drink, but be silent concerning the murderous traffic and the respectable power that fosters and legalizes it. If the pulpit were to listen to this council it would invite the wrath of God and the contempt of all true men. It would be shorn of its strength and robbed of its respect.

No, it is the plain and palpable duty of the pulpit to discuss and to conserve every interest of society, to antagonize every wrong, to encourage what is right. And since the saloon is the central source of the crimes and the curses and woes of mankind if the pulpit cannot or will not antagonize this evil it may as well abandon its calling and cease its high pretensions.

But so long as the pulpit is called of God to be the mouthpiece of heaven to men, so long must it fearlessly declare God's truth whether men will bear or forbear. The fourth link in this divinely welded chain of duty reveals no weakness and fasten itself around the Christian pulpit of today with a grip of infinite power, binding it to the duty of massing the forces of the church against the death-dealing liquor traffic.

Every one suffers from Catarrh in the Head. Those who don't have it suffer from those who do. It's a disease you can't keep to yourself.

Here are some of the symptoms: Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid, and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. But only a few of these likely to be present at once.

The cure for it—for Catarrh itself, and all the troubles that come from it—a perfect and permanent cure, is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The worst cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. A record of 25 years has proved that to its proprietors—and they're willing to prove it to you.

They do it in this way: If they can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case, or of how long standing, they'll pay you $500 in cash. Can you have better proof of the healing power of a medicine?

Remembered by Old Colony.

Mayor Fairbanks received last Friday a pleasing letter from President Choate of the Old Colony Railroad, enclosing checks payable to the City Hospital and to Quincy Fire Department. In forwarding the checks to these departments the Mayor writes as follows:

CITY OF QUINCY, MAYOR'S OFFICE.
QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 4, 1891.

To the Trustees of the City Hospital,

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed I hand you a check received today, and I take pleasure in quoting extracts from the kind letter of C. F. Choate, president of the Old Colony Railroad:

"About the time of the accident at Quincy last year, I was asked to subscribe in behalf of this company for a free bed in the new hospital. While we were using nearly the whole of it such a subscription seemed out of place. I now enclose you a check for $300 for the current year. While I cannot answer for the future, I presume it will be continued. . . . I wish again to express my appreciation of the activity and helpfulness of the people of Quincy at the time of this terrible accident."

Respectfully,
H. O. FAIRBANKS,
Mayor.

QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 4, 1891.

Walter H. Ripley, Chief Engineer Fire Department,

DEAR SIR: I take pleasure in handing you the enclosed check, received today from the president of the Old Colony Railroad. This amount I would suggest be placed to the credit of the Relief Association, and I hope in the future to see additional contributions to this fund by the citizens of Quincy.

The Old Colony Railroad, through its president, expresses their appreciation of the most efficient aid rendered by the firemen at the time of that terrible accident.

Respectfully,
H. O. FAIRBANKS,
Mayor.

WHY IS THE
W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN
THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Gathered In.

When the corn is gathered in,
And the summer days are o'er,
And the throngs return again
From the mountains and the shore,
Then the light of gentle eyes
Comes where silent homes have been,
'Neath the cool September skies,
When the corn is gathered in.

There's a beauty on the land,
And a splendor on the sea,
As we wander hand in hand—
For my love comes back to me.
There's a silence on the beach
Where her footsteps late have been,
As we whisper, each to each,
When the corn is gathered in.

At the falling of the leaves,
When November days draw nigh,
And the dreary north wind grieves
With a more than human cry,
I shall clasp her to my heart—
I have wooed, and I shall win—
We shall dwell no more apart,
When the corn is gathered in.

Miscellany.

THE BIG QUICKSAND.

"Papa, I don't like the way those men huddle together forward. They are up to some mischief, you can depend upon it."

"Nonsense, Ella; nonsense!" cried bluff old Captain Myers; and he pushed back the broad brimmed straw hat which protected his head from the fierce tropical sun. "The crew is all right, and by sundown, if this breeze holds, we'll be at the mouth of the Colorado."

"Perhaps you know best, papa," said the captain's pretty daughter; "but I believe they are plotting mutiny or some other dreadful thing, and Mr. Edwards"——

"Humph!" growlingly interrupted the captain, and he scowled darkly. "It's from Frank Edwards then that you get these false ideas about my crew."

"Nothing of the kind, papa!" protested Ella, although she blushed rosily. "It was I who first noticed the queer actions of the men, and called his attention to the matter. He said he would suggest to you"——

"Well, I don't want his suggestions!" bellowed the captain. "I'm commander of the Peerless, and have sailed these waters long enough to know my business. These things are all in your imagination, and I don't thank Frank Edwards for encouraging you in libeling my most excellent crew even by thought."

Having thus delivered himself the captain turned on his heel and entered the cabin, while Ella, with another direful look toward the sullen faced crew, heaved a deep sigh and sank into a chair which the first mate of the Peerless, handsome Frank Edwards, had placed for her on the poopdeck beneath an improvised awning that had been stretched to shelter her from the rays of the burning sun.

Her face brightened presently, when a quiet step sounded on the deck, and the mate stood beside her.

"What did he say?" he asked in an eager whisper.

"Pooh-poohed the whole thing as a silly girl's foolish fancy, and stalked into the cabin, red with anger, when I mentioned your name."

"I feared as much," said the young man sadly. "He is blind to the daily machinations of those copper faced rascals, and it is no use giving him advice.

"They were plotting mischief before we were out of sight of Guaymas.

"That scar faced scoundrel, Manuel Rosario, has learned that we have a cargo of arms, ammunition and general stores for the troops at Fort Yuma, and this knowledge has excited his cupidity.

"When we stopped for water at San Francisco island he met an agent of the insurgents, and was promised a liberal sum if he would capture the vessel and turn it and the cargo over to them.

"He does not know that I overheard him plotting.

"If he did he would be cowardly and desperate enough to knock me on the head with a belaying pin some dark night."

"Oh, Frank!" cried Ella, and her beautiful face paled with apprehension. "Do be careful and watchful—for my sake!"

"I will?" was his response, "and as your father will not take the precaution to checkmate any move these ruffians may make I will perfect my plans so that we can escape from the bark in case Rosario and his men mutiny and seize her."

"And papa?" faltered Ella.

"I'll force him to go with us. Now don't worry, dear heart, for I feel able to cope with these rascals when the time for action comes."

They were in the upper Gulf of California, where it narrows to meet the waters of Colorado river.

The bark Peerless, of which Ella's father was captain and owner, was loaded with arms and ammunition and other supplies for the United States troops at Fort Yuma.

All but two of the original crew shipped in New York had died of the yellow fever, which broke out with terrible virulence shortly after they passed Cape St. Lucas and entered the gulf.

The captain had managed to get his vessel into Guaymas, and there the two remaining members of his crew had deserted.

In consequence he was obliged to ship a native crew and employ Manuel Rosario, an ex-pearl diver who, unknown to him, was implicated in a revolution then in progress on the peninsula, to enlist the requisite number of men.

Rosario had got together a band of as bloodthirsty ruffians as it was possible to find, and had no difficulty inducing them to lend a willing acquiescence to all his nefarious schemes.

He boldly planned to make Captain Myers, the captain's daughter, Ella, and the mate, Frank Edwards, prisoners, seize the vessel and run it into a secluded harbor between the head of San Francisco island and the mouth of the Colorado river.

Here he would be joined by a party of the insurgents, who would loot the vessel, after which it would be broken up.

The tides on the Gulf of California are gigantic, the rise and fall of the water averaging seventy-five feet.

Rosario knew that they would enter the mouth of the Colorado river that night, and as the tide was particularly swift at that point the bark would be securely anchored during the ebb and flow of the tremendous current.

This he resolved should be the time and place of attack, and his faithful henchmen only awaited his signal to make the captain, the mate, and the beautiful young girl prisoners.

In tow of the bark was a small dinghy.

Drawing this up to the rudder post Mate Edwards opened one of the cabin windows and dropped into it such articles as would be of use to them in their flight, as well as provisions for three or four days.

He then informed Ella of these preparations, and she held herself in readiness to flee at a moment's notice.

At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Peerless entered the river, and as the tide was low and would shortly turn Captain Myers secured his vessel with a bow and stern anchor and awaited the coming rush of water, preceded by its ordinary high advance wave.

It could be discerned in the distance.

The captain and his daughter were leaning over the stern rail watching its approach when Manuel Rosario gave the signal for revolt.

He and two of his men stole softly toward the unsuspecting captain.

He dashed up the companion stairs.

Captain Myers, in another moment, was struggling in the grasp of Rosario's companions.

Before the latter could draw weapons the mate shot one and badly wounded the other.

Rosario released Ella, whom he had seized, and shouted for assistance.

Reversing his heavy six shooter, Mate Edwards brought the butt down upon Rosario's head with a force that sent him moaning and half senseless to the deck.

"Quick!" he cried, seizing Ella's arm. "Over the stern rail. There is a ladder. Drop into the boat. I will keep these other ruffians at bay."

He began firing into the horde of advancing mutineers.

By the time his revolver was emptied, Captain Myers and Ella had reached the boat.

During the afternoon he had cleaned the captain's double barreled shotgun, heavily charged it with slugs and concealed it on deck under a tarpaulin.

With a yell of defiance he caught it up and discharged both barrels in the very faces of the mutineers.

They recoiled before this terrible fire, and, taking advantage of their discomfiture, Frank slipped over the rail and cut the boat adrift.

Before he could seize the oars the first big wave of the tide was upon them and they were hurried on past the vessel and far up the river with frightful velocity.

Then came the recoil and they drifted back towards the Peerless.

Frank pulled toward a little island on the right hand side of the channel and succeeded in making a landing.

He made fast the boat painter to a heavy rock, and the three, retreating, were above high water mark when the second wave swept up the stream.

Rosario, maddened at the blow he had received, staggered to his feet as the dinghy swept by the vessel and ordered out the long boat.

Into it he leaped with his followers to pursue.

The second wave swept them toward the fugitives, and when the recoil came they were within 200 yards of the island.

"After them!" shouted Rosario, leaping upon the beach as soon as the boat grounded.

Suddenly they began to flounder and sink in the sand.

"A quicksand!" they cried, and made desperate efforts to reach firm grounds.

In vain!

The more they struggled the deeper they sank, and when the next wave swept up the river they were ingulfed in ten feet of water.

Not a soul escaped, and when, after waiting patiently on the island until the big tide was full, Mate Edwards rowed the captain and his daughter back to the Peerless, there was a look of greatful pride on the old skipper's face as he regarded his brave young mate.

Four of the mutineers had been shot dead and three others were desperately wounded. The bodies of the dead were thrown overboard and the wounded were imprisoned in the forecastle.

When Fort Yuma was reached and the vessel had been unloaded there was a grand wedding on the deck of the Peerless, and when she started on her homeward voyage a happier couple could not be found than Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards.

For the Quincy Patriot.

The Coddington School Lands.

THE MOUNT WOLLASTON CEMETERY AND ALMS-HOUSE FARM.

In November, 1885, Mr. Samuel A. Bates, for many years now the town-clerk of Braintree, printed in the Randolph Register an article relating to the circumstances under which the Coddington School lands, as they are called, came into the possession of the original town of Braintree. The question has a certain degree of interest, as the Mt. Wollaston cemetery is now on one portion of these lands, as the Quincy Alms-house is upon another portion of them.

Mr. Bates is unquestionably better informed than any one else now living on all antiquarian and traditional matters relating to the original town of Braintree; and it is cause for serious regret that his address on the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of the town has not been published in form for preservation. It should yet be done; and, when it is done, opportunity should be afforded Mr. Bates to incorporate in an appendix to the address much of that curious and valuable local information he possesses, which otherwise bids fair to die with him. Quincy has done its share in this line, and it is now the turn of Braintree to make a valuable addition to its printed record in the local celebrations of 1858, 1861 and 1876. The 250th anniversary ought to be marked by a mile-stone.

Until Mr. Bates printed his article on the subject, which was reprinted in the PATRIOT of December 5th, 1885, it had always been assumed that the, so-called, "school lands" were a gift from William Coddington to the town of Braintree,—its earliest educational endowment. The tradition was old and unbroken. It first appears in a foot-note on page 22 of the Rev. John Hancock's century sermons, preached by him in the North Precinct meeting house on the 16th of September, 1739. Mr. Hancock there refers to Coddington as "the munificent donor of our school lands, which now rent at 142 l., from which this town has reaped great benefit in good schools for many years past." A century later Dr. Lunt in his two discourses on the 200th anniversary of the first church referred to Coddington (p. 22), and, in an appendix (F. pp. 73-5) to the printed copy of his discourses quoted Mr. Hancock's language as above, adding that, for the reason stated, Coddington was "one who deserves to be remembered by the inhabitants of this place." In like manner in 1858, Charles Francis Adams said (p. 25) in an address delivered at the inauguration of the present Braintree Town-hall,—"Coddington's name is therefore entitled to be inscribed on the hearts of the people as that of their earliest benefactor." In a brief memoir of Edmund Quincy (N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg., April, 1884) the late Miss E. S. Quincy, referring to Coddington says, "He sold his Mt. Wollaston estate to Edward [William?] Tyng, and gave the rest of his lands to the town of Braintree." Finally, Dr. Pattee in his history of the town (pp. 315-17) uses the following language:—

"On the worn and tattered first page of the old Braintree town records, we find the copy of a conveyance, which gave to Braintree, (now Quincy,) a large tract of territory, the income of which has ever since been held for the benefit of the public schools. Who was this earliest benefactor? It was Mr. William Coddington, a man who deserves to be remembered by the present and future inhabitants of the town. Mr. Coddington was a man of high respectability and of good intellect; but because he dared to advocate a religious doctrine which today would be considered but a common belief, he was forced to leave the colony. Mr. Coddington, soon after he removed to Rhode Island, through his agent, Mr. Richard Wright, gave his large landed estate, comprising what is now the town farm, the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, and meadow land at Rock Island, to the town of Braintree for the purpose of establishing and supporting the public schools in order that future generations might reap the benefit of a liberal education, and thus see the folly of ex-communicating from society individuals for their honest religious opinions. The income of this munificent bequest has been used to advance the interest of education in this town from that time to this."

A tradition a century and a half old, relating to an important town transaction which occurred only two hundred and fifty years ago, is certainly entitled to respect; especially when it originates with so excellent an authority on a matter of this sort as the Rev. John Hancock. An oral tradition, also, has during recent years lingered about the town, for which the late William S. Morton was, I believe, largely responsible, that among the ancient papers in the Suffolk registry was one containing a reference to Coddington's deed of gift,—in which document the donor expressed in language of much strength a hope that his gift might produce on the descendants of those then inhabiting what is now Quincy some such effects as that indicated in Dr. Pattee's text. But this phase of the tradition could probably be traced to a careless, unconsidered statement in one of the notes to Whitney's History of Quincy (p. 20), to the effect that "a descendent of this Coddington afterwards gave certain portions of land lying towards Mt. Wollaston to the town of Braintree for the support of schools, as he said, 'that the next generation might not be as ignorant as the present is.'"

In his article in the Randolph Register Mr. Bates questioned the accuracy of the whole tradition, both written and oral, giving his reasons for so doing, and asserting finally that "the only ground on which the name of the Coddington fund can be applied to it is that the land was given by the town of Boston to William Coddington, who was afterwards driven from the colony for his adherence to and sympathy with Antinomian sentiments, that the courts adjudged that Richard Wright, the lawful attorney of William Coddington should convey to the town of Braintree said land, and that the said town should pay for the same the sum of £98."

Mr. Don Gleason Hill of Dedham, an experienced conveyancer as well as an accomplished antiquarian, has recently at my request made a careful examination of all the publications and papers on record bearing on this question. As the result of so doing he confirms Mr. Bates' conclusions in every respect, finding no basis whatever for Mr. Hancock's statement or Dr. Pattee's more recent surmises. The whole transaction is now enveloped in obscurity; but, as nearly as can be ascertained from the records and the few additional data which have come to light, the facts in relation to the Coddington school lands were somewhat as follows: The original undivided grant from the town of Boston to William Coddington and Edmund Quincy was made on the 14th of December, 1635, and covered many hundred acres, including the peninsular of Germantown, the present almshouse grounds and the Mt. Wollaston cemetery, the Mt. Wollaston farm, the Merry Mount park and the Sailors' Home property, and also the former Quincy farm, down to what was formerly known as "the farms," (Adams Braintree Address, 1858, p. 57). Mr. Coddington is said to have built a house within the limits of what is now the Merry Mount park, but the grant remained undivided until 1636. Edmund Quincy died some time in 1635 and the next year a division was made, the eastern portion of the grant, including the present Mt. Wollaston farm and what subsequently became known as the "school lands" or town farm, falling to the share of Coddington.

The so-called Antinomian controversy raged in 1636 and culminated at the close of 1637, when the adherents of Mrs. Hutchinson were in November ordered by name to bring in their arms and deliver them up to Capt. Robert Keayne. Siding as he did with the Antinomian party, Coddington, though not actually exiled, left Boston in April, 1638, going to Rhode Island, where he afterwards lived until his death in 1678. At the time of his removal he was a man of thirty-seven years of age, and writing to Gov. Winthrop two years afterwards he said: "What myselfe and wife and familye did induer in that removeall, I wish nether you nor yours may ever bee put unto." IV Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. vi 314). There is, nevertheless, no ground whatever for Dr. Pattee's assertion that Coddington was forced to leave the colony "because he dared to advocate a religious doctrine, which today would be considered a common belief." As to the theological issues involved in the Antinomian controversy, so far from being on one side or the other "considered a common belief" now, it is safe to say that not a human being alive so receives them; they are antiquated, abandoned and forgotten. So far as the other issues are concerned, Coddington said all there is now to say when in 1640 he wrote to Winthrop referring to them: "I well approve of a speech of one of note amongst you, that we were in a heat and chafed, and were all of us to blame; in our strife, we had forgotten we were brethren." (Ib. 317).

None the less, Coddington in his anger went into exile, whether in his case voluntary or not, "upon 14 dayes tyme" (Ib. 314) leaving his affairs in the Massachusets colony in a very unsettled condition. So far as his farm was concerned, the next year (1639) dating from Newport, on April 9, he sold, together with his house in Boston, to William Tynge, a merchant, five hundred and twenty acres of land at Mt. Wollaston, reserving a right of shelter for thirty head of cattle for the coming winter. (Lechford, Note Book, 62, 66). The land thus conveyed at Mt. Wollaston was apparently not at once delivered, but subsequently, on the 15th and 16th of October following, another conveyance was made of a portion of it through William Cheeseborough, assignee of Coddington, to Richard Wright and by him to Tynge, (Suffolk Deeds, i. 26). A large tract of land still remained unconveyed, a portion of which subsequently became the Braintree School lands; while the portion sold to Tynge, known as the Mt. Wollaston farm, was at his death (1661) left by him to his daughter, Mrs. Shepard, and is still in the hands of her descendants. (Hist. of Norfolk County, 308—9).

Recurring now to the other still unconveyed portion of the Coddington grant, it would seem to have been the original intention of Coddington to include this also in the sale to Tynge, but, apparently, the so doing was prevented by legal proceedings then pending based on a claim to a deed of the land on the part of those living in the neighborhood, in pursuance of some agreement or "promise" concerning it alleged to have been made by Coddington. The negotiation for the sale to Tynge was in 1639; the town of Braintree was incorporated on the 16th of May, 1640; and on the 25th of August, 1640, three months afterwards, Coddington writes to Winthrop from Newport, as follows:—"I was advised by letter first out of the Bay that the Governor, and the Deputy and other of the magistrates had advised and encouraged the town of Brantree to commence a suit against me. After I received a note from the Governor, that it was for a promise. I know nothing of it, in regard whereof I desire that the Plaintiffs may put in their complaint in answer, and that I may have time given to put in my defence." (IV. Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. vi, 317).

No trace of the suit here referred to can be found in the court or other archives; but, on the first page of the Braintree records, the school lands are spoken of as "recoverd" of Coddington, and the copy of a conveyance from Coddington's attorney, Richard Wright, bears date July 10, 1640. The land conveyed was, apparently, one hundred and fifty-three acres, lying in three parcels, one of seventy-five, another of forty, and a third of twenty-eight acres, and the consideration paid was £98 besides some "shillings and eight pence"; the mutilated first page of the book of records adds "being * * * ground allowed by the Court to * * * of Braintree out of the goods of * * * Coddinton" * * *.

The legitimate inference from the above data is that Coddington agreed in 1639 to sell his farm at Mt. Wollaston to Tynge; but, owing to some legal proceedings based on an alleged promise of his, was unable to convey title to the whole. He did convey title to a portion of it on the 16th of October, 1639, and the litigation in regard to the balance came to a close in June, 1640; so that at the very time in August, 1640, that Coddington was writing from Newport to Winthrop professing ignorance of the grounds on which suit had been brought against him, his agent in Massachusetts, Richard Wright, had already, on June 5th, sold the land to the town of Braintree, on some terms and at a price "allowed by the Courte." The suit, whatever it was, seems, therefore, to have been decided against Coddington before he had time to file any answer to the town's demand.

Through the action of the Court, as appears from the fragments of the conveyance still to be deciphered on the first page of the town records, Braintree "recoverd of Mr. Coddington" a portion of the land then in Richard Wright's legal possession, the Court at the same time protecting Wright by ordering payment to be made to him of a specified sum, presumably the consideration on which the alleged "promise" of Coddington was made. The land thus acquired was then devoted to the support of the town's school. Another portion of the grant seems under this action of the court to have been released from litigation, and this portion was subsequently (November 10, 1641) conveyed, in accordance with the Newport deed of April 9, 1639, by Wright to Cheeseborough and by him to Tynge. (Suffolk Deeds, i, 26). The whole amount finally getting to Tynge being some 400 acres while 153 were conveyed to the town.

Now as to the adequacy of the consideration paid by the town to Wright: Coddington's sale to Tynge covered his brick dwelling-house in Boston, standing on what is now Washington street, opposite Dock Square (Mem. Hist. of Boston ii. xxi) together with his garden, orchard, &c, with sundry lands, and five hundred acres at Mt. Wollaston all for the price of £1300 sterling. The town paid Wright for about one-third of the Mt. Wollaston property. The day after the sale to Tynge of 9th April, 1639, Tynge gave Coddington a mortgage on the Mt. Wollaston land and buildings to secure payment of £800. (Lechford, Note-book, 64) and the estate there was probably valued at not less than that sum. The town-lands subsequently "recoverd" were in acreage nearly one third of the whole, but did not include house or out-buildings. Estimating this portion in value at one quarter of the whole, it represented in the sale to Tynge, £200. The amount paid for it under the order of the Court was less than £100. Coddington's alleged "promise" may have been to sell it to the town for this sum, being about half its known value.

Subsequently, but not until 1667, the original deed of Coddington to Tynge, of April 9, 1639, was placed on record in Boston by Thomas Brattle, Tynge's son-in-law. (Suffolk Deeds, v, 173.) It also appears that, while Wright's deed to the town bore date June 10th, 1640, he did not make formal delivery and seizin until May, 1641. (Braintree Records, 1—2) From which facts it would appear that Tynge, having knowledge of the suit brought by the town did not rely for his title on Coddington's deed of April, 1639, and that Wright, though he gave a deed of the land at Mt. Wollaston to the town in June, 1640, in accordance with the order of the Court, deferred making any formal delivery of the property until the following May. During the intervening eleven months it is fair to presume he consulted with his principal, Coddington, and may have secured his assent to the final arrangement and transfers both to Tynge and the town.

Thus it would seem that the Coddington school lands were not a voluntary gift from William Coddington to the infant town of Braintree; but that, he, having contracted to sell them to another party, was, to his extreme discontent, prevented from so doing by legal proceedings the character of which cannot now be ascertained. The land then was conveyed to the town by Coddington's agent, holding a legal title to them, and he received in payment therefor a sum of money, fixed by an order of the Court, and representing about half of their market value.

But it still remains to account for the tradition of a free gift; nor is this an easy thing to do. That tradition cannot be summarily dismissed as wholly without foundation, for almost invariably there is some basis for every general and long accepted popular belief as to occurrences in the past; and, moreover, in this particular case, the belief is traced to the Rev. John Hancock, who, in giving form to it, not only stated what was current a century and a half ago, but, while so doing, had before him the first volume of Braintree records, which had been filled and laid aside only eight years before, and since Hancock's settlement in the town. It is not probable that the earlier pages of that volume had then become tattered with use, and in them the whole of Wright's deed of the Coddington lands could have been, and probably had been, read by the minister. Certainly the facts set forth in those pages must have been known to many persons then living; and yet Mr. Hancock referred to Coddington as the "munificent donor" of the lands in a matter of course way and as if it were a thing of common acceptance. He was speaking also of a comparatively recent transaction, for it had occurred only eighty-seven years before he came to dwell in the town.

Any explanation of these contradictory circumstances must be based on pure surmise. My own surmise is that the claim of the town to a deed of a portion of Coddington's grant, was, as he says, in his letter to Gov. Winthrop, based on an alleged "promise" on Coddington's part. The Court, acting with great promptness and without waiting for Coddington to file an answer from his place of exile, approved the claim of the town and awarded the land to it. This much we now know, for Wright gave a deed of the land to the town as "allowed by the Courte," on the 10th of June, 1640, and not until the 25th of August did Coddington write to Winthrop asking time in the matter. Thus the land was conveyed to the town in accordance with Coddington's alleged "promise." This much the town knew and remembered; it never knew that Coddington wholly denied ever having made any such promise, and fully intended to defend against the town's suit. This fact only came to light in 1863, when Coddington's letter to Winthrop was published by the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Thus the earlier generations of the town's people, including the Rev. John Hancock, always supposed that the Court had compelled Richard Wright to make good William Coddington's "promise" as respects those lands, and that Coddington was the "donor" of them, while the consideration paid (£98) must have been regarded as partial only. In lapse of years the idea of a free gift obtained general traditionary acceptance. None the less the letter to Winthrop of August 25, 1640, written three whole months after Wright's conveyance was executed, makes it clear that there was no free gift on Coddington's part, but that the land was obtained by the town either through a compulsory legal process or through the act of an agent confessing a judgment not then authorized, though, possibly, afterwards approved by his principal.

One of the singular and more unaccountable features of the whole transaction is the fact that no trace exists in the records of this suit of the town, or action of "the Courte." In 1640-1 there were in Massachusetts no distinct judicial tribunals in the present sense of the term. The "Courte" referred to in the deed from Wright to the representatives of Braintree may have been the General Court, or Legislature, or the Court of Assistants, composed of the Magistrates chosen by vote at each annual election, or, possibly, the County Court, which, created in 1639, was also composed of certain of the same Magistrates. The case against Coddington must have been heard and decided before one of these three tribunals; but, although after 1639 a careful record of the evidence given in every case tried in these courts, as well as of the judgments rendered by them, was by law required "to be kept to posterity," diligent search has failed as yet to discover any trace of such a record relating to the Braintree school lands. This fact opens the way to a very unpleasant inference.

It will be noticed that in his letter to Winthrop of 25th August, 1640, Coddington says that he had been advised that "the Governor and the Deputy and other of the magistrates had advised and encouraged" the suit brought against him by Braintree. Dudley was then Governor, and he was a bitter and even vindictive enemy of Coddington and all the Antinomian exiles. A narrow minded, harsh man he was by no means scrupulous as to the methods he pursued in crushing out heresies. He, also, together with "the deputy and other of the magistrates," all enemies of Coddington, composed the "Courte" which was to decide, and did decide, the suit, the bringing of which they "had advised and encouraged." In those days furthermore it was "the custom for suitors to apply privately to the Magistrates who were to try their causes, and by an exparte statement, forestall the favorable opinion of their Judges." (Washburn, Judicial History, 51); a custom some years later prohibited by law. While in the absence of any record or direct evidence, it would therefore be improper to assert that Coddington was judicially despoiled of a portion of his estate at Mt. Wollaston for the benefit of the town of Braintree, all the indications point that way. Some corroboration for such an inference is also afforded by the fact that, while the deed to the town was executed by Coddington's attorney, Wright, on the 10th of June, 1640, Wright did not make delivery of the land until the following May, and his action was then apparently part of another transaction through which a valuable monopoly in milling was granted him by the town. (Braintree Records, 1.)

Thus, though a highly respectable character and a very harshly used man, Coddington's name cannot, so far as appears properly be "inscribed on the hearts of the people as that of their earliest benefactor;" nor, as a "munificent donor," can he longer head the list of those who, first and last, have given freely to the support of public education in Braintree and its off-spring towns. So far as any record yet discovered discloses the facts, he seems to have done what he did under compulsion; if, indeed, he was not judicially despoiled, without having been allowed time in which to defend himself. Doubles at Wollaston.

The matches in doubles postponed from Labor day have been played this week upon A. W. Sprague's dirt court. The playing was very good indeed, considering the fact that but two or three of the teams had ever played together before. The preliminary match between Swift-Badger and Price-Emery, won by the latter, was very close and won chiefly by Swift's unfortunate drives into the net. In the first round the Godfrey-Leavitt and Sanborn-Sprague match attracted the most attention. The former team have played together for some time and make a great fight. They lost through their inability to handle Sanborn's low drives and through Sprague's clever play at the net. The result of the Osborn-McClintock and Price-Emery match was never in doubt, although McClintock's serve bothered the winners more than a little. Osborn played finely at the net.

The first set of the finals was long drawn out, neither team being able to steady down to good work. It was finally won by Price and Emery on a cross court drive by Emery, 9—7. The second set was very close play but was won by Price and Emery by superior net work and placed balls; score 6—3. Following are the scores:

PRELIMINARY.

Price and Emery beat Swift and Badger, 6—5, 6—5.

FIRST ROUND.

Sprague and Sanborn beat Godfrey and Leavitt, 6—4, 6—5.

Price and Emery beat Osborn and McClintock, 6—3, 6—5.

FINALS.

Price and Emery beat Sprague and Sanborn, 9—7, 6—3.

This entitles the winners to the silver medals, the first prize for the doubles.

Deputy Langley in the Lockup.

Deputy Langley was the victim of an amusing joke this morning. He found an unlicensed dog in the street, and calling the animal into the lock-up attempted to put him into a cell. While trying to do so he got inside himself, when the door was accidentally closed and before Mr. Langley had time to think he found himself a prisoner with his dogship.

He tried to unlock the door by putting his arm through the bars, but being unsuccessful he took a seat and quietly waited, hoping some of the officers would drop in and let him out.

After waiting nearly an hour he became impatient and began to pound on the ceiling. This brought Commissioner Ewell down, who, upon learning the joke, called the occupants from City Hall, and after all had assembled in the waiting room, each offered a word of consolation and offered him some good advice, urged him for the sake of the community to try and do better in the future. One of the party here volunteered to go bail and Mr. Langley was released.

A Street Plant.

The permanent plant suggested by Commissioner Ewell should receive favorable consideration from the City Council. We were among those who thought the present plant could be made satisfactory by running it through the year and accumulating material, but this would require considerable handling and consequently expense; the loading into carts and carting to a dump and then a reloading when required. With an improved plant there would be an elevator which would carry the broken stone to a rotary screen from which it would be distributed into bins, under which carts could be backed and filled without handling.

It seems desirable to get as central a location as possible, which must of course be where the stone can be quarried. If it is found that the present location is most desirable, the proposed electric freight railway may furnish a cheap method of transportation to South and West Quincy.

The Way to Prosper.

The surest way for a nation to become rich and prosperous and improve the condition of its people is to develop all its resources, whatever they may be. Those who approach the tariff question as our revenue-reformers do, entirely ignore the fact that the cost of an article to the individual and to the nation is an entirely different thing. Protection can only be properly understood when viewed from a national stand-point, and hence it is appropriately called the national system. So long as we have land on which to build factories, capital to run them, and idle hands to tend the loom and the anvil, it is a sin not to produce at home. The land, the capital, the labor, cost the nation nothing. They are all here before we produce a ton of steel rails, and they are here when that ton of rails is loaded on the cars. What has the operation cost the nation? Simply the mineral or vegetable substance consumed in the production. We are today importing annually $200,000,000 worth of goods that should be made in this country and would be made here if the tariff were properly revised and under-valuation stopped. If this were done we could employ every idle laborer and add greatly to our annual increment of wealth.—Robert P. Porter.

Horse Trotting.

Mystic Park on Tuesday, Sept. 29, and for the three following days, will be the scene of what promises to be the greatest meeting that the New England Association of Trotting Horse Breeders has ever held. Many special features will be introduced in addition to the numerous stakes and the events will all be most interesting, as the number of best horses entered is greater than at any meeting ever held in this section of the country. A new feature is the auction sale of fine stock which will be held every morning. Among the breeders of thoroughbreds who have entered horses for sale are James O. Gray of Paris Stud Park, John R. Graham of Quincy, B. D. Whitcomb of Boston, and others.

A Rough Crowd.

It is time the Old Colony or some one in authority did something for the respectable patrons of the late train on the Granite branch. Every night the train is crowded by drunken men who make the passage between Boston and West Quincy very uncomfortable by their fighting and profane language. In fact it is as one man states unsafe for a man to ride on the smoking car unless he is in with the gang for he is sure to get into a row. Scarcely a day passes but some of the gang are brought into court and a small fine imposed which is paid by their friends. Give them a heavy fine or imprisonment and it may have some effect.

OMMITTED. The editorial letter, which usually appears on the first page, of our western trip to the National Park, has been crowded out this week, owing to the lengthy and valuable article of Hon. Charles F. Adams on the Coddington fund.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mr. Parker was a member of the class of '90 of Boston college and is held in high esteem by his fellow collegians. Mr. Parker has the best wishes of his many friends during his sojourn in the city of "Brotherly Love."

Accident.

Wednesday afternoon Frank, the four year old son of H. H. Safford, was severely injured by falling from a load of bundle hay on Granite street. Just how he fell is not known but it is supposed he reached up his hand to take hold of an overhanging limb when he lost his balance and fell some twelve feet to the ground striking on his stomach. He was carried to his home and a physician summoned, who pronounced his injuries serious but not necessarily fatal. The little fellow is comfortable and he will doubtless recover.

QUINCY POINT.

Miss Worster of the Washington school is unable to resume her position as teacher on account of sickness. Her place is being filled by Miss Ring.

West Quincy rejoices in a novelty in the shape of a woman barber whose name is Mrs. John Andre. Mr. Andre has opened a shop in the building recently occupied by James O'Dowd, and his wife who learned her trade in the old country assists him.

Monday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Loud were driving on Adams street, near Beale street, when the bit broke causing the horse to run, upsetting the carriage throwing Mr. and Mrs. Loud violently to the ground. Mrs. Loud was cut about the face and bruise somewhat.

Mr. Benjamin R. Fuller of the firm of Fuller, Foley & Co., was presented with a handsome hanging lamp Wednesday, by his employes, the occasion being the occupancy of his new house on Washington street, Milton.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. McGuiness of Liverpool, Eng., has our thanks for a book of views of the Isle of Man, where she had been spending her vacation. Mrs. McGuiness is a daughter of the late Edward Kane who resided on what is now Crescent street, West Quincy, and will probably be remembered by many in that section of the city, where she resided in her younger days.

A Sudden Death.

Albert M. Clements aged 45 years died suddenly Thursday noon at the Plymouth House on Bates street, West Quincy. He was a man addicted to drink and for the past few days had been drinking quite hard. Thursday morning he went to Neponset and came back about noon and went to dinner at the Plymouth House where he boarded.

He seated himself at the table and in a few moments complained of not feeling well and went up stairs and laid on his bed and expired in a few moments.

Clements was born in Milton and was a stonecutter, at which trade he has worked for a number of years, at one time being foreman of a granite quarry in Lowell.

He had been married but his wife died some time since. He leaves three brothers, two of whom live in Milton and one in North Easton, also a sister who is a missionary in the South.

Cross Street Sidewalk.

All is not serene on Cross street, the trouble being in regard to the edgestone near John Cashman's. It seems that last year Mr. Cashman secured some edgestones to be set in front of his residence. Commissioner Alexander came on and staked out the grade, but owing to a rush of business he was unable to begin work until winter had set in when it was too late.

Mr. Cashman has graded his land and built his fences according to the grade laid out last year supposing that the edgestones would be set according to that grading, but Commissioner Ewell comes on this year and wants to change the grade. This, Mr. Cashman objects to, and the promise by Mr. Ewell to raise the grade next year does not satisfy him as it is not a settled fact that he will be commissioner then, and thus the matter stands today.

It would be a great accommodation to the people and school children who have to pass this way to have a dry sidewalk. They have waited patiently, but the desired improvement does not materalize, or are there any prospects of its doing so.

If the edgestones were set as laid out last year there would be a dry sidewalk.

ATLANTIC.

At Memorial church, Atlantic, Sunday morning the subject of Rev. J. H. Yeoman's sermon will be, "Thirty Pieces of Silver. Evening subject, "The Door."

Horace Sumner is on from the West and has been visiting with his brother Henry.

Mrs. Richardson, of Charlestown, Mrs. Howard, of Lexington, and Mrs. Oldham, of Washington, D. C., are the guests of their sister, Mrs. Brooks Crane, of Prospect street.

Christian Endeavor.

A society of Christian Endeavor was organized Monday evening, at the vestry of Memorial church, Atlantic, with thirteen active members. The following officers were chosen:

President,—Theodore Parker.
Vice President,—Mrs. Ella Carver.
Recording Secretary,—Dr. W. H. Adams.
Corresponding Secretary,—Miss Grace D. Parker.
Treasurer,—Percival A. Hall.

The new society will hold a prayer meeting every Sunday evening in the vestry at 6.45. The public invited.

Exposition.

We would call the attention of our readers to the Food and Health Exposition to be held in Boston next month, at the Mechanics' building. It will be opened on Monday, Oct. 5, under the auspices of the Boston Retail Grocers' Association. A very interesting and attractive exposition it will be,—one that all persons should attend, as there is a large amount of adulterated food in the market.

MALDEN IS one of the most thriving young cities of the State. Think of a city of a population of 24,668 making a gain of nearly 2,500 in a year. Newton, Taunton, Brockton, Haverhill and Chelsea must look out for their laurels.

—A female clerk at Washington has a hot-house and last year sold 100,000 violets. She thinks of resigning and becoming a florist.

WOLLASTON.

Mr. Horace A. Pinham's condition was reported as quite comfortable, yesterday afternoon, but the surgeons state that he is still too weak to have his wounds dressed.

Mr. Frederick E. Litchfield who has for some time been connected with the law firm of Stearns & Butler of Boston, is now with the Hon. Edward Avery.

Mr. Samuel Brown of Wollaston has returned from a two weeks' business trip to Washington, D. C., where he has been attending the annual meeting of the Master Car Painters' Association.

On Sunday evening the Rev. W. S. Key preaches at the First church in Hingham, and in his absence the Rev. James Huxtable of South Boston will occupy the pulpit of the Unitarian church, Wollaston Heights.

The first sociable of the season of the Unitarian society will be held in the vestry of the new church next Thursday evening. An entertaintment in addition to supper will be provided and a crowded attendance is already assured should the weather be propitious.

It is being arranged to hold vesper services in the Unitarian church on alternate Sunday evenings during the coming winter season. Well known ministers from Boston and elsewhere will occupy the pulpit at these services and there will be special music and singing by a quartette and chorus choir which are now holding weekly rehearsals.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Circle, and Missionary societies connected with the M. E. church, an entertainment and supper will be given in the church on Wednesday evening.

The principal feature of the occasion, however, will be the opening of the "mite boxes" which were given out sometime ago; the contents of which will go to swell the Missionary fund.

It is expected quitea good sum will be realized. The boxes will be opened in public, and the sums announced as counted. The admission to the church and entertainment will be free, and everybody is invited. The supper and ice cream will be at the usual prices, and will be served from 6 o'clock.

Special meetings were held in the M. E. church, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week.

Why is the Quincy water like a country boy? Anybody can answer that question, but the odds are in favor of the boy every time.

At the regular meeting of the Wollaston Co-operative Bank $1500 was sold at good rates. Out of the new series of 400 shares just opened, 150 were taken at this meeting.

Mr. H. T. Whitman of Wollaston is at Chatham on a gunning trip.

Miss Ena Key has been spending her summer vacation with the Rev. Dr. Moors, Greenfield, Mass.

Mr. Charles F. Bates and family of Wollaston have returned from Castine, Maine.

The Unitarian church of Wollaston are trying to negotiate for a concert through Mr. Sprague for the near future. Should he be fortunate enough to make satisfactory arrangements, the people of Quincy will have the pleasure of listening to the finest boy singers in the country.

The man who was "green with envy" excused himself on the plea that he had been drinking Quincy water.

The usual services will be held in the M. E. church, Wollaston, next Sunday. Rev. Luther Freeman will preach in the morning at 10.45 o'clock. Sunday school at 12 M. Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock, Mrs. W. R. Campbell leader. This will be a "promise meeting." Service of song at 7 o'clock followed by sermon by the pastor. Subject, "Home Religion." A cordial invitation is extended to the public to be present, especially strangers and those having no church home. All seats free.

Tennis Tournament.

The tournament postponed from Labor day was held Saturday on the Merry Mount courts, Arlington street, and was won by Charles W. Godfrey.

Play commenced upon the two courts at 1 P. M. and was continued until twilight when the finals were finished. Godfrey's victory was well earned, as can be seen by the score, he winning from some of the hardest men. The Godfrey-Badger match was very close and one of the prettiest exhibitions of the day, as Badger is noted for his neat play. Godfrey won chiefly by his lobs and side line play. Price had no trouble with Emery, who was clearly out of form, being very wild and uncertain. Sanborn easily beat Battison, and Godfrey had little trouble with Swift, who played a very steady game. Price beat Sanborn in a closely contested match. Sanborn's drives were very prettily played by Price at the net. The swift, low drives, half Lawfords, are the features of Sanborn's game, and he at times places them with surprising accuracy.

The Godfrey-Price match was commenced at once, as it was late. Price was apparently tired and after the first set did not show his accustomed strength. The first set went to Price by score of 6—2. Godfrey had hard luck with his lobs and lacked accuracy, putting easy drives directly at Price.

The second set was a walkover for Godfrey, 6—0. He seemed to have got over his nervousness and passed Price beautifully at the net, he also improved in his service and scored a number of aces. The last set was similar to the second, Godfrey having everything his own way. Following is the score:

PRELIMINARY ROUND.
Sprague beat Osborne,	6—2, 3—6, 6—5
Price beat Leavitt,	6—3, 3—6, 7—5
Emery beat McClintook,	6—2, 1—6, 6—3
FIRST ROUND.
Godfrey beat Badger,	6—3, 6—5
Swift beat Sprague,	by default
Price beat Emery,	6—2, 6—5
Sanborn beat Battison,	6—3, 6—3
SECOND ROUND.
Godfrey beat Swift,	6—4, 6—1
Price beat Sanborn,	6—2, 2—6, 6—4
FINALS.
Godfrey beat Price,	2—6, 6—0, 6—3

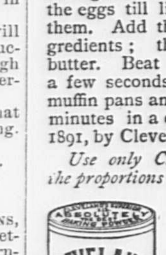
Luncheon Muffins.

BY MARIA PARLOA.

For one dozen muffins use one pint of flour, a generous half pint of milk, two teaspoonfuls of Cleveland's Baking Powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter and two eggs. Mix the dry ingredients together and rub through a sieve. Melt the butter. Beat the eggs till light and add the milk to them. Add this mixture to the dry ingredients; then stir in the melted butter. Beat the batter vigorously for a few seconds and then put in buttered muffin pans and bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.



Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is perfectly wholesome. It leavens most and leavens best.
Try a can.

TO LET.—Plumer's Hall. Finest in Quincy, centrally located, well furnished and lighted. Will be let to respectable parties. Only $2 per evening. Inquire of C. F. CARLSON, opposite Quincy Depot.

Free Entertainments.

There will be a series of ten entertainments for the young people of Wollaston, on dates to be announced in the advertising columns of Saturday's LEDGER and PATRIOT at the Wollaston Congregational church.

As the expense has been entirely assumed by a citizen of the village, there will be no tickets sold, but complimentary tickets will be presented to all of the young people of Wollaston between the ages of 15 and 30 inclusive.

To secure a season ticket, admitting free on all the evenings, it is only necessary for each one to apply in writing, through the post-office, to the Secretary, stating age and address. All such applications must be received before Oct. 6. Tickets will then be mailed to each one between the above ages in the order of application until the seating capacity of the house has been exhausted.

It is needless to state whom the gentleman is who has so kindly favored Wollaston's young people with this excellent course of entertainments. His kind acts are legion.

The committee having the entertainments in charge are as follows: Frederick E. Litchfield, Dr. A. J. Colgan, E. H. Broch, Charles P. Hutchins, Miss May F. Simmons, Walter S. Pinkham, Miss Minnie P. Prescott, Miss Carrie R. Lord, Miss Harriet W. Lincoln, Miss Florence G. Olney, James S. Whiting, secretary.

Republican State Convention.

The Repulicans held their State convention at the Tremont Temple, Boston, on Wednesday last. There was a very large attendance, nearly every delegate being present. On the first ballot Allen received 713 votes and Crapo 514, and Charles H. Allen of Lowell was declared the nominee for Governor. The convention acted very harmoniously and the following gentlemen were nominated for the various State offices:

For Governor—Charles H. Allen of Lowell.

For Lieutenant Governor—William H. Haile of Springfield.

For Secretary of the Commonwealth—William H. Olin of Boston.

For Treasurer and Receiver General—George A. Marden of Lowell.

For Auditor—John W. Kimball of Fitchburg.

For Attorney General—Albert E. Pillsbury of Boston.

With the exception of Allen and Kimball the above were all renominations.

The Boston Journal says: "Mr. Allen is a strong candidate. He is a young man, and his candidacy will specially appeal to the younger element of the party. But he has had an experience in public affairs which will win for him also the confidence of older men. He has a character beyond reproach in his personal and business relation. He has obtained familiarity with State affairs through his service in the Legislature, while his successful career in Congress gave scope for his talents in the broader domain of national politics. He has a winning personality, and as a speaker he is clear, vigorous and effective."

Success of "Ye Earlie Trouble."

One of the surest signs of the great success of Guy Carleton's fascinating picture of colonial days, with its delightful comedy and soul-stirring climaxes, at the Boston Museum, is, that theatre-parties come in nightly from all the outlying towns and give themselves up to its two hours and a half of continuous laughter and excitement. The fact that Wilson, Barron, Boniface, Davenport, Booth, Holt, and Abbe, and Misses Clark, O'Leary, and Campbell all have strong parts, enables the audience of "Ye Earlie Trouble" to see the members of the famous Museum Company at their best. As the curtain rises at 7.45 and falls promptly at 10.30, ample time is given to catch trains for the suburbs, and at matinees the performance closes at 4.30.

—Mrs. Leland Stanford, wife of the Chicago millionaire, has donated $100,000 worth of property to the Society for the Relief of Orphan and Destitute Children at Albany, N. Y. The cash of the wealthy does some good at times, despite the vaporings of socialistic and anarchistic cranks, and this would appear to be one of the instances in point.

—Our August exports of wheat were almost exactly four times as large as those of August, 1890. It is no wonder that the current of gold has begun to set this way.

Golden Wedding Celebration.

One of those joyous occasions, which so few couples have the pleasure of celebrating, occurred at the happy home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Furnald in Nottingham, N. H., on Saturday last. As they were for many years residents of Quincy and known to many of our readers, we take pleasure in giving an extended notice of the festive occasion.

There were relatives or friends present from Boston, Somerville, Melrose, Medford, Quincy and Lynn, Mass.; Manchester, Rochester, Lee and Nottingham, N. H., and the youngest son, Walter, from Colorado, who has been in the far West for the past nine years. From seventy-five to one hundred called to congratulate the couple and the house was full of friends until near midnight. It was a warm and pleasant evening, and on the lawn in front of the attractive home the Nottingham drum corps rendered appropriate selections, while others were congratulating the king and queen of the castle, and indulging in ice cream, cake, coffee, etc.

There were quite a number present during the afternoon, who enjoyed listening to racy stories of by-gone days, which were pleasantly related and embellished by Mr. George J. Jones of Quincy, who was for many years a partner of Mr. Furnald in the express business.

The presents were many and beautiful. Among the number were a nice easy chair, given by members of the Universalist society to their "deacon," gold-bowed spectacles, gold filigree brooch, and some eighty dollars in gold coin.

The beautiful frosted cake that graced the festive board, bearing the dates 1841-1891, was made by the bride of fifty years ago. It was placed in the centre of a large table, which was covered by an ancient home-spun cloth, which was more aged than the couple or their guests. The cake was rich and delicious and was much enjoyed by those present, and slices were also sent to distant relatives.

Of the seven children living, all but two were able to enjoy the festive occasion. One son and one daughter, both married and settled in the far distant state of Colorado, were unable to be present.

It is the wish of their many friends that Mr. and Mrs. Furnald live many years to enjoy the blessings of their industrious and well spent lives.

Furnald Exonorated.

The verdict in the complaint preferred by R. C. Clark against N. B. Furnald which was investigated by Mayor Fairbanks, who gave a hearing, was awaited with interest. Below is the finding of His Honor:

A hearing having been given on the complaint of R. C. Clark against N. B. Furnald, for retaining money due said R. C. Clark. I find upon the evidence as follows:

N. B. Furnald having been informed that money had been stolen, called upon R. C. Clark asking him if he had lost any and being answered in the affimative said to R. C. Clark "I have got part of it and can recover the rest." N. B. Furnald further swears that R. C. Clark agreed to pay him for his services if he recovered the balance. This is positively denied by R. C. Clark but no evidence is introduced by him to show that he objected to N. B. Furnald recovering the money or forbidding him to do so.

James McClellan in his testimony says, "When Clark first came to me he seemed to be quite satisfied that I should pay the money to Furnald," and while the negotiations were going on for the return of the money by James McClellan to N. B. Furnald it does not appear that R. C. Clark ever notified N. B. Furnald not to act in the case, and by going to N. B. Furnald's house and asking for the money he ratified in part the action of N. B. Furnald in recovering the money.

If R. C. Clark did not wish any of N. B. Furnald's aid he should have demanded the money of James McClellan and ignored N. B. Furnald and refused his assistance in every way.

While it would have been the proper procedure for N. B. Furnald on recovering the money to have at once tendered the same to R. C. Clark, having finished his duty, if he considered himself as an agent for R. C. Clark, still there is no rule at present governing the force which requires any officer to do so, though this is the law in other cities.

I therefore find that N. B. Furnald has not violated any of the present rules and the complaint is dismissed.

H. O. FAIRBANKS, Mayor.

Grocers' Association.

Monday about fifty members of the Suburban Press Association accepted of an invitation of the New England Grocers' Association to the "house warming" of their new building on Central Wharf, back of the New Chamber of Commerce building, Boston. After enjoying an hour pleasantly at the festive board, the guests were called to order by Aaron C. Dowse, editor of the New England Grocer, and short and witty speeches were next in order. The association has now very fine quarters for holding their meetings, which must be very pleasing and gratifying to its members. May the success which has attended this association continue, as it is worthy of the object for which it was organized.

Thirty-fifth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Connor celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home on South street, Quincy Point, Thursday evening. A large number of friends both local and out of town were present during the evening to attest their esteem for the worthy couple. Mr. and Mrs. Connor were the recipients of many handsome and valuable presents. During the evening an elaborate collation was served, and when the party broke up they unanimously hoped that all would be able to be present at their golden wedding.

Knights and Ladies of Honor.

C. A. Foster, as grand representative, attended the Supreme Lodge of the Knights and Ladies of Honor at Newark, N. J., last week. Samuel Hathaway was the other Massachusetts representative. Among the new business introduced by the above gentlemen was, to amend the general law so that representatives and alternates must be members of the relief fund, and a resolve that the charter fee be reduced to $50.

Mr. William B. Rice.

The Sunday Herald published brief sketches of some fifty or more of the most successful business men of Boston. Among the number was Mr. William B. Rice of this city, who was spoken of in the following complimentary manner:

A large number of the prosperous business men of Boston are exponents of the idea that there's "nothing in the world like leather." Mr. William B. Rice of Rice & Hutchins has been nearly 25 years a shoe manufacturer. The firm's factory is at the South end. Mr. Rice is acknowledged to be one of the shrewdest men in his line of trade, and that is paying a high tribute to his foresight and enterprise. He has not confined all his attention to the shoe business, however, and his success in outside ventures has been very marked. He is a director in the Continental National Bank. Some years ago he purchased a large amount of land in Winthrop, at a price which many said was high. The result has proved the wisdom of the investment. The Revere Beach & Winthrop railroad brought the property into demand, and more recently the government has become one of his customers, buying land for the fortifications at that point. His real estate purchases at Quincy have also proved to be safe and wise.

Mr. Rice is over 50 years old, of light complexion, of medium size, active and energetic. His decisions on business matters are ready and accurate and positive. He is an all-round business man, and his success as measured by the dollars made, places him above the $500,000 mark.

Mr. Rice resides in Quincy, where he has been prominently indentified with religious and charitable, as well as business and public, enterprises. He celebrated his 50th birthday in March, 1890, by presenting the city with a $15,000 hospital, which has since been handsomely endowed. He is also connected with the first Unitarian church of Quincy.

Monument by Quincy Firm.

The Rensselaer county soldiers' and sailors' monument on Washington Square, Troy, N. Y., was dedicated Tuesday. The corner stone of the monument was laid May 30, 1890.

The monument is over ninety feet high. It is octagonal in shape at the base, 29 feet across the projecting spurs on each corner, which form bases for an arch at each corner of the die course, the whole being surmounted by a column. On the sides are bronze bas-reliefs representing artillery, cavalry, infantry and naval battle scenes. On top of the column is a bronze figure representing "The Call to Arms" thirteen feet high. Fuller & Wheeler, architects, Albany, N. Y., were the designers of the monument and the contract was $50,000.

Frederick & Field of this city have been engaged on the work nearly two years.

Camp Fire.

Francis L. Souther Camp S. of V. are making arrangements for a grand parade and camp fire to be held Wednesday evening, Oct. 7.

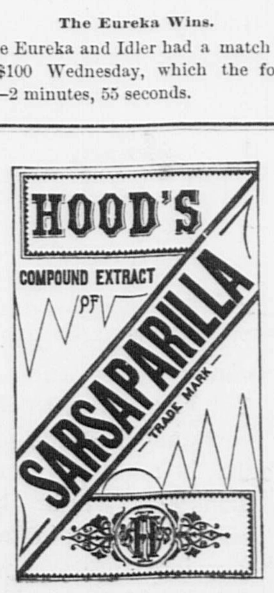
Invitations to be present have been extended to Division Commander, Charles K. Darling of Fitchburg, and staff. Paul Revere Post 88 of Quincy, and Sylvanus Thayer Post 87 of Braintree; also to the several camps in this vicinity, and it is expected that many of them will accept and bring music with them.

The programme as now arranged will commence with a parade. The procession will form on Spear street, right resting on Canal street, and at 7.45 o'clock, headed by the City Band will march over the following route: Canal to Washington, to Hancock, to Bridge, to Adams, to Hancock, to School, to head of Franklin, countermarching to Hancock hall where a collation will be served, and the remainder of the evening will be taken up with music, speaking and a general good time.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

The Eureka Wins.

The Eureka and Idler had a match race for $100 Wednesday, which the former won—2 minutes, 55 seconds.



The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

HOUGHS NECK.

A trip round Houghs Neck finds many of the cottages that a few weeks ago were full of summer residents and their guests deserted. Drawn curtains and closed blinds tell plainly that the summer people have packed their trunks and departed for their winter homes.

There are however many who are still here and will remain through the month, but it is safe to say that by October 1st, when the cars are taken off everybody but the permanent residents will have gone.

The hotels are doing little or nothing now, and the only trade they have are a few who come down on pleasant days, and others who come down to look over their lots and plan for new cottages to be erected early next spring, and it is safe to say that the building next season will be much greater than this, which has been unusually large. Take for instance south of Pierce's, when the season opened there were but two or three cottages, where there are now twelve to fifteen and it is safe to say that next year as many more will be erected. On Bay View avenue several have been erected this season, and now this part of the beach looks quite citified.

But where the greatest increase is expected next year is on Manet avenue, where many lots were sold too late to build upon this season, and work will be commenced early.

Pierce entertained several carriage parties Sunday with one of his famous shore dinners.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mitchell and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Penniman spent Saturday and Sunday at their camp on the beach.

Sunday was a pleasant day and many took a run down for the day.

An effort is to be made next year to get reduced fares on the Manet Street Railway, ten cents for a fifteen minutes' ride is too much.

James Maxim will enlarge his cottage near the Red Lion to twice it's present size.

Several engagements are announced as a result of the past season in spite of the scarcity of young men.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Tilton of this city who are occupying the Pleasant View cottage had as guests Sunday,—Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Tilton, Miss Tilton, Mr. and Mrs. Friend Crane and Mr. and Mrs. George T. Magee. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Magee.

Boston's Labor Parade.

The Herald says, the granite cutters were patriotic, and selected the band which was to keep their feet moving in unison from the city where they make even the babies' rattle of granite. Close behind the Quincy City band marched the Boston branch Granite Cutters' National Union, and by the side of the organization trotted the smallest banner-carrier in the parade—a black dog, over whose back was fastened a blanket inscribed "Major, Sewer Division, 1765." He attracted more attention than any of his two-legged companions of the march.

Conspicuous figures at the head of the clans were Grand Chief D. A. McDonald, Past Grand Chief Robert Allen and Royal Secretary Peter Kerr. In compliment to the grand chief, the Scottish clans were selected by Marshal Grant to lead the procession.

District Court, Quincy.

Arthur Austin of Quincy for assault on James E. McBane was fined $12.

The continued case of Honorah Sheahan of Braintree, for keeping a disorderly house came up for hearing this morning, when the case was continued to October 13.

Alice Holly of South Weymouth was arraigned for assault on Elizabeth Sargent and was continued to Sept. 28.

Mathew Cullen of Quincy for assault on Conductor George M. Hobbs of the Old Colony was fined $15.

A Fine Fish Dinner.

Mayor Fairbanks, ex-Mayor Porter, City Council, City Treasurer Adams, City Auditor Hall, Engineer Ripley, Postmaster Adams, Editors of the PATRIOT and Advertiser, enjoyed a very excellent fish dinner at Quincy bay yesterday afternoon. Chowder was the first course which was followed by hot boiled clams, baked blue fish, boiled green corn, fried clams and potatoes, crackers, cheese, coffee, etc.

Aldermen and councilmen are noted as good feeders, and the large quantity they quickly stowed away did not in the least surprise the doctor. He took pleasure in supplying their wants freely, and did not get excited in the least, except when the jeweller called him by that harsh name, the mugwump.

After a delicious meal the remainder of the time was pleasantly spent in listening to stories, both new and old, until after the moon shone forth in all its splendor. Then a vote of thanks was passed and all bid their genial host goodbye.

A Serious Accident.

Horace A. Pinkham of Wollaston was seriously if not fatally injured in Boston Wednesday, and is now at the Boston City Hospital.

He visited the Consolidated Electric Company's building, at the corner of Congress and A streets, South Boston, where he pulled the rope of the freight elevator. While looking upward to see the elevator descend, his head was caught between the elevator and the guard rail. His upper jaw was fractured and there were other severe bruises about the head, which it is feared may prove fatal.

Mr. Pinkham resides on Grand View avenue, Wollaston, and is in the electric business at No. 38 Bedford street, Boston. He is 65 years of age.

Hibernian Picnic.

Divisions 3 and 4, A. O. H., of Roxbury held their picnic at Lovell's grove Sunday, about 900 people attending. They were accompanied by Hobbs' orchestra of Boston and a genuine Irish piper of South Boston. At 1 o'clock a bountiful spread was served by Caterer Temple of Boston. After dinner the crowd assembled in the dance hall with the intention of regaling themselves in the art of terpischore, but in this they were disappointed by the appearance of Officer Fitzgerald of Weymouth, who positively refused to allow dancing, as it was Sunday. The committee argued and debated with the officer but the guardian of the peace remained firm, and the disgraceful scenes which have been enacted every Sunday that a picnic has been in progress was brought to a close. The fakirs who have been thriving every Sunday were ordered to pack up, and Lovell's grove resumed its usual Sunday calmness.

Officer Fitzgerald when seen by a PATRIOT man said it was outrageous for people to come here on Sunday and dance, and he appeared very much surprised when informed that it had been carried on nearly every Sunday during the summer.

Next Sunday the Thomas Francis Meagher Literary Association of Boston will hold their picnic and on Sunday evening, Sept. 27, the grove will close for the season.

William D. Howells' New Story.

Rumor says that the scene of William D. Howells' new story, not yet published, is laid mainly in Boston. This story will not appear in book form for a considerable time, as Mr. Howells has sold the right of publication in New York to a leading newspaper for a very large sum. It is reported that the author is now negotiating with the leading Boston newspapers to find a purchaser in that city, and the papers are bidding against each other at a rate which will make Mr. Howells' price a very handsome one.

Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the Adams building, Wednesday evening.

Mr. Edward Southworth resigned the presidency of the association and Mr. Edward Hewitson of Wollaston was elected to that office.

Mr. R. S. Elliott was elected a member of the board, vice Jonas Shackley resigned. The following members were appointed delegates to the State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association to be held at Brockton, Oct. 22, 25: Theophilus King, Rev. Luther Freeman, Geo. A. Sidelinger, T. Henry Wason, Rev. Charles Paulson, Edward Hewitson, Geo. H. Brown, Edward Southworth, C. F. Cummings and R. S. Elliott.

Committees were appointed as follows:

To secure a general secretary,—President ex-officio, Edward Southworth, Theophilus King and Rev. Luther Freeman.

On incorporation,—W. G. Corthell and F. E. Litchfield.

On bylaws,—T. H. Wason, Edward Southworth and George A. Sidelinger.

The meeting lasted three hours and then adjourned to next Wednesday evening.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The treasurer of the association, Mr. George A. Sidelinger of Quincy Point, will take charge of the young men's meeting on Sunday at 4 o'clock.

Mr. R. M. Armstrong, State secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was present at the meeting of the Board of Directors and gave valuable information.

The new rooms of the Y. M. C. A. of South Franingham were formally opened Wednesday evening. The furnishings cost $1000.

Y. M. C. A. Committees.

President Hewitson of the Young Men's Christian Association has appointed the following standing committees of the Board of Directors:

Executive,—Edward Hewitson, Theophilus King, Edward Southworth.

"The executive committee shall be composed of the President, with the chairmen of the Rooms and Finance Committees." (Extract from By-laws).

Finance,—Theophilus King, Wendell G. Corthell, Herbert W. Pinkham, Dr. John A. Gordon, George H. Brown.

Rooms,—Edward Southworth, Rev. Luther Freeman, T. Henry Wason, George H. Brown, Thomas B. Pollard.

Membership,—Rev. Preston Gurney, George O. Shirley, R. S. Elliott.

Lectures and Entertainments,—Wendell G. Corthell, Rev. Edward A. Robinson, Edward Southworth, Rev. H. Evan Cotton, E. W. Branch.

A solid silver trowel will be used at the laying of the corner stone of the new Catholic church at Needham Sunday.

Walking Good Enough for Them.

Tuesday evening four young gentlemen and their ladies accepted an invitation to attend a hop at the Yacht Club House, Houghs Neck. The gentleman doing the inviting supposed one was to be held.

The party went down on an early evening car and upon its arrival found the club house dark, all the hotels closed up and that the next car to leave for the centre would be the following morning.

Some one proposed that they should count the poles along the track between the beach and the centre, which meeting the approval of the others they started, arriving at the Stone Church about 9.30.

However, as there seems to be some discrepency in the count owing to darkness, the public will still be kept in ignorance as to the correct number, although Jim swears his count was correct.

Too Good to Keep.

One of our business men went sailing in the harbor the other day. The wife kept the children up for company. It was after nine o'clock and the benedict had not returned, when one little fellow to console his mother, suggested that they go to bed, as the DAILY LEDGER would have the particulars tomorrow. Late in the night the absentee returned and the LEDGER had no drowning accident to report.

—There has been a great flurry in the watch trade in Boston this week by the reduced quotations made by the American and Elgin watch companies. It was owing to a pressure by John C. Dueber, who has been underselling everything on size No. 18, and is thought to be a dangerous competitor.

A Bicycle Run.

About seven o'clock Tuesday night there seemed to be something unusual going on for bicycles were coming from all directions and gathering in the Square by the Unitarian church. Such a large number of wheels, soon gathered quite a sidewalk committee, some wondering what it all meant, others knowing about it beforehand came to see the good time.

It seems that a grand meet of bicyclists was to take place at seven o'clock and go on a moonlight ride. Mr. Fred Jones was bugler, and at the sound of the bugle the bicyclists mounted and away they rolled making a fine appearance, there being thirty-eight riders in all with a generous sprinkling of ladies. The moon did not condescend to shine, but they enjoyed the ride nevertheless going through Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy Point, up Washington street to the Square. Several stops were made to rest the ladies and regale them with soda. All the participants said they had a grand good time.

An open regatta was sailed under the auspices of the Massachusetts Yacht Club on Saturday. There were five classes, and the first boats in each were the Awilda, Echo, Idler, Phenomenon and Mab. The actual time of the boats in the last class was:

Mab, John Shaw	1 17 40
Scamp, H. W. Nute	1 19 22
Cadet, Smith & Longstreet	1 21 38
Mirage, L. M. Clark	1 22 00
Marvel, H. M. Faxon	1 24 06

Both the Dorchester and Savin Hill Yacht Club regattas, announced, were postponed, and many of the boats took part in the Massachusetts club regatta.

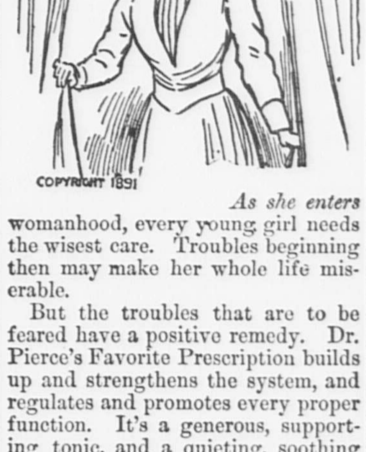
RATIFICATION MEETING. The Republican Editorial Association will hold a grand ratification banquet at the Parker house, Boston, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. All the candidates nominated on Wednesday last, and other notable guests have been invited.

—Forty-seven fashionable young women on bicycles was the feature of the parade at the Hartford tournament last week.



As she enters womanhood, every young girl needs the wisest care. Troubles beginning then may make her whole life miserable.

But the troubles that are to be feared have a positive remedy. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription builds up and strengthens the system, and regulates and promotes every proper function. It's a generous, supporting tonic, and a quieting, soothing nervine—a legitimate medicine, not a beverage, free from alcohol and injurious drugs. It corrects and cures, safely and surely, all those delicate derangements, weaknesses, and diseases peculiar to the sex.

A remedy that does cure is one that can be guaranteed. That's what the proprietors of "Favorite Prescription" think. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, they'll refund the money. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

Decide for yourself whether something else sold by the dealer, is likely to be "just as good" for you to buy.

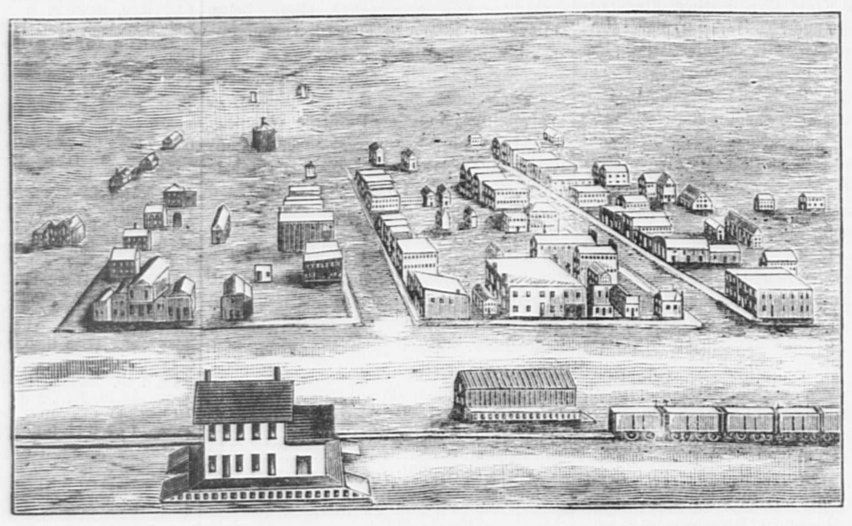
WATERTOWN, SOUTH DAKOTA.

THE MARVELLOUS RESULTS which have been accomplished in the rearing of cities and towns upon the fertile plains of South Dakota, seem, at times, to overreach the imagination of the most visionary mind. Those who are accustomed to the vim, the pluck, the shrewdness, and the far-reaching plans of the Westerner, are sometimes found meditating in wonder at the rapid development on every side of them, while men more accustomed to Eastern environments and ideas, and to less rapid progress, look in awe and amazement at the work of hardly a decade.

Ten years ago, where now stands the city of WATERTOWN, there was nothing to obstruct the vision from a great ocean of rolling prairie in one direction, from the winding and fertile Sioux Valley in another, or from the rivers and lakes on the west; there was not the sign of a tree in sight, save those which skirted the borders of Lake Kampeska, and one could count on the fingers of one hand the white men then here.

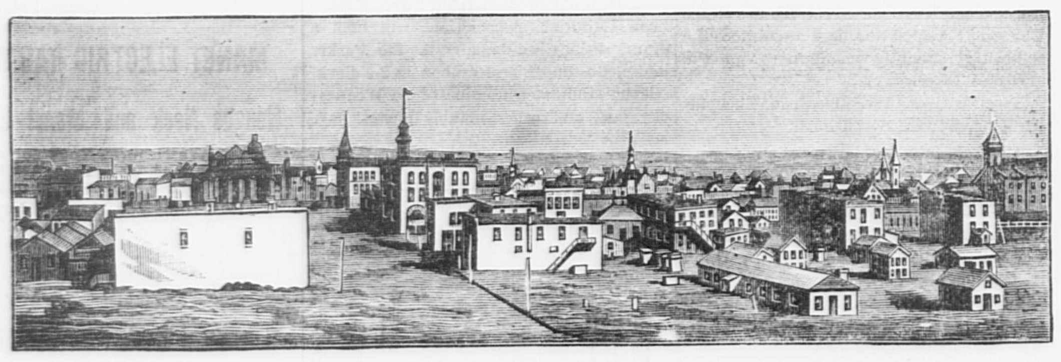
IN 1884,

WATERTOWN consisted of a straggling little town of 50 or 60 buildings of which the following is a bird's eye view.



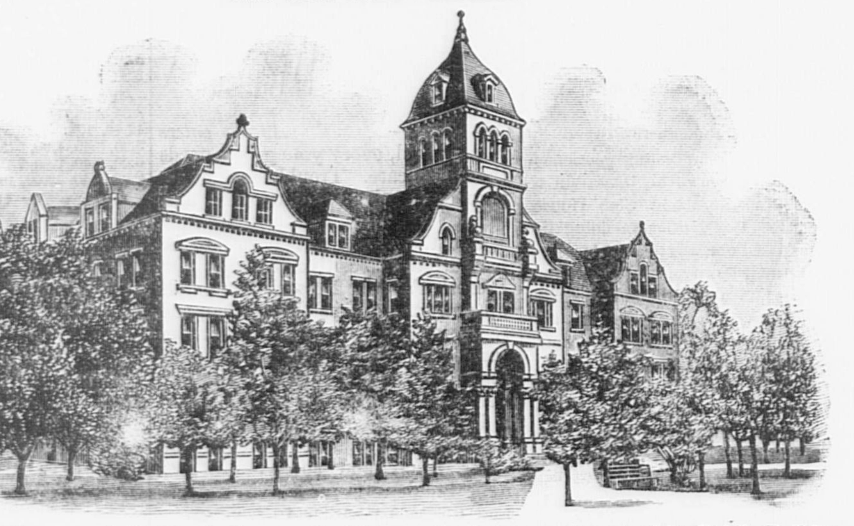
To-day a city of Brick, Stone, and Granite, with 6,000 Souls, eight lines of railway, miles and miles of graded streets and sidewalks, shade trees, numerous manufacturing plants, water works, street-car lines, electric lights, five-story hotels, opera houses, churches, schools, financial exchanges, jobbing and mercantile interests, parks and boulevards, neat, cosey, and comfortable homes; a city whose corporate limits extend over an area of four sq. miles, which is but poorly illustrated below.

WATERTOWN IN 1891.



With unsurpassed R. R. Facilities for business (8 lines now centering there and 2 more already projected) and most delightful residence sites especially cheap and available; adapted to suit the tastes of either rich or poor, it offers inducements to Business Men, Manufacturers, Capitalists and Home Seekers, seldom found. Its Educational advantages are first-class as can be judged from the view below of the

NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.



In a future issue we shall offer further proof of its growth, by views of some of its Public Buildings, and also show the

MARVELLOUS AGRICULTURAL AND MINERAL RESOURCES

of SOUTH DAKOTA, and the value of WATERTOWN as a Market and Distributing Centre for manufactured goods as well as agricultural products. MAPS AND ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLETS giving full statistical details, and describing the lands for sale adapted for Residences, Business, Manufacturing, or Agricultural purposes, sent Free to any Address, apply at the offices of the CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding town for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Adam Never Was a Boy.

T. C. HARBAUGH.

Of all the men the world has seen
Since Time his rounds began,
There's one I pity every day—
Earth's first and foremost man;
And then I think what fun he missed
By failing to enjoy
The wild delights of youth-time, for
He never was a boy.

He never stubbed his naked toe
Against a root or stone,
He never with a pin-hook fished
Along the brook alone.
He never sought the bumblebee
Among the daisies coy,
Nor felt its business end, because
He never was a boy.

He never hookey played, nor tied
The ever-ready pail,
Down in the alley all alone,
To trusting Fido's tail.
And when he home from swimmin' came
His happiness to cloy
No slipper interfered, because
He never was a boy.

He might refer to splendid times
'Mong Eden's bower, yet
He never acted Romeo
To a 6-year Juliet.
He never sent a valentine,
Intended to annoy
A good but maiden aunt, because
He never was a boy.

He never cut a kite string, no!
Nor hid an Easter egg;
He never ruined his pantaloons
A-playing mumble-peg.
He never from the attic stole
A coon hunt to enjoy,
To find "the old man" watching, for
He never was a boy.

I pity him. Why should I not?
I even drop a tear;
He did not know how much he missed;
He never will, I fear.
And when the scenes of "other days"
My growing mind employ,
I think of him, Earth's only man
Who never was a boy.

—Texas Siftings.

Household Receipts.

PEACH SHORTCAKE. One egg, one cupful sugar, one cup milk, 2½ cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, a pinch of salt, one tablespoonful of butter, one cup sweet cream. Sift the flour and stir into it the sugar, salt and baking powder, then the milk. Add to these the egg, without beating it, and the butter melted in a little hot water. Beat all well and bake in the jelly cake tins. Slice the peaches, crush slightly with the back of a spoon, and place between the layers of cake, sprinkling with powdered sugar. For the top cake have ready the cream, whipped firm, and stud this thickly with sliced peaches. If the cream is not obtainable, the whites of three eggs whisked to a stiff meringue with a little sugar will prove an excellent substitute.

BROWN BETTY. Slice raw apples or make a nice sauce and put it in a buttered pudding dish in alternate layers with bread crumbs or cracker crumbs and bits of butter. Have crumbs on top. Moisten with about a cup of water, according to the juiciness of the apple. Bake about half an hour and serve with sugar and cream or with any sauce preferred.

TOMATOES ON THE HALF SHELL. Cut tomatoes in half, flat-wise; put them skin down, on a hot gridiron (or a frying-pan, greased,) season with salt and pepper, and broil three or four minutes. These may be served alone, or on toast with a half cupful of cream poured on the toast. Set in the oven a few minutes before serving.

TOMATO FIGS. Scald and skin small tomatoes. To eight pounds allow three pounds of brown sugar. Cook without water until the sugar has penetrated them and they look clear. Spread on plates in the sun, adding a little of the syrup while they are drying. Pack in layers in small jars or boxes, sprinkling powdered sugar between the layers. They will keep indefinitely and taste much like figs.

BAKED TOMATOES. One of the simplest modes of cooking tomatoes. Remove the cores but not the skins, and place in each tomato a bit of butter and a little pepper and salt; add a tablespoonful of butter to the dripping-pan, and baste them occasionally while cooking. The oven should be quite hot. Sometimes a portion of the juice and seeds is taken out, and the space filled with minced ham or any chopped meat, or breadcrumbs seasoned with salt and pepper, which makes a more elaborate dish.

Anecdotes.

Visitor—Are you going to be a great man when you grow up, Willie?

Willie—You bet! I'm going to be an Arctic explorer.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Do you notice how green and fresh the grass looks and the trees? Nearly everything green is out.

Mrs. Yeast—Yes, I have noticed it, my dear. But where is your husband today? Is he out too?

At ticket office. Old Gent—How much for this boy? (pointing to a lank youth at his side) half fare?

Agent—Well, no. He looks as if he was kept on half fare at home. He needs a change. Full fare, please.

Judy—Do you 'tink you love me, Dinnis?

Dennis—Go way now, darlint, av coorse oi do.

Judy—How do ye know it, Dinnis?

Dennis—Be the way oi appreciate yer prisince whin oi'm away from ye.

Bobby—Oh, mamma, you know the two nickels you gave me when I started down town—one for the poor blind boy at the corner and one to buy a ball with. Well, I lost one of them.

Mamma—Which one did you lose?

Bobby—Oh, the blind boy's nickel, of course.

Park Theatre.

"The County Fair" is meeting with great success, and it is said the Park theatre has never had such a rush. Tickets are on sale a week ahead yet many are turned away. The people this season seem to demand American plays and in "The County Fair" have found just what suits them. The play deals in New England life, is well acted, and holds the attention of the whole audience from rise to fall of curtain. Neil Burgess, the writer of the play, fully understands how to make his plays successful.

Boston Theatre.

Have you seen Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead?" seems to be the important question at the present time. The Boston theatre announces that the play has beaten the record, proving so popular that the best seats are engaged weeks ahead. Wednesday and Saturday matinees are attracting the young people whose bright smiling faces show how thoroughly they enjoy a good play. Take the children and go yourself and you will be the better for it.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The popular comedian, Mr. William H. Crane, is to appear next week at the Hollis, and it is stated postively that this will be his last appearance in Boston in "The Senator." As Mr. Crane goes to New York to fill a long engagement, it is expected his many friends will turn out next week and give him a rousing farewell. Rose Coghlan, in "Dorothy's Dilemma" is announced for the week beginning Sept. 28.

Boston Museum.

George Wilson, one of the most popular actors in the Museum Company, has made a decided hit in the new play at the Museum, "Ye Earlie Troubles." So good is his interpretation of the character of Ebenezer Buck, the volcanic, penurious and nervous father of the young scapegrace rebel Anthony that he keeps the audience in a gale of laughter, whenever he is on the stage. All the company are at their best and theatre goers realize it for they attest their appreciation by filling the Museum at every performance.

Brockton Fair.

The directors of the Brockton Agricultural Fair have behaved very generously toward owners of the fast horses in connection with their coming exhibition on Sept. 30, October 1, 2 and 3. The purses offered last year aggregated $2,550; this year they will amount to $3,050. The entrance is 5 per cent., and 5 per cent. extra from winners. This is liberal to the losers, for heretofore both winners and losers have been obliged to pay 10 per cent. of the purse, regardless of whether they won or lost.

The premiums are for mile heats, best 3 in 5, to harness; national rules to govern; any horse distancing the field or any part of it to receive first money only; four to enter, three to start; purses to be divided as usual, 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. The society reserves the right to change the order of the programme. Hay, grain and straw will be provided free. Horses shipped to the races via the Old Colony will be returned free. Entries close Tuesday, Sept. 22, and must be addressed to W. W. Cross.

The track this year is much improved, considerable money having been spent to bring this condition of things about. It has been reloamed and is in excellent condition generally. Stable accommodations have been increased, and the box stalls are boarded up high, that no draft may reach the horses when the stable doors are open.

Following is the list of purse events as arranged for this year at the Brockton fair:

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30.
3-minute class,	Trotting,	Purse, $200
Wagon race. Best 2 in 3. Horses with record not better than 2.40.		Purse $100

The Duty of the Pulpit.

CONTINUED.

The fourth link in this divinely welded chain of duty reveals no weakness and fastens itself around the Christian pulpit of today with a grip of infinite power, binding it to the duty of massing the forces of the church against the death dealing liquor traffic. How shall this duty be performed? Like any other duty, with fidelity, fearlessness and Christly love. The pulpit must keep before the people the true standard of total abstinence of the individual and total legal prohibition of the traffic. It must encourage the use of all proper measures to promote the temperance cause, educational, moral and legal. It must put the responsibility for perpetuating the sale and use of strong drink where it belongs, in the family, in society, in Legislature and in Congress, in politics and in the sovereign voters who make the nation's laws.

But this will awaken antagonism in the pew. And so will faithful preaching always awaken antagonism. So the Master foretold; so we must expect. Preaching against the liquor traffic will cause antagonism from three sources,—business interests, social customs and political affiliations. With the first two of antagonisms in the pew, the pulpit of today would acknowledge itself to have but small trouble. The ordinary minister would despise himself and be despised of his church and by the community, if he allowed his lips to be sealed for fear of offending the seller and the drinker of intoxicating beverages.

But the other and far larger class of hearers, those whose political affiliations make them sensitive to the utterances of the pulpit, how can the minister do his duty in his work of massing the Christian forces and not give offence? Perhaps he cannot; but if he cannot, then the time has fully come when this unhealthy and unnatural and unchristian condition of the church needs prompt and vigorous treatment. The disease has reached a crisis; the faithful pastor, who is also a true physician, must with all skill, yet with all fidelity, apply the probe before the whole body of the church becomes gangrened. This extreme sensitiveness is itself a symptom that indicates a dangerous disease. There is serious trouble somewhere when the pulpit is warned against the discussion of a subject so vitally related to the welfare of men and the progress of the church.

☞ According to the new law regulating collisions on the water, which recently went into effect, it is the duty of the captain or officer in charge of each vessel to stay by and aid the other vessel in every way possible, and failure to do this, or report the name of his vessel to the captain of the other, will place the blame of the disaster at his door.

☞ Mrs. May French Sheldon of London is about to conduct an exploring party to Africa to learn the customs, legends, and folk-lore of the natives, and preserve them in a book. She will take a stenographer, but will be the only white woman in the party, and she expects to reach Mount Kilima-Njaro, three hundred miles from the coast, where no white footsteps have been heard. The exploration will occupy three months.

☞ Two hundred and sixty-five new dwelling houses were erected in Brockton during the past year. Besides this large number of houses, there were five brick blocks, to say nothing of a number of wooden ones for stores and shoe shops. This is solid substantial growth which the citizens should be proud of.

Artistic Advertising.

Undoubtedly the Ivory soap people deserve credit for the best grade of illustrations now being used for advertising purposes. The series of full page drawings which have been appearing on the last page of the Century represents some of the most capable book and magazine artists in the country. The series must have cost no small figure. As yet the "way up" artists do not sign the work they do for advertisers, but I apprehend that it will not be long ere we shall see in the advertising columns such names as George Wharton Edwards, E. W. Kemble, etc. Such men as these bring to their work, besides mere mechanical skill, a trained imagination and an artistic conception of things. These qualities, when used in connection with advertisements, command scarcely less interest than when used in the ordinary literary way.—Printer's Ink.

☞ According to accounts the memorial monument at West Point to the officers and soldiers of the regular army killed in the war for the Union seems now sure to be erected next summer. Stanford White's design has been accepted—a single monolithic shaft of Milford pink granite, polished, forty-six feet high, resting on a broad, circular base, and surmounted by a figure of Victory. This will be the largest polished shaft in the world, and will be visible far along the Hudson.

☞ Only three persons were killed by electric-light plants in this State last year. Eleven persons lost their lives by not turning off the gas. Now, if we knew how many persons were killed by kerosene explosions, and how many died from sunstroke, we could readily judge what kind of light is most hazardous.

What is

Cottolene?

Cottolene is a pale yellow material of the consistency and texture and substance of lard. It approximates to the color of natural butter. It is without odor and has a neutral flavor to the taste.

Cottolene is a simple preparation of cottonseed oil and beef suet. It contains no other material. It contains no salt, no water and no coloring matter. It meets the public demand for a pure healthful, digestible substitute for swine fat.

The name Cottolene, is registered in the Patent Office and is fully protected. All persons are hereby warned against infringement, and imitations will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

HOW TO USE COTTOLENE.

Directions are clear and simple. Use Cottolene exactly the same as lard, but use only one-half the quantity of Cottolene that would be required of lard.

Remember Cottolene is the same price as lard and thus you save just half your money.

Signs of Rain.

"I knew it would rain," said the farmer's girl,
"When I looked at the morning glories,
For their bells have been open the whole day long,
And they're flowers that tell no stories."

"I knew it would rain," said the farmer's boy,
"Because the cars I could hear them,
Though so far away they rolled over the rails,
As plainly as if I was near them."

"I knew it would rain," said the farmer himself,
"For this reason—the old barnyard pump is
So damp that today it was not primed at all,
And it gen'rally dry as a stump is."

"I knew it would rain," said the good grandmamma,
"When I saw our old tabby cat playing,
For when cats at her age like her own kittens play,
Look out for wet weather, I'm saying."

And so when the rain just at twilight came down
And the wind with a splash and a dash threw it
'Gainst the doors and windows, each sign was recalled
And every one said, "There! I knew it."

Miscellany.

HER SON-IN-LAW.

"I kind o' hate to let that furniture go, Betsey Jane," said Mr. Piggott.

"Well, I wonder why?" slowly enunciated his better-half, who stood with her hands upon her sides, and a big white apron pinned around her by no means slender waist. "You ain't Noah, I guess, nor I ain't Noah's wife, and we don't want the kind o' furniture that came over in the Ark. Mis' Squire Nipps, she's got real [illegible] Doctor [illegible] wife has Spanish mahogany that you can see your face in, and these chairs, at their best, weren't nothin' better than common curly maple with rush bottoms."

The August sun was steeping the old shingled roof in brightness, the round, tremulous tops of the monster butternut trees were a study in green and gold, and a flock of young turkeys were clucking sleepily in the high grass of the adjoining meadow.

Mr. and Mrs. Piggott stood out on the dandelion starred grass, proudly viewing the old house which had just been newly painted of a vivid olive, "picked out" with Venetian red.

"It b'longed to my gran'ther," said Mr. Piggott. "He went to housekeepin' with it when he was married."

"Well, so long he's been dead and buried forty year," said Mrs. Piggott, curtly, "I don't see what difference that makes."

"Tell ye what, Mis' Piggott," said a frank, cheery voice, as a tall young farmer in his shirt-sleeves, with a scythe balanced lightly across his stalwart shoulder, came up to the well curb to get a drink. "I'll give you twenty-five dollars for that set o' furniture!"

Jemima Piggott—for short called "Jimmy"—who was sitting on the doorstep, hemming a red-bordered towel, looked up with a sudden bright smile in her dark-blue eyes.

"Oh, Moses," said she, involuntarily, "I'm so glad"

Mrs. Piggott sniffed scornfully.

"Well," said she, "if you and Moses Raintree are willin' to go to house-keepin' with such a lot of old truck as that—"

"It was Grandsir Piggott's," said Jimmy, simply.

"Twenty-five dollars," said Moses. "Is it a bargain?"

"Yes, and glad to get it," answered his mother-in-law-elect, with equal brevity.

Mrs. Piggott went to the nearest town the next morning and bought a staring set of machine-made parlor furniture, upholstered in cheap and showy jute.

"Jemima hain't a speck of her mother's pride," said she, "or she'd never marry a man that can't do no better than put her into a blacksmith's shop made over."

"It's very neatly fixed up," interposed her husband, "and you couldn't hardly tell it from a reg'lar built house. Mose has done it himself out of hours, every nail and screw of it. And he bought the lot hisself out of his own honest earnin's. When Grandsir Piggott was a boy—"

"Oh, I'm sick of hearin' of your Grandsir Piggott!" unceremoniously interrupted Mrs. Piggott. "Now look here, John; that walnut furniture is just the thing I've wanted this long time."

"I'm glad you're suited," said Mr. Piggott, dolefully.

"And now the next thing is a pianner for Lucilla—" began his wife.

"A—pianner!"

"Yes. Why not? Every girl has one now-a-days."

"Jimmy never had one."

"Jimmy hadn't no ambition. Lucilla's quite a different kind. Lucilla's clear Higginbotham. Their ain't a bit o' Piggott about her. Lucilla must go in good society, and marry some one that's a peg higher'n a workin' man."

"You mean William Warburton?"

"I don't name no names," oraculary responded his wife. "What I mean is that Lucilla must be fixed up like other girls, and she and me, we've settled it she must have a pianner—on installments, you know. Of course we can't expect to pay for it all to once."

"But, Betsey Jane, we ain't paid off the old mortgage on the wood lot yet."

"Wall, what o, that?"

"Mr. Mudge may foreclose any day."

"He won't!"

"And the farm stock is all run down."

"The farm stock can wait. Your daughter's welfare is the first thing to think of. Now we've got the house painted up and a new set of modern furnitnre, the next thing is a pianner and dancin' party, with froze ice cream and cake and lemonade for Lucilla."

"But I don't see, what with Jimmy's wedding, how we can pay for it!" stammered poor Piggott."

"Father," spoke up Jimmy, "I don't want any wedding. Moses and me, we calculate to begin jest as we mean to go on. We've got the little three-roomed house and Grandsir Piggott's set o' furniture, and we'll go right to Parson Parker's in the mornin' and get married, by ourselves, and go straight to housekeepin' in the afternoon. You shan't be put to no trouble nor expense for us!"

"I told you there wan't no Higginbotham about Jemima," said Mrs. Piggott. "However, I don't care, if she's suited."

Mr. Piggott looked troubled.

"If a daughter o' mine goes out o' my house," said he, "I'd like her to have a creditable send-off."

"But Moses and I don't want a weddin', father," affectionately urged Jimmy, patting his cheek with her slim brown hand. "We love each other, and we're willin' to rough it together. Why should we want to add to your expenses and troubles?"

"There's a good o' sense in what Jemima says," observed Mrs. Piggott. "Moses Raintree's only a farmer. Wait until Lucilla marries young Warburton. Then I'll show you what a wedding is!"

So Moses and Jemima branched off by themselves into their quiet new life.

A glittering piano was ordered, the gorgeous party was given, and finally, with a grand flourish of trumpets, came Luctlla's marriage to Will Warburton.

"I hope she'll be happy," said Mrs. Raintree, wistfully, to her husband; "but I'm not just certain. I don't altogether like that young Warburton. He's made Lucilla too many expensive presents, and I don't understand so much speedin' fast horses and playing billiards at the tavern."

"Well, we'll give 'em a chance," said Moses Raintree, cheerfully. "And in the meantime, what do you say to Mrs. De Minford's offer of two hundred dollars for that old set of furniture?"

"I don't want to sell it," said Jimmy. "It was Grandsir Piggott's, you know. But, if you really need the money—"

"Choose for yourself, my girl," said Moses, laughing. "The furniture is your'n, not mine."

That very night—a raw, March tempest, full of driving sleet and wailing winds—Lucilla came, pale and woe-be-gone, to her sister's house, and slunk in at the back door.

"Jimmy, can't you help me?" wailed she. "The officers are waiting for Will around the corner of the house. He didn't mean it. He surely expected to be able to make up the money before it was missed, but luck was against him, and now—now—he'll be put in jail, and—"

And a tempest of tears checked the weeks' old bride."

"He's been—stealing, eh?" said Jimmy, her sweet face hardening involuntarily.

"Not stealing! Oh, he never meant that," pleaded Lucilla. "He was so certain of being able to replace it! Dear, dear, Jimmy, if I could only raise two hundred dollars! Father he says Will has drained him dry of every cent, and mother can only cry and rock herself backwards and forwards—"

Jimmy went into the back room to take counsel with Moses Raintree, who sat there adding up figures at his home-made pine desk.

"I know he's a scamp," she said, in a low voice, "but he's Lucilla's husband."

"Not such a scamp after all," said kindly Moses. "Only weak and conceited and easily led astray. Well, Jimmy?"

"If you don't object, Moses, that set of furniture that Mrs. De Minford wanted—"

"Jimmy, you're a noble-hearted little girl," said Raintree. "Where is Lucilla? I'll fix the thing for her."

Lucilla could scarcely believe the measure of her own good fortune.

"It shall never happen again, Moses," said she—"indeed it never shall! Because if Will once tides through this trouble, he's the promise of a place in the new rolling mill at Steelkirk. Mr. Farrell knows the foreman, and he says he can get him a place. Will's seen the folly of horses and gambling. And he says for my sake—"

And once more poor frightened little Lucilla broke down into tears and sobs, like the veriest baby.

"Yes," said Moses quietly, "Mr. Farrell knows the foreman, Lucilla, and so do I. I had meant it for a surprise for Jimmy, but I am the new foreman at Steelkirk Mills, at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year, and a new frame house to live in, and a team o' horses kept for me to drive around and see to things with."

Jimmy opened her soft blue eyes wide and drew a quick, gasping breath.

"Oh, Moses!" was all that she could say.

"Yes," said Raintree, reaching down his hat, "you've been the best and dearest little wife in the world, Jimmy, and its high time you had some reward. And we'll keep Grandsir Piggott's furniture for our best parlor after all. I do believe the old sticks brought us good luck. Come, Lucilla, I'll go with you now to settle with them men."

"But you've got to git the money somewhere," hazarded Lucilla, timidly.

"The two hundred dollars?" He touched his vest pocket. "I've got it now—right here."

Lucilla stared. The family of Piggott had got so in the habit of regarding Moses Raintree as a sort of a semi-pauper that the idea of his actually possessing money in any amount did not seem a possibility.

"I 'most believe I'm dreaming?" faltered she, in the overflowing fulness of her joy.

"What!" cried Mrs. Piggott, "Moses Raintree paid that money? Where under the sun did he ever get two hundred dollars? Moses Raintree the foreman of the grand new rolling mills? It ain't possible! Jimmy to live in a new house, with a Queen Anne roof and double parlors, and a horse and rockaway kerridge! And Lucilla's husband to clerk it under Moses Raintree! Well, wonders never will cease, that's certain!"

"Other folks thinks more o' your son-in-law than you do, Betsy Jane," said Mr. Piggott, with a sly chuckle. "And what's more, Jimmy's goin' to begin life in the house with Grandsir Piggott's curly maple cheers and tables! Eh, what's that? A van, come to take away the pianner for non-payment of instalments! I an't sorry to be quit of it. And the next money I can scrape together I'll pay toward the farm mortgage. I've had enough of style."

And for once in her life Mrs. Piggott was ready with no retort.—Helen Forest Graves.

For the Patriot.

A Letter from France.

Hotel Dominici,
Paris, Aug. 15, 1891.

My Dear Friend: After leaving Vevay we went to Geneva, Bale, Baden-Baden, Heidelberg, Wiesbaden, Cologne, and Nance, now we are back again in Paris. I received your note from Portland, Me., of July 27 in Paris on Aug. 12, and your letter from New York of July 31 and the Quincy Patriot, which I like to read, on Aug. 14.

In Heidelberg we saw the Prince of Montenegro, the Grand Duke Alexis, brother or the Czar of Russia, and the Prince of Saxe Coburg, who had the honor of stopping at our hotel with us.

Paris is a great place for sight-seeing, but still not equal to Rome, whose fine objects pleased me so much.

As the Patriot is so kind as to give my letters a place whether they are short or long, I am going to tell of the places we visited and what we saw in the style of a diary.

Vevay, July 20.—Today we took a walk around the town to see the shops as the stores, are called all over Europe.

July 21.—This morning a club of gymnastic performers came to town and stopped at our hotel. In the afternoon they went away for awhile and came back with two handsome silver cups and were merry and glad over their success. In the evening they made up a grand torchlight procession and marched through the streets with a fine band of music.

July 22.—We took the pretty steamer Helvetia for Geneva. Our first stopping place was Ouchy, a point in Lausanne, where a company of the gymnasts got off and a party of sixty-seven American tourists got on the steamer. Then we came to Nyers, near which can be seen the villa of the eminent authoress, Madame de Stael, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon we arrived in Geneva, which we found gaily decorated with flags in honor of the visit of the Gymnastic Club. We drove to the Hotel of Peace, an attractive name to tired travelers. Mt. Blanc can be distinctly seen from our windows, its high summit crowned with the beautiful snow. The next morning we went driving about the fine old city, crossing and recrossing the river Rhone several times. The Rhone is a twin sister of the Rhine. We bought some photographs of places of interest. We visited a musical box manufactory. Geneva supplies the world with music boxes. We were shown a musical curiosity; there was a singing bird, music box, drums, castanets and flutes, all combined. This mechanical orchestrian was played for our enjoyment. In the afternoon I went out to buy a pair of shoes and strange to say I went to thirteen stores and could not get a pair to suit me and I am not hard to [illegible] July 2[illegible].—We [illegible] passing through [illegible] for Baden-Baden, Berne and also Frieburg in Germany. At one point on our journey we saw in the dim distance the tall tower of the Cathedral in Strasburg and a bird's-eye view of the old city itself, although at the time we were fully forty miles away.

July 25.—We are now in Baden-Baden; we are stopping at the European Hotel. In the morning my father went to the Trink Halle (drinking hall) to take the waters, which are wholesome; it is a fine building. In the evening we went to the ball given in honor of our president's daughters, Mrs. Russell Harrison and Mrs. McKee. It was too bad that Baby McKee was not there, but I suppose he had to stay at home with his grandpa. The grand ball was held in the Kersalle or conversation hall, a splendid edifice. I am sorry to say that we did not have the pleasure of seeing those American ladies from the White House, as we left before they arrived. Do you think I got tired of dancing? That's all right!

Sunday morning, July 26, we attended the English church and enjoyed the service.

Monday morning we left Baden-Baden for Heidelberg; when we arrived we drove to the Schloss Hotel. Here we visited the old Schloss or castle and were much interested. On the way we noticed a great many University students, who wore caps of many colors without vizors, and the most of them had ribbons drawn across their breasts, showing that they had won or lost in three duels. How ridiculous.

In Heidelberg tourists always go to see the big tun, so we went to see this huge hogshead. We first crossed the moat by a bridge, then walking beneath a portcullis and a kind of battering-ram, we entered the court yard. This barrel is of such immense size that it holds 283,000 bottles of wine and cost 80,000 florins, or nearly $40,000. You mount by steps to the wide platform on the top of the tun.

From different parts of the old castle of Heidelberg, which is a real ruin, we had many grand views of the suburbs of the city. We were shown the fine dwellings of noblemen. It seemed to me there were hundreds of them. In the afternoon the Prince of Montenegro arrived and came to our hotel; of course because I was there.

July 29.—We took a train for Wiesbadens It is a handsome city. We changed cars at Frankfort-on-the-Main. We are stopping at the Victoria Hotel.

July 30.—In the afternoon we took the cars or steam tramway, which is quite English, you know, out to Biebrich on the Rhine. There we saw the steamboat landing where we were to embark on an excursion a few days later. We returned to the city and took a rest for the whole day.

Aug. 1.—In the evening a band of 1600 singers arrived in town. We had lots of splendid music. On Sunday morning we attended the English church.

Aug. 3.—We drove out to Biebrich, where we took passage on the Rhine steamer for Cologne. We passed many ancient castles in ruins, with which many of the old German legends are connected. Among many interesting things we looked at were the Torelei rocks and the castle of Rhinefels. The steamer made stops at Bingen and Coblenz. Now we are in the beautiful city of Cologne. We drove to the Northern Hotel, (Hotel du Norel). In the morning we visited the celebrated cathedral with its tall spires. In a chapel of the cathedral we were shown a bone of St. Matthew and bones of the three wise men. One of the skulls was covered with a cloth of gold and words embroidered on it in panels. There are many sacred and curious relics here. We went up behind the high alter to see the shrines. In the church of St. Ursula (our English princess) we were shown the bones and skulls of St. Ursula and the 4000 virgins who were martyred with her. Many skulls are in sight with hideous cuts on them and on one skull the side was entirely chopped off. There we saw one of the vessels in which the water was kept that was turned to wine at the wedding of Cana. We saw also a part of the crown of thorns and a drop of the blood of our Saviour. In a glass case you can see the heads of the arrows which killed St. Ursula, and shreds of her clothing.

We also visited the cologne manufactory of Johann Marie Farina, it is a house of perfume.

Aug. 5.—We set out on the train for Paris. We are now resting for a few days in that gay capital. Paris once more, Hurrah!

We shall soon be off for England, Scotland and ould Ireland and then home again. Three times three cheers for New York.

Your affectionate young friend,
Bruce McLean Falconer.

Eyes and Their Use.

Few persons are aware, says M. Felix Hement, that besides size, shape and color, their eyes differ in visual force and in power of accommodation; and also that some faults affect only one of them. It is an established fact that we all use one eye—the right or the left—in preference, when looking through a glass or taking aim with a gun. We are right or left-eyed as we are right or left-handed or footed. If we do not perceive this ourselves, oculists and opticians remark it. The ignorance of most people on this subject is illustrated by their buying glasses at the opticians' without taking account of any difference between the eyes. Thus only one of the eyes is helped, while the other one, being less called into exercise, becomes less and less useful, and loses its powers, as a tool rusts when it is not in use. Yet both our eyes are needed to see well. It becomes, therefore, highly important to observe how the child uses his eyes, in order to correct those attitudes which tend to injury of the sight as well as the health. Children, in writing, rarely fail to give the head an inclination by which the eyes are placed at unequal distances from the paper. They are also apt to incline their head too far, and acquire the habit of bringing it too near, as when they try to accommodate themselves to a feeble light. Not sufficient attention, we think, is given to these matters, especially when we consider the consequences of such habits in mature age. A large proportion of our defects originate in want of proper care during childhood. We do wrong to such wonderful tools as our senses when we do not give the education they need. Is it not surprising that parents who are so particular about the way their children hold their fork or spoon pay so little attention to the way they use their eyes?

Rules for Young Gymnasts.

Much benefit can be derived from gymnastic appliances if they are used understandingly. No advantage is to be gained by exercise that is carried on in a careless manner. Neither too much nor too violent exercise is beneficial, though constant and work for a certain length of time every other day than to devote all of one week to exercise, and not go near the gymnasium the next.

To use any apparatus carelessly is to use it dangerously. There is something besides and beyond the mere pleasure of being able to perform tricks in a gymnasium; there is a lasting benefit to be obtained in careful gymnastic exercise.

Let me impress one fact upon your minds: you are laying the foundation of a splendid manhood at the same time that you are gaining skill and grace. You are laying up for yourself a store of health that you can draw on when you are grown men, and the days for gymnastics are past.

In beginning your exercises there are two points that you must always bear in mind. Stand erect, and before beginning any work draw a long deep breath. Breathe from the abdomen, so that the lower part of the lungs are expanded. You will find by following this simple advice that anything you attempt will be much easier for you than if you go about your exercise in a careless or slouchy way. There should be no round-shouldered gymnasts, and I have yet to see any one who has achieved distinction as a gymnast who was not as straight as an arrow, and across whose shoulder-blades a yardstick could not be placed without touching his back.

In your exercises avoid devoting too much time to one kind of work. Do not spend all your time, for instance, on the horizontal bar, or on the parallel bars. What all would-be gymnasts should strive for is a symmetrical developement of their muscles. You do not want to have legs like a piano, hard and knotted with muscles, and arms like pipe stems. Nor do you want to have the arms and chest of a blacksmith and legs like those of a crane. You want to have all your muscles developed alike, not one at the expense of another. To avoid this lop-sided kind of growth is the reason that gymnasiums have such a variety of appliances.—Harper's Young People.

His Wits Saved Him.

It is related of Stonewall Jackson that while reconnoitring one day he got caught on the wrong side of a bridge guarded by a field piece and some Federal artillerymen. When he discovered this Jackson did not hesitate a moment. Galloping up behind the men, he shouted out to the officer in command: "Who directed you to put that gun on the road? Take it away and mount it in the woods on the hill yonder. I never saw such a piece of folly. Here in the open ground your men will be shot down from the brush on the other side." On he went as though in a terrible passion, berating the officer, who colored, saluted, apologized, and hastily gave the order for removing the gun. Jackson, with his staff at his heels, galloped off to the left as though to pass down the stream, made a sudden turn, thundered across the bridge and escaped before the confused officer realized what had happened.

Castor Oil Plant.

"There is," says a horticulturist, "hardly an instance in natural history of a plant so universally detested by the animal world as the castor-oil plant. No sort of birds, beast or creeping thing will touch a castor-oil plant. It seems to be a rank poison to all the animal world. Even a goat will starve before biting off a leaf, and a horse will sniff at it and turn up his upper lip as though it had the most detestable odor on the face of the earth. Army worms and the locusts will pass it by, though they may eat every other green thing in sight, and there is no surer way to drive moles away from a lawn than to plant a few castor beans here and there. Even the tobacco worm will refuse to be fed on its leaves."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—YELLOWSTONE PARK.—WESTERN CITIES, PRAIRIES, ETC.

Letter No. 7.

The principal attractions at Mammoth Hot Springs, which our readers will remember is the first stopping place for tourists in the park, is the beautiful terraces which are formed from the particles coming from the hot springs. As the water cools it coats the edges with stalactitic masses, from a light cream to the deepest shades of red; the predominating color being bright orange. The terraces are formed so regularly and are so beautifully shaded that they seem the work of some ingenious hand. Articles of iron, glass, or any hard substances placed in the water will in a few days become coated with a white deposit. Visitors to the park often carry tumblers, spoons, etc., to be coated, but it is usually better to buy of a dealer on the spot, than for travellers to attend to the things themselves; as more or less attention is required to see that the articles are well covered.

The boiling springs and terraces are within a few hundred feet of the hotel, so that visitors can walk out and examine them at their leisure, or have guides from the hotel; but the guides, when an opportunity offers, charge exhorbitant prices.

The Mammoth Hot Springs are the most remarkable development of thermal action to be found in the world—occupying one hundred and seventy acres, with thirteen distinct terraces and over fifty active springs.

There are no geysers at the Mammoth Hot Springs, but as you travel through the park you see many, and very remarkable ones too. Sometimes ten or twenty miles apart and usually along by a river. The largest number at any one point is at Upper Geyser Basin. Here twenty-six are found. Some throw the boiling water but a few feet into the air, others from one hundred to two hundred feet. Many of them are very irregular, others are more precise. Some play every five minutes, others in three hours, four hours, twenty-four hours, six days, fourteen days, etc. Old Faithful, at this point, is very much enjoyed. Every sixty-three minutes, with rarely a variation of five minutes, day or night, summer or winter, this wonderful freak of nature gives its exhibition, which the visitors to the spot are at liberty to enjoy. Its eruptions begin with a few spasmodic spurts, during which considerable water is thrown out, and these are followed in from five to eight minutes by a column of hot water two feet in diameter, which is projected upwards to the height of one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty feet. The geyser is situated on a slight elevation formed of geyserite, which gives the tourist a grand chance to view the fine display offered once an hour. Between times the visitor can go close to the crater, which has an oblong opening two by six feet, and examine it as much as he pleases. [illegible] ser, only a few [illegible] Faithful. Its name was suggested by the peculiar shape of its cone, which is about four feet in height, three feet in diameter at the top, by seven feet at the base, and nearly circular. Its nozzle-opening, or crater, is about eighteen inches across. Its eruptions are irregular, about three times a day. Visitors can approach close up to it while in action, with perfect security, as no rocks are thrown out, and the water is so hot it mostly evaporates while in the air. The height the water is thrown varies from one hundred and seventy to two hundred and twenty feet.

While walking along near some of the Hot Springs, one can hear the noise of the boiling water beneath his feet, and see the vapor arising from crevices in the ground; his step vibrates, as though it was hollow underneath, and the smell of sulphur in the air reminds him somewhat of the infernal regions, about which the good people used to try to frighten us in our younger days. The air in many places was so full of sulphur that one would know that a hot spring was in the vicinity when riding several hundred feet away. G. W. P.

Brooklyn Brevities.

"That happy town beside the sea,
Whose roads lead everywhere to all."

Boston claims to be, but Brooklyn fills the bill as well. Its capacities for growth are amazing, surpassing those of our sister city across the bridge. A friend took me to ride through West Brooklyn down to Bensonhurst-by-the-Sea on Saturday and the increase of the city in that direction was surprising. Eastward the same growth is seen. We have 800,000. This morning 600 new comers landed on one of our wharves. We have more shipping than New York city, but they go West. They were Italians and Portuguese from Naples and Lisbon. One impatient husband on the pier, in his anxiety to greet his better half, tumbled overboard with a bag of doughnuts in his hands intended as a gift for her. He was fished out, minus the pastry, and hurried home dripping with slimy water. Saturday a family of Hebrews, fleeing from Russian cruelty were sent back. They will be returned by rail to the frontier of Russia. Their disappointment was agonizing, having just touched the land of freedom to be sent back to a tyrant's lash.

Talmage resumed his work at Brooklyn Tabernacle yesterday and preached on Kindness, but took occasion to stir up the dilatory ones who had not paid the money pledged toward the building. Liabilities are large and litigation already begun.

Dr. Storrs preached on Day Dreams and Dr. Gregg on Law, a joyous theme. The Young Woman's Christian Association building will be ready next winter, in time, probably, for the fourth anniversary of the institution and will be a suburb monument to the generosity of two Brooklyn millionaires.

Moody once asked a man if $250,000 was too much to have paid for Exeter hall for a Y. M. C. A. The man said no, and informed Mr. Moody that he, a wealthy sporting man, tired of sin, had been asked in one day while passing. He left a Christian and had since given to religious purposes more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Letters received today from Dr. Clarence Thwing at Sitka say that the new St. John's Maternity is approaching completion. He is also happy in the advent of a son, Edward Payson. The parents have given him to the work of missions, in which they are enthusiastically engaged. Merlin.

Sewer Act.

On Monday next a special election will be held in this city on the Sewer Act, when voters will be asked to vote "yes" or "no" on the following question:

Shall an act passed by the General Court in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-one, entitled—"An act to authorize the City of Quincy to construct a system of Sewerage," be accepted?

We give below section eight, which has reference to assessing the owners of estates to pay for the same:

SEC. 8 Said city shall bear the cost of any pumping station or stations and the appliances necessary therefor included in said system of sewerage and sewage disposal, but in case such cost amounts to less than one-third of the total cost of said system said city shall further pay and contribute such additional sum as may be needed to make the total payment borne by the city equal to one-third of such total cost. The remaining cost of said system shall be borne by the owners of estates situated within the territory embraced by it and benefitted thereby, but no estate shall be deemed to be benefited unless or until a sewer is constructed into which it can be drained. The owners of such estates shall be assessed by said commissioners their proportional parts respectively of such proportion of the total cost of said system as is not borne by the city as above provided; such proportional parts shall be based upon the estimated average cost of all the sewers composing said system and shall be assessed by a fixed uniform rate according to the frontage of such estates on any street or way in which a sewer is constructed, or according to the area of such estate within a fixed depth from such street or way, or according to both frontage and area; and every such owner shall within three months after written notice of such assessment, served on him or on the occupant of his estate or sent by mail to the last address of said owner known to said commissioners, pay the sum so assessed to the city treasurer.

Provided, that said board shall, on the written request of any such owner made within said three months, apportion such assessment into such number of equal parts or instalments, not exceeding ten, as said owner shall state in such request, and they shall certify such apportionment to the assessors; interest from the date of said apportionment at the rate of five per cent. per annum shall be added to each of said assessments until they are paid.

The Golden Grail.

A large number of the members of Excelsior Commandery, No. 75, of the order of Golden Grail, of this city, met in Plumer's hall, Wednesday evening, to give expression to the way in which the Supreme officers had unjustly levied assessments upon its members.

When the members of the local lodge were induced to join, promises were made at public meetings held in Hancock hall, that it would cost them $65 for $100, and in no consideration would it go over $69, to which the Supreme officers pledged their word of honor.

Instead of the $69, many have paid over $100, and one lady in this city, Mrs. Thomas Bleakley, has paid $115 on her certificate. There are scores of others who have paid over $100.

Some of the members have certificates which matured last June and they have not received a cent of their money yet.

At the meeting Wednesday evening nearly every member present expressed his opinion of the officers and order in no very gentle way and had any of the Imperial

The meeting was a lively and spicy one and lasted until after 10 o'clock.

Before the meeting closed it was voted that it was their impression that the Imperial officers of the order had levied assessments illegally on its members against the expression of the charter granted by the Legislature to them, inasmuch as some of its members have been assessed $115 and $117 for their $100, and as its officers and committees appointed by the order have waited upon the Supreme officers from time to time to receive information in regard to when the matured certificates of last June would be paid, and in reply have received no satisfaction whatever. We take this method to convey to the public the way we have been wrongfully treated, and caution them thereby that they may not fall victims as we have to their untruthful statement.

Twenty-three members of the above commandery have therefore placed their case in the hands of Sherman L. Whipple as a bill in equity to recover the amount insured for.

He has therefore attached and tied up $5000 of their money till such time as he will receive further orders from the court.

P. F. Y. B. O. Anniversary.

Granite Commandry, No. 36, P. F. Y. B. O., celebrated its second anniversary Wednesday evening at Grand Army hall, nearly 100 members being present.

A bountiful collation was the first number on the programme, after partaking of which the members were entertained with violin solos by the Lord sisters, duet by Misses May McPhail and Mamie Gardner, reading by Miss Beatrice Porterfield. This was followed by games which lasted until a late hour. Toasts were responded to between the several numbers of the programme by William W. Penniman, Hugh McPhail, Albert Keating and Joseph W. Lombard. During the evening two candidates were initiated.

Dangerous Amusement.

For some time past unknown parties have amused themselves by throwing missles from President's bridge at passing trains on the Old Colony railroad. Saturday, as the 4.30 P. M. train was passing, a large apple came crashing through the front end window of a car in which Deputy Manager of Police Langley was riding. When the train arrived at Quincy Deputy Langley took a carriage and drove back to the bridge where he discovered two boys whose actions led him to believe they were the parties. After sharp questioning they admitted they had thrown the missle.

Deputy Langley will consult with the Old Colony officials and take such action as they may decide.

Guild of the Great Teacher.

At the business meeting of the Guild of the Great Teacher, held Sunday evening, the following officers were elected:

Committee on Meetings.—Mr. Gordon Keating, Miss Mabel Adams, Miss Leila Ordway, Miss Fanny Southworth.

Committee on Good Fellowship.—Mr. Arthur Hall, Miss Eunice Newcomb, Miss Edith Waldron.

Secretary and Treasurer.—Miss Carrie Hatch.

—Joshua Wales of Quincy, formerly of Milford, was in town Saturday. Mrs. Wales is quite sick, and he accompanied her to Marlboro, where she is to stay with her married daughter for awhile, to recuperate. He has sold his business in Quincy, and is to work there for his son.—Milford Journal.

—The Press Cycling club announce a century run for Monday, Oct. 19, from Boston to Newburyport and return.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mr. E. B. Marsh is building a residence on Irving place.

James Walker is building a pretty cottage on Thayer street.

Miss Georgia Thayer is visiting friends at Boston Highlands.

Hon. William A. Hodges and Miss Hodges are in New York.

Mr. Benj. Langhorn started Friday on a vacation trip to Bangor, Me.

Miss Evelyn Burrell of Hingham is visiting at Mrs. Thomas W. Lincoln's.

How shall I vote on the "Sewer Act?" is a question which perplexes many voters.

Master Walter H. Hersey has entered the State Normal school at Bridgewater.

The Registrars have a notice of interest to voters in another column.

Miss M. E. Griffin of the PATRIOT office is spending her vacation in Malden.

Water was turned on at the fountain Wednesday while Photographer Bussell took several views.

Miss Alice Richardson of New York, formerly of this city, is spending a few days with Miss Ella Veazie.

Mrs. Nellie F. Burbeck of Plymouth trance and test medium speaks at Faxon hall, Sunday, at 7.15 P. M.

Sample ballots for the special election on the "Sewer Act" have been posted. The vote will be taken next Monday.

Mt. Wollaston Lodge No. 80, I. O. O. F., will consider an important amendment to the bylaws at its next meeting.

The "Sewer Act" to be voted upon next Monday was published in full in the DAILY LEDGERS of Thursday and Friday.

The DAILY LEDGER is publishing a list of the taxpayers of the city, giving the amount assessed both in 1890 and 1891.

A large number of the men employed by the city are out of work caused by the breaking down of the stone crusher on South street.

Quincy people should have their legal printing done by local newspapers. We noticed a bill in equity and a citation in another county paper on Saturday.

Mrs. S. E. Buffum's dancing school opens in Robertson hall, Oct. 3, at 2.30 P. M. Her class at Wollaston commences the same day at 10 A. M.

The Sunday School teachers, choir, and debt collectors of St. Johns church, saw "The Old Homestead" at the Boston theatre Thursday evening.

The marriage of Miss Annie E. Guy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Guy, and Mr. William G. Shaw took place on Thursday, and was a grand affair.

The Guild of the Great Teacher will meet at 7 P. M. Sunday in the ladies' parlor of the Unitarian chapel. Subject, Energy. All the young people are invited to be present.

Lemmie, youngest son of Mr. Lemuel Pitts, residing on Hancock street, fell from a tree last Saturday afternoon and badly sprained one of his ankles. The accident confines the little fellow to his room.

The rebuilding of Washington street has been continued toward the Centre and both hills between Elm and Foster streets have been greatly improved. Thus Ward One gets a little slice.

Mrs. Hannah Carlson, a Swede, who keeps a boarding-house on Cottage street, reports to Deputy Langley that Otter Anderson, one of her boarders, has skipped out leaving an unpaid board bill of $125.

Misses Mary and Winnie Garbarino tendered a party to about thirty of their young friends Wednesday evening. Supper was served after which the company participated in vocal and instrumental music and games.

The Republican [illegible] Hancock hall with the following speakers: Joseph O. Burdette, J. Otis Wardwell, and Congressman Allen of Michigan. Ex-Mayor Porter will preside.

Timothy Sullivan of Concord, N. H., formerly of Quincy, is visiting friends in this city. Mr. Sullivan was one of the largest granite quarry owners in New Hampshire until recently when he sold out to the government.

Mr. Walter B. Crane and his friend, Mr. Willie Batchelder, who have been traveling through the provinces the past two weeks returned to their homes Thursday, having enjoyed their jaunt and passed through some beautiful parts of the country.

Work was begun Tuesday, on the new sidewalk in the depot yard, abutting the Academy boarding house. Some handsome curbing have arrived, and the walk will be of brick making a big improvement. Through the efforts of Mayor Fairbanks the Old Colony will cooperate.

The valuation of Quincy in 1890 was $13,677.410. The census returns show that the valuation of the whole state of Arizona was but $21,434,767; Nevada, $24,663,385; Idaho, $25,581,305; Wyoming, $31,431,495. The assessed valuation per capita is the largest in Massachusetts ($962.12) with Rhode Island $931.28 and California $886.58.

The following persons have recently filed applications for naturalization with City Clerk Spear: Joseph Gerrior, Water street; Amos G. Bennett, Granite street; Lewis N. Fountaine, Copeland street; Frank Rafferty, Phipps street; Angus McIntosh, Quincy street; William Pratt, Granite street; Miles J. McInnis, Water street; James Birnie, Liberty street; Angus McDonnell, Pearl street.

As Charles Milligan was driving under the Granite street bridge toward the Centre Thursday his horse was frightened by the cars and run. The street was blocked by three stone teams abreast and the runaway took to the sidewalk on the right, but there was hardly room enough between the board fence and a telephone pole, and the result was a smashup. Mr. Milligan was thrown out and severely injured on the left side. The horse became detached and run to the Square. Both shafts were broken, also one of the cross bars, and the wagon otherwise damaged.

Sunday Officer Hanson was aroused from his afternoon nap by the report of a gun, and upon going out he saw two fellows standing near Butler's brook. He asked them if they had fired a gun, and was answered no. Seeing a gun leaning against a tree, the officer asked if they owned it, and was again answered no. As the gun was a double barrel breech-loader, and seemed to have no owner, the officer took it. On Monday morning, however, two other parties came from Boston and claimed it, saying they had loaned it to the party who had it Sunday. As they were evidently somewhat frightened, Deputy Langley gave them back the gun.

Remember the Hospital.

Owing to the low price of sugar and the great abundance of fruits, probably most every housekeeper has laid in a large supply of preserves this year. It is hoped that the ladies of Quincy will remember the invalids at the hospital, to whom these delicacies will be very acceptable. A jar of nice preserves or a tumbler of jelly will not be missed from your store, ladies, and will give so much pleasure to the sick ones that it is hoped that the hospital will secure an abundant supply.

—Rev. E. Victor Bigelow was installed over the Second Congregational church at Cohasset, Thursday. The sermon was by Rev. David N. Beach of Cambridge.

WEST QUINCY.

The citizens of West Quincy were to meet in Donaher's hall Friday evening to consider the advisibility of accepting or rejecting the Sewer act.

Sumner Pierce was given a party Tuesday evening at Donaher's hall, and presented with a gold headed umbrella. Dancing, singing and a collation were the things that made the evening pass in a pleasant manner.

Asa Foote of Hallowell, Me., is visiting Mrs. Hiram Campbell on Copeland street.

Bernard Hart has returned to Virginia and his son William has gone West in the employ of Harris Farnum.

The Epworth League connected with the M. E. Church, West Quincy, held its first social gathering Wednesday evening. The programme consisted of singing, recitations by Miss Bertha Turner, and remarks by the pastor. A series of lectures are to be held during the autumn under the auspices of the League.

William Harris, employed by John Cashman, had his toe broken Friday by a horse stepping upon it.

Miss Annie and Addie Miller are rusticating at the White mountains.

James O'Dowd is having the roof of his store raised and will have a tenement overhead.

The Democrats of Ward Four have opened a ward room in Lamb's block.

Assault With a Dirk.

Patrick O'Leary, a quarryman who boards with Michael Connors on Garfield street, West Quincy, was stabbed and seriously wounded in the left breast just above the heart, by an unknown person about 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

O'Leary was returning home and had reached the door, when hearing a step behind him, he turned to see who it was that was following him, and a short, thick-set man with a smooth face struck him with some kind of a two edge instrument, inflicting a serious wound.

Serious Accident.

Thursday, Mr. Jonas Shackley was at work raising the roof of James O'Dowd's building on Copeland street and had it raised about two feet when it slipped and fell over one side striking Mr. Shackley on the head crushing it quite badly. He was immediately taken to his home on Hall place, and a physician summoned. Mr. Shackley is reported as being much better yesterday.

Dangerous.

We would not be surprised at any time to hear that some of the many children of the Willard school had been injured by the electric cars, for just before school hours and at recess the street in front of the building is lined with them, many of whom pass in front of the cars trying to see how near they can go and not be struck. Others will stand on the track until the car is almost upon them before they make a move to get off. The children have an unusually large school yard and should understand that that is the place for them to stay.

QUINCY POINT.

Master Gilbert Damon, youngest son of Mr. Charles Damon, broke his arm on Monday, by falling from a fence. Dr. Sheahan set the bones and the child is doing well.

The funeral of Mr. Charles Blanchard of Quincy, who died Saturday, was held Monday from his late residence on Wharf street.

Mr. Herbert M. Federhen has so far recovered from the effects of his recent accident as to be out again. Mr. Federhen still walks very lame and is obliged to carry a cane.

Sunday Picnic.

About 900 people attended the first annual picnic of the Thomas Francis Meagher literary institute at Lovell's Grove Sunday. The day was all that could be wished for and hundreds of people from Quincy went down in the afternoon, so many in fact that Supt. Weeks was obliged to run the electrics on twenty minute time. The picnickers brought an orchestra with them, was under orders from Officer Fitzgerald not to allow any dancing. Not being allowed to dance in the grove, the picnickers embarked on the Clifford at 3 o'clock and sailed around the harbor, where they danced to their hearts' content.

Shipping.

Arrived—Sept. 18, schooner Cora Green, Capt. Gray, from New York with 390 tons coal for C. Patch.

Sept. 21, schooner Lizzie May, Capt. Rice, from Calais with 50,000 feet lumber for B. Johnson.

MILTON.

Mrs. N. C. Buck has returned from a two months' visit to Maine.

Ex-Selectman Albert Brackett is very sick at his home on Granite avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Tappan Eagan are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a daughter.

Leonard Elden's new house on Washington street is nearly completed.

A fire in the chimney of McDonnell's house on Scotch hill, called out the department Thursday afternoon.

It is rumored that work on the new engine house at East Milton, near the depot, will be commenced next week.

Mr. J. A. Woodworth, of Wollaston, will conduct the Gospel meeting at Washington hall, East Milton, Sunday at 3.30 o'clock. All cordially invited.

Important Changes.

The Double Service of the Fall River Line will be discontinued after this week; the Pilgrim and Providence will remain in commission. Commencing September 27th Pullman vestibuled trains connecting with steamers at Fall River in eighty minutes will leave Park Square Station, Boston, at 6 P. M. week days, 7 P. M. Sundays.

A general reduction of fares via this route will go into effect on the 1st of October.

An unknown man believed to be a tramp was killed on the Old Colony at Randolph on Wednesday.

WOLLASTON.

Mr. J. G. Witham is to occupy the W. S. Badger house on Winthrop avenue, Wollaston. Mr. Badger is soon to remove to Boston.

A very successful sociable was held in the Methodist church, Wollaston, on Wednesday evening. Supper was served in the vestry from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The entertainment consisted of a recitation by Miss Grace Durgin; a song by Misses Grace and Helen Johnson; a reading by Mrs. Freeman and congregational singing. Twenty-three mite boxes were opened, the amounts being called off and placed on the black-board as fast as the contents were counted. A certain "slang box" contained $2.56. The whole amount realized was $33.39 which goes to help swell the Missionary collection. "Bee hives" are soon to be given out for the same object.

Rev. C. H. Talmage of the Baker Memorial church, Boston, will exchange pulpits next Sunday morning with Rev. Luther Freeman of Wollaston. Service at 10.45 o'clock. Praise service at 7 P. M., followed by sermon. All seats free. Every one invited.

Several delegates from Wollaston will attend the Epworth League convention to be held in Portland, Sept. 30, and Oct. 1. Rev. Hugh Price Hughes of London, who is to speak in the People's church, Boston, next Tuesday evening, will address the convention.

The Wollaston Unitarians enjoyed their first sociable of the season on Thursday evening. After the supper, which was served from six to eight o'clock, Miss Etta Key and E. W. Arnold entertained the company with solos.

On Sunday morning at 10.45 the Rev. W. S. Key will occupy the pulpit of the Wollaston Unitarian church, and in the evening at 7.30 the Rev. William R. Lord of Harrison Square will preach in the same church.

There will be a vesper service at the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday, Sept. 27, at 7.30 P. M. Rev. W. R. Lord of Dorchester, formerly of Wollaston, will preach.

The Rev. W. S. Key has been appointed New England editor and manager of the high class weekly illustrated scientific journal Electricity, which is published in Chicago. Mr. Key's office is in the Hathaway building, Boston.

There will be a concert given in the Wollaston Unitarian church on Wednesday evening, Oct. 7, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the purchasing of a pipe organ. Among the distinguished talent who will participate are Mr. C. N. Allen, Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen and Miss Georgia Pray.

Mr. Horace A. Pinkham's condition shows a marked improvement. He is still at the City Hospital, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Harrington of Wollaston have returned from Middleton, N. H., where they have been passing the summer.

George Thomas has received a check of $40 from the P. F. Y. B. O., in payment of two weeks' sick benefit.

Mrs. Bell, of the Lilhatansu Quartet, has been visiting Quincy a few days, the guest of Mrs. H. W. Lull.—Milford Journal.

A runaway horse, owned by Mr. William H. Smythe, caused considerable excitement at Wollaston, Tuesday evening. There was no damage done outside of smashing up a new buggy.

There has been such a large number of applications for tickets received for the young people's course of entertainments that those who are entitled to the tickets and have not already applied, are requested to do so immediately, as the number is limited. No tickets will be issued until October 7th.

The famous Quincy mansion, is to be sold. This handsome structure contains 26 rooms, and was built at a cost of $28,000.

Warrants have been received by the Wollaston Lodge, K. of H., to pay $2,000 Samuel B. McMasters.

It is a wonderful sight to see the thousands upon thousands of swallows as they hover over the great Wollaston swamps evenings, preparatory to their migration South.

Postmaster Bass in making up his noon mail, last Saturday, did not have a single piece of mail matter destined outside of the state. This is the first time that this has happened for over five years.

Landlord Merrill of the Wollaston Hotel wishes the PATRIOT to correct the report that that house is to change hands, as it is a false rumor.

Many Wollaston friends will learn with regret of the sorrow which has suddenly befallen Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Haines, who recently left the village and located at Melrose. Sunday, Sept. 13, their only daughter, Alice F., was taken ill with a slightly sore throat, which seemed well nigh better Tuesday morning. Tuesday night, however, the trouble rapidly developed into a quincy sore throat, and on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock the little sufferer died in great agony, aged 9 years, 25 days, and was interred in the Wyoming cemetery, Friday. Being the only girl, her painful death has come as a crushing blow to both parents.

ATLANTIC.

Miss Susie Hall left Tuesday afternoon for several weeks' visit in Cleveland, Ohio. Before returning home she will visit Chicago and other parts of the West.

Mrs. Jesse Rayner has so far recovered from her long illness as to be able to get out of doors on pleasant days.

At the Memorial Congregational church, preaching by the pastor at 10.45 and 6.45. Subject: morning, "Slander;" evening, "Story from Real Life."

Mrs. H. Norton who has been visiting with Mrs. John Ramsdell for the past few weeks has returned to her home in Vermont.

Mr. Nichols of Roxbury is to occupy the house of Miss Kate Nelson on Prospect street.

G. F. Burkhart and family, and John Boyd and family who have been summering at Squantum, have returned to their winter home in Boston.

The Atlantic chemical is undergoing repairs at Badger Bros.' machine shop.

First dance of the season of J. Q Adams Chemical No. 2, was held at Music hall, Friday evening.

Mr. Waterhouse and family, of Somerville, have moved into their new house on Atlantic street.

The work on Hancock street in Ward Six will now be pushed.

The frame of the new switch tower at Atlantic, is up and the building will probably be completed inside of a week.

Atlantic asks for the acceptance of a new street with the aristocratic name of Botolph street.

D. W. Osborne, the well known and popular meat cutter at Timberlake & Small, leaves next week for a visit to his old home in Nova Scotia.

Conference of Unitarian Churches.

The biennial conference of the Unitarian churches of America was held this week at Saratoga, N.Y. It was one of the largest gatherings of this body ever held. The city hall was not large enough to hold all who wish to attend the meetings. The reports presented show that the gain in new churches of the Unitarian faith is unprecedented and far ahead of the rate of increase of population. A number of people from Quincy attended the conference:—Rev. D. M. Wilson, Mrs. Thomas Whicher, Mrs. E. H. Dewson, Miss S. G. Field, Mrs. W. B. Rice, Mrs. J. O. Holden.

The Marvel won a leg in the Dorchester championship regatta of Thursday.

SOUTH QUINCY.

Sumner Pierce of South Quincy has gone to Concord, N. H., to work.

Mrs. Mary Nicholas and Miss McPherson of South Quincy, have returned from their trip to P. E. I.

Thomas Kemp sailed from New York last week on the steamer Alaska for Glasgow.

A teacher of the Adams school has the distinction of having three pairs of twins in her class.

Councilman Jones stated to the Council Monday that he was not a candidate for a renomination.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kelley of South Walnut street, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of twins. They are both boys.

W. H. H. Rideout, who has been sick for some time, is about once more.

Some Water street property owners think the proposed damages are too small.

Mr. Patrick A. Hayes of Mt. Pleasant has returned to Grand Seminary, Montreal.

The Water street hearing on the widening to forty-five feet will probably be more largely attended than was the one on forty. The abuttors have now some idea of the amount of the damages which will be awarded.

Ward Three will vote within it own ward at the State election for the first time since Quincy became a city. The Baxter building, formerly occupied by Frank Curtis, at the corner of Franklin and Pearl street, has been secured and will make a much more desirable polling place than the Hose house.

Mrs. Lizzie Chalmers and son arrived on Tuesday from a three months' visit to Glasgow.

Miss Edith Lawry arrived on Tuesday from a three months' visit to Birmingham, England.

The amount of damages which the abutters on Water street will receive in case the street is widened to forty feet, appeared in Tuesday's DAILY LEDGER.

Exciting Race.

An exciting running race took place Saturday evening, on Marsh street, between Jeff. Thayer and Dan. McCarthy, the distance being 100 yards.

Both men were in good condition having been rubbed down in bear's oil for the occasion, and a good race resulted.

Honored by His Classmates.

The class of '93 of Boston College tendered Mr. William J. Parker a reception at his home, No. 36 Water street, Sunday, prior his departure to Villanova College, Philadelphia, which occurred Monday. During the evening's entertainment Mr. James J. Brick, in behalf of the class of '93, presented Mr. Parker with a handsome solid silver, gold lined, shaving set. The young gentleman was completely taken back and for a while was unable to respond, but after gathering himself together he made a very neat speech in which he thanked the class for their thoughtfulness and assured them that the memory of this pleasant surprise would not soon be forgotten. An elaborate collation was served during the evening, after which the young men enjoyed themselves in singing, and when they departed for their homes they unanimously wished Mr. Parker a bon voyage and a successful career at Villanova.

Wedderburn--McPherson.

A very happy and enjoyable party gathered at Doble's hall Thursday night, the occasion being the uniting in marriage of Mr. John Wedderburn to Miss Maggie McPherson by the Rev. John Ramsay of the Scotch Presbyterian church. The bride was becomingly attired in white cashmere and orange blossoms, while the bridesmaid, Miss Mary McDonald, was dressed very becomingly in pink. The marriage presents were many and costly. The happy couple will reside at their new residence on Quincy street.

CARPET BARGAINS.

About December 1st we shall move into our new store on Washington street, just opposite Boylston, and so are determined to sell all of our merchandise before leaving our present building. This will necessitate in many lines of goods the entire sacrifice of profit, and in some instances the selling price will be less than the cost of manufacture.

Not to specify in detail, our entire stock has been marked down to extremely low prices, and beyond this we shall offer on Monday of each week a special line of bargains.

For the coming week we have set out a generous assortment of Wilton Carpets.

ENGLISH WILTONS,
$2.25.
Marked down from $3.25 per yard.
LOWELL AND BIGELOW WILTONS,
$1.75, $2.00 & $2.25,
Marked down from $2.75 and $3.00.

The above are all standard and reliable goods, and this offering affords a rare opportunity to purchase a parlor carpet at just about the price of the best Brussels. The intrinsic value of this bargain is apparent to every one.

Plum Roll

BY MRS. S. T. RORER,

Principal Philadelphia Cooking School.

Add one teaspoonful of Cleveland's baking powder and a half teaspoonful of salt to one pint of sifted flour. Sift again. Rub in one tablespoonful of butter, add sufficient milk to make a soft dough. Roll cut, sprinkle with one cup of chopped raisins and a half cup of chopped citron. Dust with cinnamon, roll up and steam for thirty minutes. Serve warm with hard sauce.

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

The most healthful leaven is carbonic acid gas from pure cream of tartar and soda. It is the only leavening power of Cleveland's Baking Powder. That is why Cleveland's is perfectly wholesome, leavens most and leavens best.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council held a regular meeting Monday evening. Eighteen members answered to the roll call but two others soon came in, and the only absentees were Councilmen Bryant and Morton.

Traverse Jurors Drawn.

Elisha Hobart, Thomas J. Lamb, and Enoch E. Hall were drawn as traverse jurors for the Superior Court which sits at Dedham the first Monday in October.

Amendment to Ordinance.

A communication from Mayor Fairbanks recommended a change in Section 11 of the ordinance concerning streets by substituting "in or on" in place of "across," so that it shall read:

SECTION 11. No person shall stop with any team or carriage in or on any street in this city, in such a manner as to hinder or obstruct the travel over such street, nor at the side of, or so near to another team as to obstruct public travel.

The change was made as requested.

The Hour of Meeting.

The amendment proposed at the last meeting to change the hour of meeting from 7.45 to 7.50 P. M. came up for action, when upon motion of Councilman Gray it was laid on the table.

License Granted.

Councilman Little presented the petition of the St. Mary's C. T. A. Society for a license to give an entertainment. Granted.

Botolph Street.

The Committee on Streets recommended that Botolph street in Ward Six be accepted, and reported an order for a public hearing to be given the second Monday in October. Adopted.

Water Street Widening.

The Committee on Streets reported, as instructed, an order laying out Water street forty feet wide and the taking of the necessary land, assessing damages, etc.

Councilman Jones believed it a mistake to widen to only forty feet, and moved that the whole matter be recommitted to the Committee on Streets that a hearing might be given on widening to forty-five feet. Washington street was from 40 to 100 feet, yet barely wide enough. It was suggested to put the street railway in the centre of Water street, yet there was hardly room with street forty-five feet. No street where there is a railway should be less than forty-five feet. In the award of damages, the betterment to the estate had been taken into consideration. This Council should widen the street to forty-five feet and leave it for future Councils to pave if they saw fit. The extra cost of the land damages to make the street forty-five feet would be about $3000, and the grading of the extra five feet might cost $500. The town fathers had years ago laid out Copeland street forty-five feet, and it looked niggardly of the City Council to make Water street but forty feet. Wards Three and Four were growing. The Street Railway might soon require an additional track on the street.

Councilman Gray wanted to hear from others of the committee as to the damages. Engineer Whitman had said the cost in damages would be four times as large for 45 feet as for 40 feet. If laid out 40 feet he believed the Council would order the street paved.

Councilman Fallon thought it foolish to quibble over the small cost of the extra width. He had talked with many, and knew some who would rather take the money out of their pockets than to have the street but 40 feet. Sixty feet was none too wide. The traffic on this street was immense.

Councilman Moxon thought this was not the time to discuss what the width should be. The Council would be foolish not to widen to 45 feet if the extra cost was but $3,500. He was willing the committee should have another hearing.

Councilman Jones said his personal estimate of the damages was less than $3000. He thought many lost sight of the betterments to the estates, which should be considered.

Councilman Warner wanted the whole matter referred back to the committee with instructions to report an order for forty-five feet.

Councilman Sherman desired to hear from the Commissioner of Public Works as to amount of damages.

Commissioner Ewell said he had not considered damages.

Councilman Sherman would favor the wider street if it would cost but $3500 additional, but he had some doubts as to the estimate. He disapproved hurrying the order through this evening.

Councilman Roberts wished to hear from other members of the Committee on Streets.

Councilman Moxon moved to lay the order reported by the committee on the table.

Councilman Jones thought that would be all right.

Councilman Little opposed believing if it was laid on the table there would be nothing to refer.

Councilman Warner also opposed.

Councilman Holden went into the committee opposed to widening to forty-five feet. That was when it was proposed to pave. If the paving was to be laid over another year and the extra width would cost but $4,000, he favored the wider street.

Councilman Gray thought if the damage for widening seven feet was $5000, that $3000 was a very small estimate for the additional five feet.

Councilman Jones said the forty-five foot street would require the moving of but two more houses than the forty foot street.

Councilman Sherman asked if betterment could be assessed and collected. He did not think the betterment act had been accepted.

Councilman Jones said the Mayor had obtained an opinion from the City Solicitor that they could.

Voted to lay the order on the table.

Councilman Jones then offered an order for a hearing to be given on the second Monday of October, on laying out Water street 45 feet wide. He desired a two-thirds vote on this order now, that the sense of the Council might be obtained.

Councilmen Bass and Gray said they would vote that the hearing be given, but would not bind themselves to vote finally in favor of the 45 foot width unless it could be done for the figures stated.

Councilman Moxon hoped Councilman Jones would not jeopardize the order by insisting on a rising vote now, and the latter withdrew his request, and the order for a hearing passed.

Adjournment Fixed

After several different suggestions as to when the next meeting should be held, it was finally voted to adjourn to Thursday evening, Oct. 1.

A One Year Loan.

The Committee on Finance reported an order to appropriate $200 for Teal pond, $125 for bridge assessment, $50 for pay of John W. Hall as engineer in 1888-89, $162 for payment of bill for transporting school children from Squantum, and $297.46 for unpaid bills of 1890; the total of $834.46 to be borrowed on a one year loan. Ordered to second reading.

State Aid.

The application of Albert Hayden for State Aid, was referred to the Committee on State Aid.

The Committee on State Aid recommended an increase for Theodore W. Fowle, $6 per month to William Simonds, $4 per month to Amelia Walsh. Adopted.

Houghs Neck Fire Alarm Box.

The Committee on Fire Department reported inexpedient to legislate on the location of a fire alarm box at Houghs Neck. Accepted.

Election Returns.

Councilman Duffield presented an order, that the Committee on Elections meet next Monday evening to receive the election returns. Adopted.

To Pave Hancock Street.

Councilman Holden presented an order to pave Hancock street between Washington street and Dimmock street, and that $6000 be borrowed for the purpose on notes of one, two and three years.

Councilman Sherman thought Hancock street had received enough attention.

Councilman Holden said it was not that portion in Ward One. His constituents were urging him to secure improvements for Ward One, which pays one-third of taxes. The location of the railroad on this street was dangerous, and the street was in a wretched condition.

Councilman Jones favored paving our streets rather that Macadamizing, believing appropriations for the latter were money thrown away. All the principal streets should be paved.

Councilman Fallon was glad to see these gentlemen now in favor of paving; it was the only way to obtain the value for the money expended.

Councilman Jones said he had always favored paving but had been out voted.

Councilman Little moved to lay order on table. Ward One may pay one-third of the taxes, but the burden was harder on the property holders in the other wards.

Councilman Warner believed Hancock street should lay over.

Voted 9 to 7 not to lay on table.

Voted to refer to Committee on Streets.

Polling Places.

An order locating the polling places for the State election was introduced and adopted. The only change from the usual places was in Ward Two, where Graham's building was selected.

Permission Given.

The order granting Prout Bros. permission to run wire guy across Water street was passed to be ordained, and at 10.20 the Council adjourned.

Mitchell Nominated.

Hon. Charles H. Porter of Quincy was chairman of the Republican Councillor convention held in Boston Tuesday, and John A. Abbott secretary. Col. Edwin V. Mitchell was declared the nominee and his nomination made unanimous.

The following district committee was selected: Charles H. Porter, Edward Mott, at large; R. C. Brown, 1st Bristol; Thomas Murphy, 2d Norfolk; F. A. Hobart, 1st Norfolk; Herbert Fuller, 8th Suffolk; Edward H. Wise, 9th Suffolk.

Congregational Conference

The sixty-fifth semi-annual meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Congregational Churches will be held with the Evangelical Church in this city, Tuesday, Sept. 29, from 9.15 A. M. to 4 P. M. The order of services:

9.15 A. M.—Devotional services, led by Rev. Daniel Evans, of East Weymouth.

9.45 A. M.—Organization and general business.

10.15 A. M.—Discussion, topic: "The Care of Young Converts by the Church." Rev. J. C. Labaree, of Randolph.

11.00 A. M.—Discussion, topic: "The Duty of the Church in Sustaining the Sunday Evening Service." Rev. Frederick A. Balcolm, of Rockland.

2.00 P. M.—Discussion, topic: "Foreign Missions." Rev. George H. Gutterson, of India.

3.15 P. M.—Collection for Home Missions. Communion.

Republican Club.

A number of the Republicans interested in the formation of a Republican club met last week in the headquarters over the Savings Bank and perfected the organization.

John F. Merrill acted as chairman and Warren H. Rideout as secretary. The first business of the meeting was to select a name and the Quincy Republican League club was the one finally selected.

The following were then elected as officers of the club:

President,—John Shaw.
Vice Presidents,—Ward One, Charles A. Howland; Ward Two, Edward W. Newcomb; Ward Three, H. L. Kincade; Ward Four, Thomas F. Burke; Ward Five, George A. Nichols; Ward Six, Frank E. Badger.
Secretaries,—Warren H. Rideout, Evart W. Adams.
Executive Committees,—James Thompson, Charles L. Hammond, J. C. Morse, James S. Whiting, Roger H. Wilde.

The club then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

The annual meeting of the Norfolk County Division, G. A. R., will be held at the Grand Army headquarters, Hyde Park, Monday evening, Oct. 5.

—Jeremiah T. Richmond has been elected eminent commander of Old Colony Commandery, Knight Templars of Abington.

Largest selection Silverware and Clocks for Wedding presents. Williams, West Quincy.

City Matters.

There now seems to be some prospect that Hancock street north of the church will be paved, Councilman Holden having introduced an order to that effect Monday. This is the principal street in the city and should be put in decent condition. Ward One has been crowded to the wall ever since Quincy has been a city, it seems as if the council should pass this order. It was in very poor taste for some of the South and West Quincy councilmen to so strenuously fight this order, considering the amount of money that is and has been appropriated for those two wards.

The city has discovered that there is a difference between the phrase, "no person shall stop with any team or carriage across any street in this city," etc, and the phrase, "no person shall stop with any team in or on any street in this city in such a manner as to hinder public travel." This knotty question was brought up in the police court the other day and it was discovered that this section of the city ordinance concerning streets and public grounds, had no legal meaning as it originally read, and the party who violated the ordinance was consequently discharged. Mayor Fairbanks called the attention of the city council to the defect, when it was immediately corrected.

As was to be expected, the report of the Committee on Streets on Water street caused a long debate. The question was on recommiting the report, the committee having reported as instructed in favor of widening the street to a width of forty feet. Councilman Jones, the chairman of the committee, fought hard for the widening of the street to forty-five feet, instead of forty. The land damage if the street is widened to forty feet will be $7600, but if the width is increased five feet more the damages will amount to several thousand dollars additional,—some authorities placing this amount as high as $10,000 or $12,000.

Many do not yet know that the proposed sewerage system does not provide for surface water and drainage, but such is the fact. There seems to be general lack of knowledge on this important question and a light vote is predicted for next Monday. A majority vote is all that is required to accept the act.

Brockton Fair.

The Brockton Fair management have engaged some of the best attractions ever shown on a race track, and those who attend are sure of being satisfied with the day's trip. The more important features will be Miss Peek's world renowned running combination, with fast pacers "Silver Tail" and "You Bet," with records of 2.05¾ and 2.08, Roman standing races and trick horses; Madam Marantette's famous saddle horse "Woodlawn" Five-horse Tandem Hurdle Jumpers, and High Jumper "Filemaker;" and Prof. Jenison, the Balloonist and Parachute Jumper. Quincy Gave the Corner Stone.

With all the pomp and splendor attending such an occasion, Archbishop Williams clad in the full robes of his office, surrounded by crowds of people both lay and ecclesiastical, laid the cornerstone of the St. Joseph's church of Needham to rest in mother earth on Sunday. A little after 3 o'clock the Archbishop accompanied by the Rev. T. J. Danahy and thirty other priests drove over from Newton in hacks, and just at 3.30 the long procession marched slowly to the place where the ceremonies were to be held.

After the "Veni Creator" had been sung the Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan of South Boston ascended the temporary pulpit and for over an hour he preached an eloquent sermon, during which he continually referred to Fr. Danahy whose unlimited zeal and interest in his parishioners had succeeded in starting the first Catholic church in Needham, an event which marks a new epoch in the history of that town.

At the conclusion of the sermon the ceremony of laying the stone was begun. A box hermetically sealed, containing copies of the Pilot, the Newton local press and rare coins was placed in the stone, and amid the intonation of the clergy and the chanting of the choir the corner stone of the first Catholic church of Needham was laid.

The fact that the Rev. T. J. Danahy, formerly of this city is the pastor of the new church, served to attract many people from Quincy, and many West Quincy and Atlantic people also testified to the love and esteem in which the reverend pastor is held. The corner stone was the gift of McDonnell Bros. of this city.

The Hingham Fair.

The Hingham Cattle Show which will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday, offers some extra attractions this year cricket, ministrels, speeches, base ball, pony races, music, etc. Excursion rates on the Old Colony.

City of Quincy Enjoined.

The supreme judicial court has extended its powerful arm and stayed an act that the city of Quincy thought it had a perfect right to do. A temporary injunction was issued Sept. 18 by Mr. Justice Morton, upon the petition of Mr. P. J. Cunniff, who claimed that the city, in widening one of its streets, was about to cause damage to his property.

At the same time that the temporary injunction was issued, Mr. Justice Morton issued a notice to the city authorities ordering them to appear in court on Tuesday, Sept. 22, and show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent. The city commenced to widen the street which runs by Mr. Cunniff's house in 1889, in accordance with the plans of the county commissioners. The authorities claimed that Mr. Cunniff's house projected two feet over his line. Last year the fence in front of the house was torn down to make room for the road, and, as the work progressed this year, the authorities came to the conclusion that the front of the house would have to follow the fence.

Notice was accordingly served on Mr. Cunniff a few days ago, but, instead of altering his habitation or moving it, he sought the advice of a lawyer, who decided to appeal to the supreme court.—Herald.

Mr. Cunniff petitioned the City Council at its last meeting to be allowed compensation for damages to his estate, which is on Hancock street in Ward Six. The petition took the usual course, being referred to the Committee on Claims.

It is a very peculiar case. Mr. Cunniff owns only half of the estate and this is the front half, a line parallel with the street divides the house and land. Should Mr. Cunniff move his house back it will be onto the other man's land. The city's claim is believed to be good. The street is not being laid out wider, but is being built wider to the lines laid out many years ago. If it has no right to the land occupied by Cunniff, it has not to the strip of land that it has already taken from several estates.

Mayor Fairbanks entered an appearance and the case will be heard later.

For the Patriot.

Explanatory.

Owing to the fact that so many of our public spirited citizens offered a dipper and chain to the fountain a mistake made in Saturday's PATRIOT is corrected here.

Mr. John Federhen, who had already given his subscription to the treasurer, sent her a generous offer to purchase dippers and chain, but the same day Mr. Gavin, who had charge of the plumbing, had accepted the kind offer of chain and dippers from Mr. Weeden, who is furnishing tubes etc., for the fountain. Therefore, Mr. Federhen's as well as Mr. Corthell's pleasant note and offer to give the chain and dippers had to be taken in spirit only; but both had already given their subscription money, so we sincerely thank all these gentlemen for the ready response to the plea for a dipper, and the treasurer will remind them that the equivalent, if received, will do as much good now as more dippers.

Win the First Match.

A foot ball match was played at Merry Mount park last Saturday between the Newton Foot Ball Club and the Quincy Foot Ball Club. Newton won the toss and Quincy kicked off against a strong sun. They immediately began to press and they had most of the play during the first half, but were several times unlucky in not scoring. Half time sounded with the score Quincy, 1; Newton, 0. When the game continued Quincy again began to press, and after eight minutes in the second half Newton disagreed with one of the referee's decisions and immediately left the field. Quincy took the ball, kicked off the foul and put it through the goal, the game thus ending in Quincy's favor by two goals to none. The teams were:

Quincy.	Position.	Newton.
J. Thompson,	Goal	Joe Fontannay
J. B. Brown,	Right Back	James Fanan
Richard Richards,	Left Back	R. Greeves
John Smith,	Right Half Back	W. Joy

Certificates of Nomination.

If names of candidaties for office, to be voted for at the November election, are to go upon the ballot which the State will furnish, certificates of nomination or nomination papers must be filed with Secretary of State Olin early in October. Certificates of nomination for State offices must be filed by 5 P. M. Oct. 5, and nomination papers for such offices by 5 P. M., Oct. 12. The latter are used only in the case of independent candidacies or where a party which did not poll three per cent. of the vote last year has nominated a a ticket, and they must contain the names of at least 1000 registered voters.

For county and district offices, the filing dates are Oct. 15 for certificates of nomination and Oct. 16 for nomination papers. One name for each 1000 votes cast in the district at the last election is required as an endorsement when the nomination is made n the latter form, and in no case must the number of qualified indorsers fall below fifty. The Prohibitionists have filed a certificate for their State nominees, for they are a three per cent. party. The People's and Socialist Labor parties will have to nominate their candidates by obtaining 1000 signatures each.

Under the old plan the Secretary of State was not required by law to furnish blanks for use in this way, but he did it in order to secure uniformity. Now he is required to furnish them on application. Certificates of nomination for all offices but of Representative have been sent to the State Committees and those organizations will distribute them among the loca bodies. The blank cirtificates of nomination for Representatives are sent, under the law, to City and Town Clerks, from whom officers of conventions or caucuses can obtain them. Nomination papers are furnished only on application at the State House.

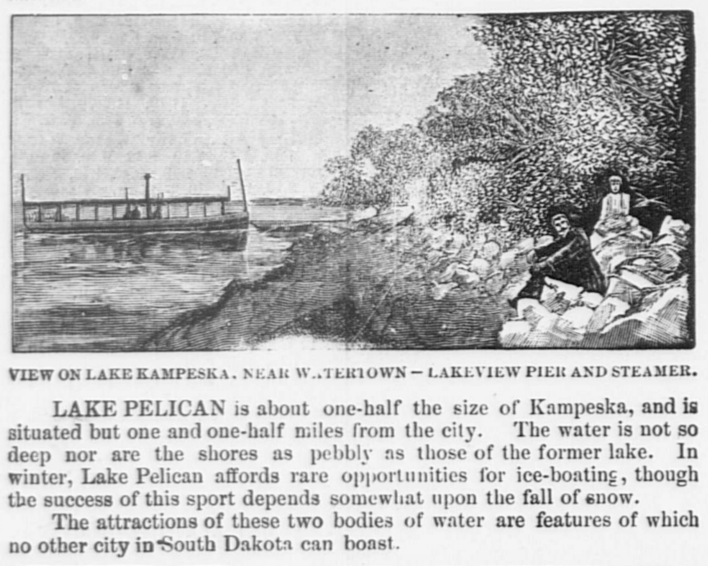
WATERTOWN, SOUTH DAKOTA.

In previous advertisements we have said little of what nature has done in providing Watertown with pleasant and picturesque surroundings; it is, however, a magnificent setting for the two jewels—Lakes Kampeska and Pelican—which the Creator has placed in this prairie crown.

LAKE KAMPESKA is a body of pure spring water, covering an area of eighteen square miles, mostly surrounded by high embankments. A clean, gravelly beach from twenty to thirty feet in width skirts the entire lake, except where broken in a few places by large boulders extending to the water's edge. It is fed by numerous large springs, insuring a continuous and inexhaustible supply of

THE PUREST DRINKING WATER IN THE WORLD.

The bottom, like the shores, is of sand and gravel, the water clear and cool. Fish abound in great quantities, affording plenty of sport for those who enjoy angling. Situated three and one-half miles west of Watertown, it is the source of water supply, and thus is Watertown doubly fortunate, having so lovely a pleasure resort at her very door, and such an inexhaustible supply of pure water for domestic purposes. Being connected with the city by a motor line, safe and rapid transit is afforded.



VIEW ON LAKE KAMPESKA, NEAR WATERTOWN—LAKEVIEW PIER AND STEAMER.

LAKE PELICAN is about one-half the size of Kampeska, and is situated but one and one-half miles from the city. The water is not so deep nor are the shores as pebbly as those of the former lake. In winter, Lake Pelican affords rare opportunities for ice-boating, though the success of this sport depends somewhat upon the fall of snow.

The attractions of these two bodies of water are features of which no other city in South Dakota can boast.

In a future issue we shall speak particularly of the unparalleled advantages of Watertown as a manufacturing site and give, from official sources, statistics of the comparative profit of manufacturing in the East and West.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 26, 1891.

Sunset in the Fog.

The cold, gray fog of the wintry day
  Held sea and land in thrall;
Silent the vessels at anchor lay;
  A spell was over all.
The narrow lines of each vessel bound
  The limit of their sphere;
Beyond was naught but a world of sound—
  A world of doubt and fear.

From the yards the sails bedraggled hung,
  Bordered by drops of dew;
Feathery mists from the halyards flung,
  Like ghostly pennons flew;
While the mast-head pierced the misty gray.
  And vanished at the spars,
The ratlines seen but a step away
  Were narrow prison bars.

But sudden a golden glamour stole,
  As through a tiny seam,
It spread till the glory lit the whole,
  And lighted beam to beam
No shadow fell from the ray of light;
  The wind and sea were still;
'Twas then that the red sun sank from sight
  Behind the distant hill.

We saw it not as the golden ray
  Gave place to tints of rose;
And the mists, no longer cold and gray,
  About us seemed to close.
The closer grew as the rose-light died,
  The mists took on their frown,
And the gloom that came from either side
  Told that the sun was down.

Household Receipts.

PRESERVED PEARS. Small pears are better for preserving than the large ones. Pare them and put one pound of sugar to the same quantity of pears; make a syrup with a little water; leave the stems on, and stick a clove in the blossom end of each. Stew them until perfectly transparent; skim off the scum; take out the pears, and let the syrup boil until clear and thick. Put in jars and seal them.

QUINCE JELLY. Slice the quinces without either paring or coring; put them into a preserving-kettle, and just cover with water; put over the fire and boil until soft; remove from the stove, and strain off the liquor; to every gallon, add four pounds of white sugar, and boil very fast until it becomes a stiff jelly.

QUINCE MARMALADE. Take the quinces you have boiled for jelly and mash them with a spoon; to a pound of quinces take a pound of sugar; boil them together until they are well softened; then strain through a coarse sieve, and put up in small jars.

QUINCES AND SWEET APPLES are excellent preserved together. Have as many sweet apples pared, cored and quartered as will equal the weight of the quince. When the quince is boiled enough take it out and put in the apple allowing it to cook slowly until red and clear, which may take nearly two hours. Then put the apple and quince into the jars in layers. The flavor of the quince will penetrate the apple. Use no more sugar than equals the weight of the quince.

SUMMER APPLE PIE. Grate six good apples, add a cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, spice to taste. Bake with upper and under crust.

TOMATO KETCHUP. Stew and strain one peck of ripe tomatoes, add one tablespoonful of ground cloves, allspice, cinnamon, nutmeg, and one half of a tablespoonful of black pepper, one half teaspoonful of cayenne, a pint and a half of cider vinegar, two tablespoonsful of salt. A large onion boiled with it gives a nice flavor. Boil until thick enough and then bottle and seal.

CHILI SAUCE. Twelve ripe tomatoes, four green peppers, two good sized onions, two tablespoonsful of salt, two of sugar and four cups of vinegar. Chop the peppers and onions fine, scald and pare the tomatoes, and boil all together one hour. Bottle and seal.

Anecdotes.

Dealer—"This picture represents David killing Goliath."

Customer—"But where's Goliath?"

Dealer—"He's on a separate picture. We give both of them for thirty-seven cents. You can't expect the whole business on a twenty-cent picture."

Fleichman—"Nein. Don'd sell 'em."

Jester—"Comedy? You mean the tragedy, don't you?"

Quester—"I don't see how you can call it a tragedy; there wasn't any killing in it."

Jester—"Wasn't, eh? Didn't the actors kill the play and murder the patience of the audience?"

FALL DRESS GOODS.

New dress goods are very rough, by reason of very large twills, Astrakhan weaves or bourette fleckings, the latter often bestrewn upon stripes, plaids or figures set at intervals or perhaps composing them. Very large plaids are seen again, but not so prominently as hitherto. Diagonal stripes are a special feature. Some traverse the entire breadth, others form single wide points meeting in the middle of the breadth and from such extremes, diminish in great variety to successive small points, while diagonal stripes of some width may show transverse bars within them.

Dresses in robe patterns showing ornamentation on the front breadth with lesser touches for sleeves and corsage, are heavily imported and the rough, large patterned goods will be set in front breadths. Princess outlines are most in favor for making up, with moderately high sleeves and quite long waists, but coats, either independent or of the same material as the dress, will remain in style and in answer to special inquiry it may be added that Clark's Mile End Cotton still retains the lead for strength, smoothness and elasticity and is the best substitute for sewing silk, especially as it comes in new colors.

NEW HATS

are still on the order of those worn in summer and still trimmed by long loops or other high garnitures standing upright at the back, with corresponding adornments in front. Those having wide front and side brims, present little novelty, but in smaller varieties, long, narrow contours give way to broader shapers that are sometimes almost circular. Vassar sailor hats are repeated in felt or velvet and not always trimmed on the left side only, since now and again, ribbon is quilled around with upright loops or wings at the back and front. Bonnets often show a return to conservative shapes, having a decided crown and are trimmed to a modest height in front.

BRILLIANT ORANGE

that is almost red, is a very prominent color and from thence, in lesser and purer tones, yellow will be conspicuous. Coming next or perhaps even in rivalry, is green, from dark to extremely light; there are bright yellowish browns, beige, tan or gray, with a proportion of heliotrope, old-rose, old blue and other blues, and coquelicot red. These various hues are combined with the utmost freedom and no contrasts are too audacious.

BLACK

is very much used and seen on by far the greater number of hats, gives effect of shading possible to nothing else. Jet with the same end in view, is extremely fashionable, most frequently in open patterns laid on material and in Princess of Wales tips, which will be popular; one of the three feathers is usually black, the other two, shadings of one color. In consequence, black and yellow will be the chosen contrast of the winter, appearing not only in millinery, but through the entire range of dress.

LUCY CARTER.

An Asker.

Mrs. Andrew Lang relates this diverting story: "In the days of my childhood a friend of my own was informed by a favorite house-maid that she wished to give warning, as she was going to be married. 'Indeed,' said the lady, 'and what is your future husband?' 'Please 'm he's an asker!' 'A what?' 'An asker.' 'I don't understand. What does he do?' 'Well 'm, he—he goes about the streets, and if he sees any one coming along that looks kind he—well, he just stops 'em and asks 'em to give him a trifle, and he makes quite a comfortable living that way!' 'Do you mean a beggar?' 'Well, 'm, some people do call it that; we call it asker.'"

PREVALENCE OF DEAFNESS. Dr. Francis Dowling, in a paper which he read at a recent meeting of the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine, stated that "between the ages of 10 and 40 at least one person in three is subject to partial deafness. The great majority of cases of impaired hearing are hereditary, and are largely owing to a too close consanguinity of the parents. Deafness is more prevalent among males than among females, owing to the fact that the male is more exposed to the vicissitudes of climate. There is much more deafness in America than in Europe, and this is due to a more general use of scientific instruments such as telephones, where one ear is used to the exclusion of the other.

A PARODY. The Old Colony Memorial gave a local poet space to touch up the Water Commissioners of Plymouth, for not allowing the citizens to use the garden hose during the dry weather:

"Sprinkle, sprinkle, little hose, how the wicked dust arose, up above the lawn so high, and the grass began to die. "The powers that be" their law repealed, the powers above wet down the field, and now the grass that once was dead, by the reviving shower is fed, refreshing spray from out thee goes, so sprinkle, sprinkle little hose."

The dates for the shooting of the various game birds and animals of this state are as follows: Partridge, Sept. 15 to Jan. 1; woodcock, Sept. 15 to Jan. 1; quail, Oct. 15 to Jan. 1; duck, Sept. 1 to April 15; plover, snipe and beach birds, July 15 to May 1; squirrels, hares and rabbits, Sept. 1 to March 1.

AN OLD RELIC. On an old oaken cupboard at Stratford, England, has been discovered an inscription stating that the article was made by Shakespeare. It is said that the cupboard originally came from an old house, now demolished, which had been occupied by Shakespeare's family. The inscription is in copper nails driven into the wood and runs thus: "I bought it. I sawed it. I nailed it and I carved it. William Shakespeare."

RAILROAD SPEED. The record for speed by a railroad train was broken a few days ago, it is said, on the Bound Brook railroad, between Neshaminy Falls and Langhorne, Penn. Engine No. 206, drawing two ordinary coaches and a heavy private car of one of the officers, succeeded in running a mile in 39 4-5 seconds, five miles in 3 minutes 26 3-5 seconds, and ten miles in 7 minutes 12 seconds.

PIES. In the United States there are eaten every day 2,250,000 pies, each week 16,750,000, each year 819,000,000, at a total cost of $164,000,000—an amount greater than the internal revenue, and more than enough to pay the interest on the national debt.

There is something about the cedar logs that are now being exhumed in Cape May county, N. J., and that are said to have been buried for more than 2,000 years, that imparts a soft and melodious tone to a violin, and the logs are being cut up for the making of such instruments.

There are two bearing apple trees in Indiana County, Pa. They were planted in 1792. One of them is ten feet in circumference.

South Dakota has the largest artesian well in the world. It shoots water 140 feet above the surface.

The Smithsonian Institution recently paid $1,500 for a single butterfly. The species has long been believed to be extinct. The one now in the Smithsonian was caught in the Sierras.

The first Union flag was unfurled on Jan. 1, 1776, over the camp at Cambridge, Mass. It had thirteen stripes of white and red, and retained the British cross in one corner.

A small worm is stripping the foliage from the hemlock trees in Pennsylvania, and the large number of interests of that state are threatened with destruction.

Boston Amusements.

Globe Theatre.

Boston theatre goers have been looking forward with great interest, as well as excitement, to the coming to the Globe Theatre of Mlle Rhea. Her engagement begins Monday, Sept. 28, continuing throughout the week. The play "Judith" was written especially for Mlle. Rhea, and is a modern society play in which she will appear as a young Parisian Jewess. Little Gracie Sherwood has a pleasing part in "Judith." The advance sale of tickets for the week is already large, the best seats being eagerly sought after.

Boston Theatre.

Good old Josh Whitcomb still continues to delight large numbers of people at the Boston Theatre. The old and the young are equally in love with the whole souled farmer of Swansey, N. H., and "The Old Homestead" is proving more popular every day. Large excursions come from nearly all parts of New England to see the play. Do not put off buying tickets until it is too late or you will miss seeing one of the best plays ever given in Boston.

Tremont Theatre.

Monday night, September 28, the comedian, Stuart Robson, comes to the Tremont Theatre and will find Boston heartily awaiting him. Mr. Robson will inaugurate his engagement here with a revival of Goldsmith's immortal comedy,—"She Stoops to Conquer." Despite the fact that this city is more familiar than any other in the country with this play, and holds a correspondingly great liking for it, next week's production is to be on a scale of magnificence and historical correctness, as regards costumes and scenic embellishments, never before attempted. Of all the old English plays this is probably the most perfect specimen. "Is Marriage a Failure?" and "The Henrietta," are also in preparation for this engagement.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"Dorothy's Dilemma" follows "The Senator" at the Hollis and it is announced that this is the only play in which Miss Coghlan will appear this season. Her engagement here is very brief, only one week, commencing Monday, Sept. 28. The plot is such that Miss Coghlan will be on the stage almost continuously and in one scene she will appear in uniform on horse back. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. Tickets now on sale.

Park Theatre.

Aunt Abigail still draws overflowing houses and the success of the "County Fair" at the Park Theatre is phenomenal. The play appeals strongly to lovers of pure, wholesome country life. Secure your seats early.

Boston Museum.

One of the surest signs of the great success of Guy Carleton's fascinating picture or colonial days, with its delightful comedy and soul-stirring climaxes, at the Boston Museum, is, that theatre parties come in nightly from all the outlying towns and give themselves up to its two hours and a half of continuous laughter and excitement. The fact that Wilson, Barron, Boniface, Davenport, Booth, Holt and Abbe, and Misses Clark, O'Leary and Campbell, all have strong parts, enables the audience of "Ye Earlie Trouble" to see the members of the famous Museum Company at their best. As the curtain rises at 7.45 and falls promptly at 10.30, ample time is given to catch trains for the suburbs, and at matinees the performance closes at 4.30.

World's Fair Notes.

Siam has decided to make an exhibit at Chicago, which shall eclipse the one it made at the Paris exposition, where it carried off the honors in the oriental section.

The publishers of Puck, the well known comic paper, have been granted space, 50 by 100 feet, for a building on the Exposition grounds, in which to show fully every detail of the process of editing and publishing a humorous paper.

Henry B. Worthington has offered to furnish the Exposition, free of charge, pumps with a capacity of 40,000,000 gallons of water a day.

The first cotton gin, made by Eli Whitney, will be exhibited at the Exposition by the New Orleans Machinery Company, which will also make an extensive exhibit of cotton gins, sugar mills and other machinery.

The owner of a brownstone quarry in Wisconsin has offered to the State commission for exhibition at the Fair, a solid monolith, larger than Cleopatra's needle in New York City. The obelisk, when completed, will weigh 400 tons and be the largest mass of brownstone ever quarried.

Half of It.

"What hymn did I understand you to say?" inquired the Sunday-school teacher of the young lady who presided at the melodeon, and who had just asked him to close the service, the superintendent being absent.

"Sing half of 246," she answered smiling at his nervousness and confusion.

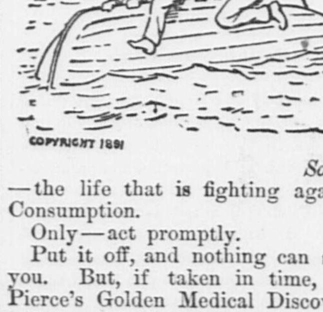
"We will now close by singing," he said, addressing the school—"by singing hymn 123."—Harper's Bazar.

A Chinese bank note of the Ming dynasty, about 1368, has been presented to the British Museum. It is three hundred years older than the first bank note issued in Europe.

Dr. J. Seudtner, after making a minute study of the effect of beer drinking on health, concludes that the prevalence of heart disease in certain quarters of the German Empire is directly traceable to the large beer consumption. Tuberculosis is laid to the same excess.

The new railroad up Pike's Peak is nine miles long. It ascends in a winding way to an altitude of 14,447 feet.

Another drop-a-penny-in-the-slot contrivance is reported from Paris. The cabs of that city have been fitted with small machines and the passenger places a ten-centime piece into the slot. In exchange he receives an insurance policy available for the time during which the cab has been hired.



Saved

—the life that is fighting against Consumption.

Only—act promptly.

Put it off, and nothing can save you. But, if taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will certainly cure.

It must be done through the blood—and the "Discovery" is the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder that's known to medical science. The scrofulous affection of the lungs that's called Consumption, and every form of Scrofula and blood-taints, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy. It's the only one that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

"We promise to cure your Catarrh, perfectly and permanently, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing—or we'll pay you $500." That's what the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say to every sufferer from Catarrh. And they mean it.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

The Duty of the Pulpit.

CONTINUED.

Undoubtedly the one difficult aspect in the treatment of the case is this political aspect. Let us consider it dispassionately and without partisan prejudice, if we may hope to reach so high a state. We are told by men who think themselves honest, that this whole question of temperance and of the liquor traffic should be kept out of politics. Very good, but we may as well be told that sin should be kept out of the world. The disagreeable fact is that it is in the world. The equally restless fact is that the liquor traffic is in politics, and it is there by its own volition. It is common to charge its presence in politics upon temperance reformers, but this is a mistake. The liquor oligarchy itself put this question into our politics. It did this most naturally and, considering its own interests only, most wisely.

Seeing that political parties naturally want votes, and knowing that it had votes by the thousand at its command, the liquor oligarchy demanded of political managers protection and legalization for its traffic, and thus far it has largely succeeded in securing its demands. And since the liquor men demand and obtain protection for their business, what is more natural or more reasonable than that good men should demand that the defenses and protection of the law should cease? And as the liquor forces are united in their demands, what is more natural or reasonable or necessary than that patriotic men of every name, and especially Christian men, irrespective of party, should unite in demanding the legal overthrow of this destroyer of their homes and enemy of the public good?

THE RUBBER TRUST. The rubber trust organized a year ago has failed disastrously to those who attempted to increase the price of this modern necessity. New supplies came in from unexpected sources. As soon as prices began to rise, manufacturers stopped purchasing until the new stock broke the market. It is increasingly difficult under present trade conditions to corner anything that has a widely diversified source of supply. Every year it becomes easier to supplement a scarcity, artificial or otherwise, in one locality with the abundance of another.

Catholic Bibles.

The clergy of the Roman Catholic Church brought out in 1582, at Rheims, an English translation of the New Testament, and in 1610, at Douai, an English version of the Old Testament, now known as "The Douai Bible," says Chambers Journal. Like Wycliff's, these were transtations of a translation, taken from the Latin Vulgate. The Douai Bible abounds in curious hybrid words which one never meets with anywhere else, but quite a large number of the readings and renderings of the Douai Bible were adopted by the revisers in 1881. They did not, however, adopt the variation of the "treacle" rendering which the Douai revisers took "Is there no reason in Galaad?"

The Catholic version of the Bible now most commonly used in this country is one made by Dr. Challoner, in 1749 and 1750, of the Rheims New Testament and the Douai Old Testament. A revision of both was also made in 1783 by the Rev. Bernard MacMahon, with the approbation of Archbishop Troy of Dublin, and is known as "Troy's Bible."

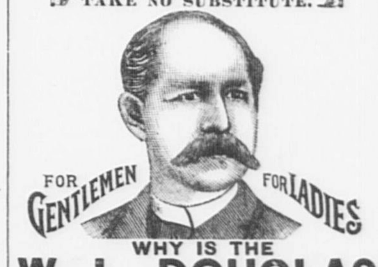
☞ TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE. ☜



WHY IS THE

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

$2.25 and $2.00 Workingman's shoes are very strong and durable. Those who have given them a trial will wear no other make.

Boys' $2.00 and $1.75 school shoes are worn by the boys everywhere; they sell on their merits, as the increasing sales show.

Ladies $3.00 Hand-sewed shoe, best Dongola, very stylish; equals French imported shoes costing from $4.00 to $6.00.

Ladies' 2.50, $2.00 and $1.75 shoe for Misses are the best fine Dongola. Stylish and durable.

Caution.—See that W. L. Douglas' name and price are stamped on the bottom of each shoe.
